"Section 13. Private property shall not be taken, destroyed or damaged for public use, without just compensation therefor first paid or secured, and such private property may be taken, destroyed or damaged for the purpose of private as well as public drainage upon just compensation therefor being first paid or secured."

THE PURPOSE of the proposed amendment is to permit the taking of private lands for the purpose of drainage purposes where the drain or ditch will be of no public benefit, but on the contrary will only benefit the land or lands of the person or persons constructing the drainage ditch.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 7.

By Chapter 385, Laws 1915, the legislature proposed for adoption by the electors, an amendment of Section One (1) of Article Four (4) of the Constitution.

"Section 1. TWO HOUSES — SESSIONS — The legislature shall consist of the senate and house of representatives, which shall meet biennially at the seat of government of the state, at such time as shall be prescribed by law, but no session shall exceed the term of ninety legislative days, and no new bill shall be introduced in either branch except on the written request of the governor, during the last twenty days of such session, except the attention of the legislature shall be called to some important matter of general interest by a special message from the governor."

If the amendment is adopted, the section will then read as follows:

Sec. 1. TWO HOUSES—SESSIONS. — The legislature shall consist of the senate and house of representatives, which shall meet biennially at the seat of government of the state, at such time as shall be prescribed by law, but no session shall exceed the term of ninety (90) legislative days, and no bill shall be introduced in either branch, except on the written request of the governor, during the last twenty days of such session, except the attention of the legislature shall be called to some important matter of general interest by a special message from the governor; but the people reserve to themselves direct power as follows:

(a) CONSTITUTIONAL INITIATIVE.—When at any time prior to the commencement of any session of the legislature, there shall have been filed with the secretary of state a petition proposing an amendment to the constitution, signed by two per centum of the electors of the state, the secretary of state shall transmit the same to the legislature not later than ten (10) days after the commencement of the session. If the amendment so proposed be not submitted to the electors by the legislature at such session, or if it be submitted in an amended form, then, upon a further petition or petitions, each signed by eight per centum of the electors of the state, filed with the secretary of state within six months after the adjournment of the legislature, the amendment proposed in the first petition, or one or more amended forms thereof, shall be submitted to the electors for their approval or rejection at the next general or special state-wide election occurring not less than ninety days after the filing of any such further petition. Any amendment proposed by initiative petition and, in its original or in an amended form, submitted to the electors by the legislature or by a further petition, shall become a part of the constitution, if approved by a majority of the electors voting at such election, or by four-sevenths of the electors voting on the proposed amendment; provided, not less than three-sevenths of the electors voting at said election voted for the proposed amendment. This section shall be construed as a means in addition to Section 1, Article 14, of the state constitution, for amending the same.

(b) STATUTORY INITIATIVE. —When at any time prior to the commencement of any session of the legislature there shall have been filed with the secretary of state, a petition proposing a law, signed by two per centum of the electors of the state, the secretary of state shall transmit the same to the legislature not later than ten (10) days after the commencement of the session. If the law so proposed be not passed by the legislature at such session, or if it be passed in an amended form, then upon a further petition or petitions, each signed by six per centum of the electors of the state, filed with the secretary of state within six months after the adjournment of the legislature, the law proposed in the first petition or one or more amended forms thereof, shall be submitted to the electors at the next general or special state-wide election, occurring not less than ninety days after the filing of any such further petition or petitions, and if approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon, provided the vote in favor of the proposed law be not less than thirty-three per centum of the total number of votes cast at such election, the same shall become a law and go into effect thirty days after such election, and shall supersede any amended form of such law which may have been passed by the legislature. No law passed by the initiative petition and approved by the electors shall be subject to the veto of the governor. The authority of the people to enact laws, as provided in this subdivision, shall extend only to laws authorized by the provisions of the constitution.

(c) THE REFERENDUM. — If within ninety days after the final adjournment of any session of the legislature, a referendum petition, signed by six per centum of the electors of the state, shall be filed with the secretary of state against any law or any part of a law, passed by the legislature at such session, such law, or such part of a law shall be submitted to the electors at the next general or special state-wide election, occurring not less than ninety days after the filing of said petition. If a majority of the votes cast thereon be in the negative, provided such negative vote be not less than thirty-three per centum of the total number of votes cast at such election, such law or such part of a law shall thereby be repealed. Provided, that if a referendum petition is signed by fifteen per centum of the electors of the state, the law, or part of a law, against which such petition is filed shall be suspended pending the referendum vote thereon. Provided the same shall equal 33 per cent of the votes at such election.

Any law providing for a tax levy or appropriating money for the current expenses of the state government or state institutions, any act of the legislature submitting a constitutional amendment or other question to the electors of the state, or any emergency law necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health, or safety, shall go into effect immediately upon its passage and approval by the governor, and such laws, except emergency laws, shall not be subject to a referendum vote. All other laws shall go into effect ninety days after the adjournment of the legislature. A bill proposing an emergency law shall contain a preamble briefly setting forth the facts constituting the emergency. A separate vote shall be taken upon the preamble of such bill by a call of the yeas and nays, and if the preamble be adopted by a two-thirds vote of all the members of each house, it shall be an emergency law.

(d) GENERAL PROVISIONS.— All petitions provided for in this section shall contain a title indicating the subject and purpose of the proposed law or constitutional amendment, or the law, or part of a law to be referred, and if a change is proposed in an existing constitutional provision or statute, in addition to referring to the same, it shall state the general effect of the proposed change and also the full text of the proposed law or amendment to the constitution, or of the law or part of a law, to be referred. Any initiative or referendum petition may be signed in separate parts but each part shall conform to the provisions herein contained. All petitions shall be signed and verified before a person authorized to administer an oath, and shall be in such form that a person signing a petition thereby states under oath, the date of his signature, his residence, that he is a qualified elector, that he has not previously signed any part of such petition, and that he has signed the petition with knowledge of the contents thereof. To each part of such petition shall be attached the affidavit of the person before whom the same was signed, which affidavit shall contain a statement of the number of signers thereon, that each of the signatures attached to such part was made in the presence of the affiant, that to the best of his knowledge and belief each signature is the genuine signature of the person whose name it purports to be, that he believes the persons who have signed such petition to be electors, that they signed such petition with knowledge of the contents thereof, and that each person signed the same on the date stated opposite his name. The circulation of the petition provided for herein, or the prohibition of the circulation thereof, may be regulated by law, and in case the circulation of any petition is prohibited by law, the percentage of signers required on any petition provided for in this section shall be one-half of the percentage specified in subdivisions a, b and c of this section.

The percentage in any case shall be based upon the total number of votes cast for governor at the next preceding election. All petitions provided for in this section shall contain the signature of not less than one-half of the designated percentage of the electors in not less than one-fourth of the counties of the state. In initiating a law or constitutional amendment, electors who have signed the first shall be qualified to sign the second petition.

The sufficiency of all petitions shall be decided by the secretary of state subject to review by the court. If the secretary of state decides that any petition is insufficient, he shall permit a reasonable time for making corrections or for filing additional signatures. In the event of legal proceedings in court to prevent giving effect to any such petition on account of insufficiency, or any other ground, the burden of proof shall be upon the person attacking the petition. No law or amendment to the constitution initiated and approved by the electors as herein provided, shall be held unconstitutional or void on account of the insufficiency of any initiative petition; nor shall the repeal of any law submitted by referendum petition be held invalid for such insufficiency.

All initiative laws and constitutional amendments shall be so submitted to the electors as to permit an affirmative or negative vote upon each measure submitted. If conflicting proposed laws or conflicting proposed amendments to the constitution be approved at the same election, the one receiving the highest number of affirmative votes shall prevail as to conflicting provisions.

The style of all legislative measures and amendments to the constitution initiated by the people under this section shall be: "Be it enacted by the People of the State of Minnesota."

The provisions of this section may be enforced by appropriate legislation, but until such legislation has been enacted, this section shall be self executing.

THE PURPOSE AND EFFECT of this amendment, if adopted, will be three-fold.

(a) It will permit the voters to propose amendments to the state constitution, for adoption, without action by the legislature. Under the constitution as it now stands constitutional amendments can be proposed only by the legislature.

(b) So, too, if adopted, the amendment will permit electors to propose laws for enactment and if not enacted by the legislatures, the voters may by sufficient petition, require the question of the enactment of the proposed law to be submitted to the voters. If approved by a majority of the electors voting, thereon, provided the vote in favor of the proposed law is not less than thirty-three per cent of the total number of votes cast at such election, the same becomes a law with the same force and effect as though passed by the legislature. The governor will have no power to veto a law so passed, but the people cannot so pass any law which is prohibited by the constitution.

(c) So too, if adopted, the amendment will permit the voters by proper petition to require a vote on the question of whether or not any law or part thereof, of certain classes of laws, passed by the legislature shall be repealed. If the petition asking for the referendum is signed by fifteen per cent of the voters of the state, the number of whom is to be determined by the number of votes cast for Governor at the preceding election, the law so referred to the voters will not take effect pending the referendum vote thereon. The vote required to repeal a law passed by the legislature and the classes of laws which cannot be so repealed are specified in Subdivision "C" of the proposed amendment as above printed.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 8.

By Chapter 386, Laws 1915, the legislature proposed for adoption by the electors an amendment of Section 7, Article 6, of the constitution.

The section now reads as follows:

"Section 7. PROBATE COURTS— There shall be established in each organized county in the state a probate court, which shall be a court of record, and be held at such times and places as may be prescribed by law. It shall be held by one judge, who shall be elected by the voters of the county for the term of two years. He shall be a resident of such county at the time of his election, and reside therein during his continuance in office; and his compensation shall be provided by law. He may appoint his own clerk where none has been elected; but the legislature may authorize the election, by the electors of any county, of one clerk of register of probate for such county, whose powers, duties, term of office and compensation shall be prescribed by law. A probate court shall have jurisdiction over the estates of deceased persons and persons under guardianship, but no other jurisdiction, except as prescribed by this constitution."

The amendment simply proposes to substitute the word "four" for the word "two" so that the sentence prescribing the duration of the term of office will, if the amendment is adopted, read as follows:

"It shall be held by one judge, who shall be elected by the voters of the county for the term of four years."

PURPOSE AND EFFECT: The amendment, if adopted will make the term of office of the Judge of Probate four years instead of two.

Visited by the Catacombs.

"Did I understand you to say you were in Europe?" he asked of the man who was talking to a drummer across the aisle.

"Yes, sir."

"Were you in Rome?"

"I was there for a month, sir."

"Ah, I am glad to have met you. I wanted to ask about Rome. You visited the catacombs, of course?"

"Didn't have to. They visited me."

"How do you mean?"

"Why, I never stirred out of the hotel that they weren't striking me for alms. Never saw such an infernal set in all my born days."

"Don't you mean the lazzaroni?"

"Of course. The catacombs and the lazzaroni are the same thing, only 'catacombs' is the Italian of it and the other is 'he English. If you haven't been over I'd advise you to go—if you can raise the dudads. You don't know how much a trip abroad will broaden and liberalize your mind."

And the other sank back and hid himself in a corner, and he did not get over looking pale for the next 30 miles.

Real Academic Dignity.

Max Muller tells a story of one of Dr. Strachan Davidson's predecessors as master of Balliol. "Once, when returning from a solitary walk, Doctor Jenkins, whose regard for his own dignity was very great, slipped and fell. Two undergraduates, seeing the accident, ran to assist him, and were just laying hands on him to lift him up when he descried a master of arts coming. 'Stop!' he cried. 'I see a master of arts coming down the street,' and he dismissed the undergraduates with many thanks, and was helped on his legs by the M. A."—London Chronicle.

The Clever Wasp.

Wasps appear to be well-nigh as industrious as ants or bees. One authority has declared that the cardinal doctrine of the wasp is: "If any wasp will not work, neither shall he eat."

Division of labor is clearly seen in the wasp's nest. Some of the workers seem to be specially employed as foragers and soldiers, others appear to be told off as nurses and guardians, while yet others are engaged as paper makers and masons.

Ignorance, it is generally conceded by social reformers, causes many innocent girls to bring home to their mothers the misery of shame and the remorse of death.

"Where Are My Children?" the startling photo-drama is said to preach eloquently the truth, points out forcefully the warning and picture vividly the consequences of trifling with nature's relentless law. This powerful preachment against the ignorance through which thousands of girls yearly fall by the wayside—powerfully gripping and sensational—possesses such high dignity that it is endorsed by John J. Hughes, Superior General of the American Paulist fathers; Dr. C. H. Parkhurst of New York City; Louis D. Krauss, president of the Bureau of Moral and Hygienic Education, New York; Dr. Horace M. Simmons, of the Medical Review of Reviews, New York; Bernard McFadden, New York etc.

This picture has set the entire country agog. It is the sensation of sensations, dealing as it does with a subject that will impress every living soul that sees it. It is remarkable in that it deals with the premeditated slaughter of the unborn by those who claim to be of the higher moral standing in communities.

BRILLIANT PASS SAVES THE DAY

FINAL GAME ON SATURDAY

Muddy Field Handicaps Players and Larger Score Would Have Been Rolled Up—Rogers and Holzknecht Star.

A perfect 30 yard pass, Holzknecht to Prichard, in the last minute of play spelled defeat for the Red Lake Falls gridiron eleven last Saturday afternoon. The score was 6 to 0. The pass saved the day for Thief River Falls, shut the visitors out and also saved the high school's berth in the running for Northwestern Minnesota football honors. Their goal yet remains to be crossed, and the victory puts the fourth consecutive burr on the Thief River Falls high school football pelt.

The contest was another demonstration of the tremenduous power and drive of Coach Johnson's perfected machine, although the score does not show it. This can be accounted for by the muddy field. In the early stages of the game the Red Lake Falls team looked more formidable than any team that has faced Thief River so far this year. They showed a wonderful improvement over the game in September. Johnson's men caught their stride shortly and from then on the game was entirely different, the local goal never being seriously menaced. Red Lake Falls fought desperately during the firrst quarter and made a good contest of it all through the game. A flash of speed came to the visitors in the first period, when they marched the ball straight up the field and came within 7 yards of the goal line. Thief River's defense grew compact, forming a rock wall, and Red Lake lost their only chance to score. After that the visitors had no more of a chance to win or even score against Johnson's men, than a mosqueto has to puncture an automobile tire. Thief River's attack seemed slow at the beginning of the game, but it did not disconcert the players and as the game progressed they made better headway and gave a fine exhibition of line plunging. During the second quarter Thief River was headed for a touchdown and came within 2 yards of the goal line when the ball was lost on a forward pass. The playing at this point in the game was conducted in a spot of mud and made running very difficult. Time and again the local backfield men would slip in their tracks. When the first half closed Thief River was found marching the ball up the field and were within 15 yards from the chalk line. The third quarter found them within 20 yards of the goal.

The Touchdown.

The play that won the game was without a doubt the most spectacular ever seen on the local gridiron. Thief River was on the sixty yard line, with about one minute to play. Two forward passes failed and the only logical thing to do in order to gain the ground was a third attempt. Holzknecht received the ball and ran back 5 yards, then he shot the spheriod for 30 yards to Prichard, who was squatting behind two Red Lake Falls men. The ball sailed over the opponents heads into Prichard's arms. A race for 10 yards followed, Prichard carrying the ball between the posts. The crowd went wild with enthusiasm and Prichard was latter carried off the field at the close of the second half.

BY HACKETT OF RED LAKE.

"We did our best with a bunch of unexperienced players. A dry field would have allowed the players on both sides to have put up a better game. I might also say that two of our best players were out of the game. Thief River Falls has a good team."

Prediction Came True.

Red Lake Falls was expected to put up a hard game and did so to the limit of its ability, but Johnson's men carried too many 42 centimeter guns and all were good marksmen. Information had been received here that Red Lake was working the Minnesota shift. It was correct and Thief River smashed it in thrilling style.

Line is Powerful.

Thief River's line again demonstrated its power, but was slow in charging at first. It soon gained in momentum and only the desperate and courageous secondary defense of Red Lake kept the ball from going over. Both the Red Lake halves and quarterback played stellar parts. Holzknecht literally tore his way through play after play and like Rogers, fullback, required the pull of two or more Red Lakers to bring him down. Hilson at tackle played a star game but was taken out during the fourth quarter by the referee. Out of eight plays sent his way, Hilson bocked seven and spilled the players right and left. To Holzknecht is due much credit for the excellent pass made in the last minute of play, which saved the game, and also to Prichard for the splendid catch and dash down field.

BY COACH JOHNSON.

"It was a hard fought game. A dry field would have told a different story by far. After the first quarter the boys played real football, our goal never being seriously threatened. Improvement in interference is a big need before we hit Crookston next Saturday for the championship of Northwestern Minnesota."

The playing of Red Lake Falls showed an improvement of 50 per cent over the game in September, in face of much stiffer opposition. One fault was noticed with the local team and that was in the inference not forming in rapid order, but this will be perfected before Saturday's game.

"Hob" Rogers, "Bullet Hob," is deserving of a part all to himself in the story of the game. "Hob" was practically unstoppable, and would slide through a knot hole for gains. Time and again he would wander through the Red Lake backfield men and when finally stopped he would be under the pile of human heels, heads, elbows and arms when each disentanglement period was finished. Defensively he was a bear and tackled with unerring accuracy.

BY CAPTAIN HOLZKNECHT.

"The boys played a fine and hard game. Had the field been in good condition I am sure we would have rolled up a larger score. The team is now nearly a work of art. We must beat Crookston Saturday and we will do it."

Last Game Saturday.

RESOLVE TO HELP OUR NEIGHBORS

Commercial Club Goes on Record As Favoring Marshall and Clearwater For Road Aid.

The Thief River Falls Commercial club is going to be real neighborly in the matter of securing a portion of that federal road fund. At a meeting held early in the week a resolution was passed pledging the support of the organization toward any attempt made by either of these counties to be counted in on the cash. The resolutio was signed by President Johnson and secretary Laird, and is as follows:

Whereas: The government of the United States has seen fit in its discretion to appropriate the sum of $75,000,000 in aid to state and federal roads throughout the country, the sum of $5,000,000 being available for the year 1917, and increasing $5,000,000 each year for five years; and,

Whereas: There is available for the State of Minnesota for the coming year $142,000 for the improvement of such roads as the State Highway Commission may deem are most worthy of such aid, and which roads have been declared state roads and which by action of the county boards have been designated for improvement under state supervision, and,

Whereas: There extends through several of the counties in the northwestern part of Minnesota a Highway known as the Jefferson Highway, and of local, state and national importance, connecting the northern boundary of the United States with the Gulf of Mexico, and under state and national control; and,

Whereas: There is a stretch of the said Highway in the county of Clearwater that needs attention and improvement more than any other on the said Highway in this part of the state; and,

Whereas: Said Clearwater county was of material assistance in securing the said Highway through this immediate section of Minnesota, therefore,

Be it Resolved: That the Commercial club of Thief River Falls, located in Pennington county, recognizing the benefits that will be derived from said Highway, hereby tender its services to said Clearwater county in its endeavor to secure a portion of the federal aid to be distributed by the State Highway Commission; and,

Be It Further Resolved: That a committee of three be appointed to render such assistance as is necessary in futherance of this step, including the sending of a representative from this club to appear before the State Highway Commission if deemed advisable, or upon the request of the proper authorities of said Clearwater county.

JOHN A. DUFFY'S PLATFORM

TO THE VOTERS OF THE 65th LEGISLATIVE DISTRICT

I am in favor of retaining the present county option law.

For the strictest economy. Opposed to all unnecessary appropriations. For lower taxes. Wherever the Legislature can curtail expenses of state, county, town, village or school government and not impair the efficiency, the movement will have my support to the end that the burden of taxation may be reduced.

For a fairer system of distributing the burden of taxation. Changes should include the assessment of buildings and improvements at a less percentage of their value than the land—a shifting of more of the burden onto the land off the improvements on the land.

For a fair and open market for all farm products, absolutely free from monoply or from manipulation, by promoters and speculators.

For responding to the wishes and the sentiments of the people and carrying out their will, where ever it can be ascertained.

JOHN A. DUFFY.

NOW ASKED TO PAY FOR SEIZED BOAT

E. O. Mogensen is Not Yet Through Troubles Over Getting That "Lame Duck."

Hunting ducks is not all sport, as O. E. Mogensen is beginning to find out. Last week he was fined $12 for going out after a duck he had wounded, and the other day he received the following interesting epistle as an aftermath:

"Erskine, Minn., Oct. 30, 1916. Mr. O. E. Mogensen, Thief River Falls, Minn. Dear Sir: Will drop you a few lines in regard to the boat you borrowed from me. Mr. Munch has been around and seized the boat for the state, and I expect you will pay me for same. I do think it would be worth about $15. In hope you will make same all right, I am, yours truly, O. J. Carlson."

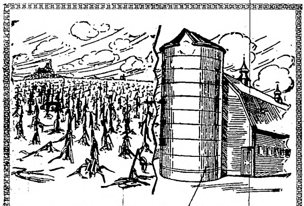
People in this section are beginning to think that Game Warden Munch is making rather a more important matter out of this incident than the circumstances warrant. Mr. Mogensen is willing to prove by reliable witnesses that even though the strict letter of the law was violated by his act, it was but a technical infraction and did no possible harm. He simply went after a duck that he wounded and had to go out into the lake to get it. He did not give the matter a thought at the time, knowing that he was acting as would any other duck hunter in the country.

It is these small, pestering acts that are largely responsible for the criticism at times directed at the game wardens in this state. It is asserted that they are none too careful themselves in many cases. It is even stated that Mr. Munch himself failed to wait for the legal opening of the season before starting out after ducks.

"The Fallen Pilgrim"

This is the title of a book recently published, and is as the title indicates, a religious allegory. As as such it is very original on a much abused line of allegorizing life. The author has the audacity right in this age of novels and irreligious fiction to turn aside from modern literature and write a real tragedy of the soul in a true biblical sense, and in the old classical meaning. Many characters that are typical of almost any community are so portrayed by description, deed and speech so as to bring them strikingly before the reader. Some of the important characters are Mercy, Justice, Truth and Satan. The last assumes various forms depending on the particular role he is playing, and how best he can gain his object.

The book is written in Norwegian and is sold by the author, Marie Rolland, of this city.



Where Is Your Corn Crop? In The Field Or In A Silo?

Of course it is too late to get a silo up and filled for this coming winter, but you can keep a record and see whether a silo would save you anything or not.

Feed is high now and probably will be all winter and it's quite likely to remain high next year so that your figures on feed costs this winter will be a very good indication for next year.

We have a great deal of information on the silo problem that we will be glad to furnish you so you can study the question for your farm intelligently.

It's a pretty good idea to settle the silo question one way or another during the winter time. Will be glad to see you about it soon.

BALLOT MAILED TO OUR LONE SOLDIER

New Law Gives H. C. Rowberg an Opportunity to Cast His Vote Like Any Other Citizen.

County Auditor T. P. Anderson on Monday received a copy of the law passed on Saturday at the special session of the legislature, together with instructions as to how to proceed in the sending and tabulating of the ballots.

The city of Thief River Falls has only one enlisted man in the service, this being H. C. Rowberg of the law firm of Stanton, Rowberg & Hoge. The instructions accompanying the copy of the law stated that two ballots were to be sent by special delivery for each voter of the county now serving on the frontier. The instructions are that the ballots must be sent eight days before election, so that there was no time to lose.

One of the provisions of the law is that the canvassing board must be held in session until the soldier ballots are returned and tabulated with the balance of those cast.

"BACK TO NORWAY" MOVEMENT SPREADS

Demand For Labor in the Old Country Unprecedented and Many Are Returning

The "Back to Norway" movement has become almost epidemic among young Norwegians in Chicago and the Northwest, according to statements of labor agents. The European war has brought such unbounded prosperity to Norway, it is said, that industries are suffering under a labor famine. Norwegian industrial concerns are advertising in Chicago and this section for help and bombarding the employment offices with orders for men.

During the last month more than 6,500 men representing various crafts have returned to Norway from Chicago alone.

The papers containing the above information also print a report to the effect that leading Norwegian banks are co-operating to establish a Norwegian-American clearing bank in New York with a capital of $2,500,000. The steadily increasing mercantile connections between the two countries make it desirable that a house in New York handle Norwegian interests, especially money transactions.

"CHIPPEWA" IS AGAIN READY FOR LAUNCHING

Government Steamer on Red Lake Repaired and Overhauled—Indians Are Paid Off

Peter Eberhardt returned from Red Lake the first of the week after having spent about three months as an employee of the government engaged in reconstructing the steamship "Chippewa." This is one of the vessels crushed by the ice at the time of the breakup last spring and which has been out of commission since that time. Mr. Eberhardt again has the steamer in shape to take the water, but as it is late in the season the launching will probably postponed till spring. The boat is raised up on blocks out of danger of the ice.

Pool Hall Burned

Mr. Eberhardt also reports that the pool hall of W. R. Spears was totally destroyed by fire last week. Good work on the part of the populace enabled the proprietor to save the pool and billiard tables in the place, but the building was a total loss.

Indians Paid Off.

The government has just completed the paying of the annuity to the Indians, this amounting to $150 per head. The effect of education is shown in the use to which this money is now put. A few years ago any cash given the Indians was practically a foolish waste, but they have progressed to where they put their surplus into permanent improvements of one kind and another and are in many cases showing a commendable spirit of thrift.

First to Volunteer.

Attention has been called to this city through its being the first municipality in this section to express itself in any manner on the proposition to establish a summer training camp. The St. Paul Dispatch of last Thursday gives publicity to the fact, as follows:

"Thief River Falls has volunteered to co-operate in the plans for the summer training camp at Fort Snelling. A letter reveived today by the Association of Commerce from Scott Laird, secretary of the Commercial club of that city, offers any aid in their power. It is the first outside of the Twin Cities to volunteer assistance."

PREPARING FOR THE FIRST MARKET DAY

The first market day in the history of the village of Goodridge will take place next Saturday, Nov. 4, at which time a meeting for the purpose of considering the establishment of a creamery will also be held.

The plans for the Market Day feature closely follow those employed in Thief River Falls on the last two market days. The merchants will offer some attractive bargains to the farmers and there will be a free moving picture show and other amusements for their entertainment. Local speakers will talk on subjects of general interest to farmers and a free auction will be staged.

A large crowd from the nearby section is expected to attend as the creamery question in particular is one that greatly interests them. The Goodridge region is becoming famous for its fine cattle and a large quantity of milk and cream is at present being shipped to other points.

Second Lyceum Number.

The Chicago Operatic company, the second Lycum course number for the season, will be the attraction at the Auditorium on Friday evening. This is one of the best organizations of its kind in the country and should be heard by all. Vocal solos, duets, quartets, instrumental and obligato numbers will be interspersed throughout the program, every number handled by an artist. It is very much desired to have a good attendance at this entertainment and everyone is assured that all the good things said for it are deserved.

MR. WILSON HAS HAD NO MEXICAN POLICY.

"We cannot let the American spirit fall so low that, lapped in the luxury occasioned by a foreign war, we shall see American lives sacrificed without a determination to prevent it and to make the American name honored and respected wherever our flag flies. The trouble with this administration is this: I don't think it ever has had a policy in Mexico worthy of the name."—From Mr. Hughes' Speech at Chicago.

MR. HUGHES HAS EXPLODED THE "KEPT US OUT OF WAR" ARGUMENT.

Mr. Hughes' attack upon the "kept-us-out-of-war" argument has aroused a storm of enthusiasm.

"Kept us out of war!" he demands. "Why, there were nineteen men—good American soldiers, shot down at Vera Cruz, and Many Mexicans were killed by our men. That was war. Moreover, it was a very ignoble war. I have heard three explanations of the Vera Cruz move.

"First, it was explained that it was made in order to compel somebody to salute the flag—somebody who had insulted us. But the flag was not saluted and has not been to this day. Then it was said that the salute was not what we sought, but to prevent the landing of a boatload of ammunition intended for Huerta. The ammunition landed, however, and it has been shown that it reached Huerta in due season without interference on our part.

"When that reason was shown to be untenable a third one—and possibly the real one—finally was advanced. It was said that our seizure of Vera Cruz was a move to compel the retirement of Huerta. It seems possible that this is true, although we had promised the Mexicans that we would not interfere in their affairs and told them more than once that we wanted them to handle their own affairs.

"That is why the Mexicans could not understand us and that is why they show little faith in our promises."

MANANA.

Manana, which is Mexican for "watchful waiting," is the Democratic keynote in the campaign. The Wilson drive is to begin "some time" after Sept. 1, but no definite engagements have been made, it is announced, for him to commence making political speeches. He has tentative engagements to make some western visits about the middle of September, but nothing positive. Plans are being formulated for carrying on a campaign to capture the woman vote of the country, but who will make the speeches on this phase of the controversy has not been determined. It has been expected that Mr. Bryan would speak in the Maine campaign, but it is now believed he cannot do so, but will make some speeches later. And so it goes. Watchful waiting will prevail, while in the meantime Mr. Hughes is carrying on a positive campaign and arousing the entire western country.

"I don't care, if I am elected president, what becomes of my personal political fortunes. I propose that we shall have no more, if I can stop it, of these 'kiss me and I'll kiss you' appropriations in Congress."—From Mr. Hughes' Speech at Chicago.

SOUTH-IN-SADDLE IN NAVY.

Out of the 17 Ranking Officers In Charge of Naval Affairs 12 Are From South.

To Josephus Daniels, who has represented the Administration's Policy with regard to the first line defense, is credited responsibility for cramping and thwarting progress and efficiency in the navy.

Many new men have been brought into the Washington end of the navy organization. Of the seventeen high ranking officers who are charged with the responsible duties of administering the affairs of the navy twelve are from the Southern states. In years gone by necessity did not arise to question from what section come the officers chosen to head the bureaus of the Navy Department. Comparisions between the army and navy in this respect will show that no such conditions exist in the war Department.

PEDDLERS ARE AGAIN PLYING THEIR TRADE

Coffee, Tea and Spice Salesmen Hide Their Exhorbitant Prices Behind Worthless Chromos.

Some people are never happy unless they are being humbugged. To get something for nothing is the height of business acumen, according to their way of figuring, and the fact that they are continually stung while pursuing their foolish policy does not seem to make any difference.

During the past week a very good illustration of this fact was brought to the notice of The Times. Itinerent tea, coffee and spice peddlers have been making a house-to-house canvass and the probabilities are that they have fared very well. The premium stunt was worked to a frazzle—and the gulible purchaser paid for the worthless truck used as bait.

One of the best-known grocers in the city called attention to some of the prices charged by these premium fakers. Extracts, for instance, for which the stores here have never charged more than 10 cents, were offered for 15 cents, the extra five cents going to cover the cost of coupons, which, when a sufficient number were saved, would entitle the holder to a chromo or a plaster of paris statuette. The premium was absolutely worthless but the price was boosted five cents because of it. Ground spices for which 10 cents per can has been charged since cans were invented were sold by the peddlers for 15 cents, the extra five cents going for premium coupons.

There is nothing to be done about the matter. So long as people expect to get something for nothing, just so long will they continue to pay for something they do not get.

MUCH INTEREST IN GREAT PHOTO PLAY

The photo play of the season promises to be as great a sensation in Thief River Falls as it has proven elsewhere. This production is "Where Are My Children?" and will be shown at the Princess on Wednesday and Thursday of next week. There must be something remarkable about a picture capable of eliciting comment from the foremost men of the nation as well as from the press of every section.

This is a rather startling story and deals with the plain truth. It is written in such a manner, however, that even the most severe critic can find no fault with it. For many reasons, chief among which are that all the seats will be needed for adults, no children will be admitted under 16 years of age.

All seats for this production will be reserved and may be had at Lambert's drug store.

An Instructive Pamphlet

The Soo railroad has just issued an illustrated pamphlet under the title of "Playing the Game of Safety First," which contains a whole lot of information of value to people who travel on railroads as well as those who stay at home. J. S. A copy of the pamphlet may be had free by addressing any office of the company.

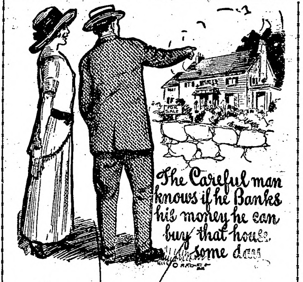
THINK THIS OVER.

Once there was a fellow who just knew he couldn't leave his business for a minute or it would go to the bow wows.

He breathed business, he ate business and slept the same way. He was going to let up some day when he had brought it to a certain point. When that some day would come he was going to tread water for awhile, grab a gob or two of fresh air just like a regular human being. He figured too, that he might even take a regular holiday and take his family around the world as far as Azusa and back. But he never seemed to get any nearer that "some day." He would look back year after year and find himself in the same old rut. (He didn't know that you can give too darned much attention to business sometimes). Anyhow, one beautiful day when the birds were singing and the sun shining and the flowers perfuming, the poor dub died. Actually starved himself to death. UGH, its an awful thing ain't it?

Neighbors, it can't be done. When you start neglecting your brains you had better get measured by that fellow we are all trying to dodge. You might as well put on Blue goggles and try to feed your stomach saw dust. It can't be did. The Moral—"New Princess Theatre Brand Brain Food." Think it over.



The Careful man knows if he Banks his money he can buy that house some day

The best way to own a house of your own is to have enongh money to buy a home outright.

ELECTION OUTCOME IS STILL IN DOUBT

Wilson Now in Lead But Margin Dwindles in Face of Late Reports—Both Sides Claim Remaining States

MINNESOTA'S VOTE MAY BE THE DECIDING FACTOR

Late Claims Are That Hughes Has Majority of 800 in State, With Favorable Districts Still Out.

KELLOGG AND BURNQUIST ARE WINNERS

8 p. m.—Special to The Times
Wilson, 254. Leading in California.
Hughes, 247. Leading in Minnesota.

DUFFY DEFEATED FOR LEGISLATURE

Reduces Stenvick's Vote of Two Years Ago But Latter Carries Own County Strong.

IVES FALLS BY WAYSIDE

Defeated For Clerk of Court by Adolph Eklund—Michelet Re-Elected Probate Judge by Small Margin Over Richardson.

Indications are that every state in the Union will have to be heard from before the result of Tuesday's election is known. At eight o'clock this evening both sides were claiming the victory. The contest has narrowed down to Minnesota and California, with Hughes leading in one and Wilson in the other.

California For Wilson

California is the other doubtful factor. Should Wilson carry that state it would probably mean his election. Reports are to the effect that he has a lead at this time but that quite a number of precincts are still to be heard from. His plurality in the state at this time is 1,180.

This afternoon the Hughes vote in Minnesota took a sudden spurt, but this has apparently again subsided and the candidates are running neck and neck.

North Dakota is Democratic, Wilson's plurality in that state being 1,494, with but few unimportant precincts to hear from.

Two For Hughes

Nebraska Democratic

Wilson has carried Nebraska and the eight votes of that state are removed from the doubtful column. In all calculations made, however, Nebraska has been conceeded by the Republicans and the final count only makes the matter certain.

New Mexico Republican

Another state which has been wavering is New Mexico. This is now safely in the Hughes' column, but the Republican plurality is only 258.

Close In New Hampshire

One state claimed thus far by the Republicans has definitely been decided for Wilson. This is New Hampshire, where he has a majority of 91.

Needs Only Twelve

Should the lead Wilson now has in California hold good it will mean his election. That state has 13 electoral votes which would give him one more than necessary. The votes of Minnesota would also return him the winner even though all the others went against him.

Pennington county gave President Wilson plurality of 127 votes at the election on Tuesday, he receiving 999 ballots in his favor to 872 for Charles E. Hughes. Wilson carried three of the four precincts in the city and ran about even in the country districts.

Kellog Has Good Lead.

Frank B. Kellog for United States Senator received within 59 votes of as many as did his two opponents combined. Lawler, Democrat, ran behind the Prohibition candidate, Calderwood, receiving but 458 votes as compared with 613 for the latter.

Four to One For Burnquist.

Governor J. A. A. Burnquist received more than four times as many votes as did Democratic opponent, Thomas Dwyer. The vote stands Burnquist, 1370; Dwyer, 362.

Steenerson Away Ahead.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson received almost three times as many votes as his two opponents combined and it is likely that this insures the place of Pennington as the banner Steenerson county in the district.

Stenvick is Returned.

Oscar T. Stenvick, candidate for reelection as representative in the legislature from the district composed of the counties of Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater, received a majority of 267 in the county, which insured his election. His vote was 1,194 to 927 for his opponent.

Mr. Duffy was given a strong endorsement by his home county of Red Lake and his vote in Pennington was much larger than two years ago, but Stenvick carried Clearwater by a majority sufficiently large to offset all gains.

The vote for representative in the district was as follows: Red Lake county—Duffy, 989; Stenvick, 275. Clearwater county—Duffy, 327; Stenvick, 855. Pennington county—Duffy, 927; Stenvick, 1,194. Totals—Stenvick, 2,324; Duffy, 2,243. Majority for Stenvick, 81.

Anderson For Justice.

One of the surprises of the vote was the excellent showing made by Judge James H. Quinn for supreme court justice. In spite of the fact that he was a stranger to most of the people of this section he received 805 votes to 984 for his opponent, W. B. Anderson of Minneapolis.

Michelet is Judge of Probate.

Wilhelm Michelet was re-elected judge of probate, receiving 1,131 votes to 1,083 for his opponent, Ira C. Richardson. The first returns indicated the election of the latter, but Judge Michelet's strong following in certain of the country districts changed the complexion of things at the last moment.

Eklund is Successful.

Adolph Eklund was elected as clerk of court over Harry E. Ives, the present incumbent, by a vote of 1,257 to 964. While it was conceded that this race would be close the showing made by Eklund came as a surprise even to his friends.

One New Commissioner.

There were two county commissioners to be elected, but Robert McGinn had no opposition in the Second district. In the Fourth J. S. Roy was elected over Eric Kittleson by a majority of 110 votes, the figures being, Roy, 215; Kittleson, 105.

TWO CARLOADS OF POULTRY SHIPPED

Making Four Within the Past Month Consigned to the Cities By Local Wholesaler.

Manager D. C. Biddick of the Thief River Produce company, has been busy of late skirmishing for poultry to send to the big city markets. The demand has been good all fall and with the coming of Thanksgiving and the later holidays this will be largely increased.

Two carloads of live fowls were sent to Chicago this week. One of these contained 5,000 chickens and the other 1,000 turkeys. This makes four such shipments within a period of one month, both the others consisting exclusively of chickens..

Thief River Falls is becoming known among the commission merchants of the east as one of the most dependable primary markets in this section. The stock shipped is steadily improving in quality and many of the neighboring farmers are going into the business of raising chickens on an extended scale. A profitable side line for dairying and general farming is thus being developed and proving a money maker for those who are devoting the proper care and attention to it.

COLD WEATHER WILL NOT STOP THE WORK

Cement Construction on Dam Will be Continued Through the Cold Weather if Necessary.

Construction work on the Kretzschmar-Schrieter dam will not be discontinued because of cold weather but will be pushed to an early completition. Superintendent Hedlund is making preparations for enclosing the construction area and installing steam pipes for the purpose of keeping the cement mixture from frost. The superintendent stated this week that he did not believe this would be necessary, however, as he expected to have the dam in place before the freeze-up hit him.

The clearing away of the old dam has about been completed and the work of excavation commenced. The coffer ham is holding back the water in good shape and little trouble is experienced in working in the bed of the stream. As soon as all the old material has been gotten out and the necessary trench excavated the work of putting in the cement wall will be begun. Mr. Hedlund hopes for good weather but is prepared to continue operations even if it should turn cold enough to hamper the work under ordinary conditions.

FLOUR MILL RUNS ON DOUBLE SHIFT

Ample Water Power is Making it Possible For Local Concern to Catch Up on Orders.

Ever since the dam was put out of business by the ice last spring the Hanson & Barzen flouring mill here has been handicapped through lack of power. Considerable stock on hand at that time, supplemented by what it has been possible to secure since, has enabled the concern to meet all contracts, but nothing has been ground for reserve. With the completion of the coffer dam an abundance of water is again available and the mill is running night and day in order to catch up. The double shift will be continued until such time as the dam builders find it necessary to cut off the water again. In spite of the general wheat shortage in this section the Hanson-Barzen company has a large supply on hand in the thirty or more country elevators belonging to the concern, and the management hardly believes a complete shut-down necessary.

MILEAGE QUESTION FINALLY SETTLED

County Commissioner Entitled to Compute Distance Over Generally Traveled Route.

In a case appealed to the supreme court of Marshall county the higher tribunal has handed down a decision which will settle a discussion of long standing in nearly all northern Minnesota counties. The cause is entitled County of Marshall, respondent, against A. S. Rocke, appellant, and deals with the amount of mileage to which County Commissioner A. S. Rocke is entitled. Rocke lives near Newfolden and generally makes the trip to Warren, the county seat, by way of Thief River Falls. He has been submitting his mileage bill for the distance thus travelled and the board has refused payment, claiming that he is entitled to re-embursement only for the distance between his home and the county seat in a straight line.

Justice Holt, in reversing the judgment of the lower court, says: "A county commissioner in attending board meetings is entitled to compute mileage for the distance "necessarily traveled" by the usual traveled route from the place of residence to the county seat."

Stanton & Rowberg of this city, were the attorneys for Mr. Rocke in this case.

Electric Lights at Erskine

The progressive village of Erskine will soon have an electrict light and power house, as the officials there are advertising the sale of bonds in the sum of $5,000, the proceeds of which will be used for the purpose of erecting and establishing such a plant there.

It is expected that the plant will be in running order inside of the next three months.

PHANTOMS WIN GAME AND TITLE

TEAM HAS A CLEAN GOAL

Championship of Northwestern Minnesota is Claimed by Local Eleven Bemidji Wires For Game to Extend Honors.

Crookston walked the plank at the fiar grounds Saturday afternoon to the tune of 34 to 0. Ana walked the plank is right as the Thief River eleven drove the final spike into its claim for Northwestern Minnesota football honors so rapidly that the Crookstonites had no more of a chance to win or even score against Johnson's men than a sword fish has to sink a submarine. The contest was the deciding one for gridiron honors and the Thief River Falls crew now stands the undisputed champions of Northwestern Minnesota, having won five games straight and not once has the goal line been crossed. The game was called off 6 minutes before closing time in order that the Crookston boys might catch the afternoon train and it is wholly possibel that two or more touchdowns would have been made by Thief River Falls during that time.

As was predicted, Johnson's men began winning early and cracked off play after play with a remarkable precision. The contest was another demonstration of the terrific power of the perfected machine and showed very plainly the results of having the men "play low." The line started to charge right off the reel and hit hard and also low, allowing the back field men to pierce the Crookston defence for good gains. From the beginning to the end Thief River literally riddled the visiting team and intercepted nearly every forward pass attempted. They were easily masters of the situation from the start. They uncorked everything for Crookston and made everything go, displaying a well polished variety of about everything known to the gridiron catalogue—ripping, smashing line bucks, deadly forward passes and triple passes and some of the most brilliant open field playing ever seen on the local field. Crookston was expected to put up a hard game and did so to the extent of its ability. Johnson's machine on the other hand had too many guns and all were good marksmen. "Bullet Hob" Rogers pulled off some of the most spectacular line plunging ever seen and Captain Holzknecht executed several beautiful dodging runs.

ST. HILAIRE MAN CALLED SUDDENLY

E. A. White, about 45 years of age, died suddenly of heart diease while at the home of Dr. Owen in St. Hilaire on Sunday evening.

The deceased, who was a tailor by trade, arrived in St. Hilaire about six weeks ago. Nothing was known of him by any resident of the town and the authorities have been unable to find any trace of parties interested in him in any manner.

The people with whom White was stopping came to Thief River Falls on Sunday evening and he was visiting at the apartments of Dr. Owen, dentist, during their absence. He complained of not feeling well and the doctor told him to lie down and rest for a while. The latter thereupon left him alone and went to attend to other matters. Returning some time later he stumbled across the body of the visitor, which had fallen from the couch to the floor.

Coroner H. R. Halverson was telephoned for and in company with Dr. Douglass left for the scene at once. An autopsy was performed on the body and the physician's verdict was that death had been caused by acute dilation of the heart.

ELECTION RETURNS AT TIMES EXPENSE

Two Thousand People Visit Auditorium and Are Entertained on Election Night.

The election returns were received by The Times on Tuesday night over the wires of the Western Union Telegraph company and the Tri-State Telephone company. As fast as messages were received they were flashed on a screen on the stage by Manager H. W. Seitzler of the Princess theatre, who used one of his moving picture machines for the purpose. The Minnesota State band, under the leadership of Joe Greenfield, had been engaged for the evening and kept the big crowd entertained with the latest selections until a late hour.

The Auditorium was packed to capacity and during the evening over 200 people were entertained.

It was without doubt the most successful stunt of its kind ever pulled off by a newspaper in this section and The Times has been highly complimented for the enterprise shown.

MANY NEW USES FOR FLAX STRAW

Pamphlet of Much Interest to This Section is Issued by Bureau of Plant Industry.

PAPER AND FIBRE BOARD

Result of Investigation Made by Agent of Government May Provide New Use For What Was Formerly Waste Product.

Flax straw, heretofore regarded as practically a waste product, may become a source of much added revenue to the Northwestern farmer. The United States Bureau of Plant Industry has been making experimentations with this straw in the manufacture of paper and counter boards and the results have proven highly satisfactory.

Department Agent Here.

George A. Stuart, of the department, recently spent two weeks in this neighborhood for the purpose of investigating the quality and probable quantity of flax straw to be secured. He expressed himself as much pleased with the conditions he found and believes that with the perfecting of the manufacturing process the demand for the product will be so great that the straw will form a decided item when it comes to computing the revenue from flax acreage.

Heretofore Imported.

Bulletin, No. 322 of the Department of Agriculture, contains an account of the uses to which the fiber board manufactured from flax straw has been put. Principal among these are the manufacture of counters and toe boxes for shoes, for which purpose a considerable amount of the product has been annually imported from Europe. Investigation has proven that a board fully equal to that secured from the imported straw can be made from the domestic product. It is also claimed that the cost of manufacture is so low that it will be an easy matter to compete with the European product.

Samples Are Submitted.

Accompanying the bulletin are samples of the boards manufactured from the American straw, together with much descriptive matter. One sample is a red and the other a brown board. They are much alike, but the red is the softer product, both the soft and the hard board being demanded by the trade. The samples are smooth and tough, and people versed in materials of that kind pronounce them of excellent quality.

What It May Mean.

Should the utilization of flax straw prove commercially possible it will mean much to this section. A plant for the manufacture of the product will be established near the osurce of supply and this city will be a strong contender when it comes to securing the institution.

Possibilities Are Vast.

Among the uses to which this product may be put is the manufacture of box boards, which industry requires 20,000 tons annually. If it is found available as a substitute for rags in the making of writing paper 200,000 tons more will be required. This would mean an added annual revenue to the flax region of from $800,000 to $1,600,000. The straw would largely take the place of rags, $2,000,000 worth of which are now yearly imported.

Is All Waste Now.

The flax crop of the country furnishes normally $33,000,000 worth of flax seed. This yields about 2,400,000 tons of straw which at present is put to no profitable use and is for the most part burned on the fields. The utilization of this by-product would mean that the flax farmer who now realizes $12 per acre for his seed would receive an added revenue of at least $4 per ton for the straw, which would mean an increase of at least 25 per cent.

Four Big Flax States.

Minnesota is second in the amount of flax raised, being only topped by North Dakota. Next in order come South Dakota and Montana. The farmers of these states are vitally interested in the development of this industry, while the people of this ctiy particularly will watch with interest the outcome of the experiments to be made with the flax straw sent to Washington from this country.

SHOULD COMBINE TO GET CREAMERY

GRASS AND SILOS NEEDED

First Market Day of Eastern Pennington Farmers Proves a Most Sucessful Event—Cattle Expert Delivers Address.

L. C. Houske of Hallock, secretary of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association and an inspector in the state dairy and food department, told the farmers of the Goodridge neighborhood on Saturday that he doubted the advisability of organizing a creamery association there. The amount of land in grass is hardly sufficient to insure the success of a creamery at this time and he advised the farmers to join with their neighbors at Germantown, Torgerson and Highlanding in furnishing the milk and cream necessary for a first-class creamery. A milk station is already taking care of much of the product of the Erie neighborhood, and this could also be diverted to some central plant without trouble.

Need More Grass.

Mr. Houske advised his hearers to devote a greater share of their acreage to the growing of grass, fodder corn and other forage crops, as this the first requisite for any section hoping to make dairying a success.

Procure Good Cattle.

Carl Carlson of Erskine, one of the best known and most successful stock raisers in Northwestern Minnesota, spoke of the importance of getting good cattle. Scrubs never yet paid a farmer for their keep, and with the scientific farm management now becoming common, the loss caused by maintaining cattle of this class is easily ascertained. Mr. Carlson did not know whether or not the region about Goodridge was ready for a creamery, but even if the project was found impractical at this time he urged his hearers to secure the best cattle possible and begin building up their herds until such time as conditions changed and the establishment of a creamery seemed more advisable.

Big Crowd Present.

Farmers from all over the eastern end of Pennington county and many from Marshall county were present to enjoy the amusements and other attractions provided for their entertainment by the Goodridge Commercial club. Secretary Stephenson and a committee had arranged a very interesting program and the merchants all conducted special sales for the occasion. A free exhibition was given at the moving picture theatre, this feature being particularly enjoyed.

The affairs was a success from every point of view and the club and citizens generally are entitled to much credit for the way in which the crowd was taken care of.

TO TALK CONTROL AT FARGO MEETING

United States Senators and Congressmen From Three States on Program For Addresses

Senator D. P. O'Neill will leave on Saturday to attend the Tri-State Flood congress to be held at Fargo on Nov. 13 and 14. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the questions of drainage and flood control in the Red River and Minnesota river basins.

Invitations are being issued to county and township organizations and to various development and improvement associations in the affected area. It is estimated that over 8,000,000 acres are damaged by existing conditions and that the cost of the proposed remedy will not exceed $1.00 per acre.

Reservoirs Necessary.

Preliminary surveys seem to indicate that a system of reservoirs and storage basins will be necessary and it is expected that the waterpower developed by this method of treatment will yield an income that will contribute in a large measure to the cost of the work.

Those who have interested themselves in this movement are confident that Federal aid can be secured, provided the three states unite in an organization that will agree on a definite plan.

Three Governors Present

The governors of Minnesota, North and South Dakota have agreed to lend their aid and cooperation to the movement and it looks as though results will be effected at the Fargo meeting.

An Interesting Program.

The program for the meeting, beginning Monday at 10 o'clock, is as follows: Address of Welcome by Mayor H. F. Emery. Statement of purpose of meeting, Chairman A. B. Kaercher. "What Minnesota has done." Gov. Burnquist. "What South Dakota is Going to Do." Gov. Byrne. "What North Dakota Can Do." Gov. Hanna. "What the Federal Government Will Do." S. H. McCrov, chief of drainage department of the bureau of agriculture. "What the Federal Government Must Do," Senator Knute Nelson.

In the evening there will be reports submitted by the different committes, after which there will be addresses by Congressmen Volstad, Davis, Ellsworth and Steenerson.

Mr. and Mrs. John Duffy, of Red Lake Falls, were visitors in the city last Friday. Mr. Duffy spent the day in the interests of his candidacy for representative of the 65th district, while Mrs. Duffy was the guest of friends.

SCHOOL NOTES

School was kept open Tuesday as a matter of economy though it was a legal holiday. As there will be two or three school days this month when school must be necessarily closed. teaching on Tuesday will serve somewhat to counterbalance this.

The football boys and coach certainly have a right to feel elated over their championship honors. Crookston's defeat last Saturday clinched the district title. Mr. Johnson and the boys have worked faithfully and have sacrificed not a little to achieve this distinction for the school and community.

Notices have been sent to parents of delinquent high and grammar students announcing the failures of the pupils and the causes of same. These failures exist chiefly among children who attend irregularly and loiter about the streets evenings. It has already been stated and may be repeated that every high school pupil has home studies to prepare and parents can well afford to insist upon the preparation of these home tasks.

Even the teachers and the larger pupils are not immune to mumps, the prevailing, if not popular, school ailment this month.

The primary method of reading in use in the local schools is the Progressive. It is a system which combines most of the valuable features of the modern primary reading plans. However, regardless of plan or system, it is admitted that the greatest factor in primary reading, as in every study, is the teacher. The best system fails in the hands of a listless or careless instructor.

Bookkeeping is now a whole year study. This guarantees ample time for a mastery of at least the essential principles of the subject. Of the graduates of the commercial department, but one or two are known to have failed to make good in office positions.

Replies to a recent question relative to substitutes for mathematics in various well organized schools indicate that one year of mathematics is considered the minimum essential and science substitutes are to be prefered when substitutions must be made.

School taxes in this district constitute a trifle over one-third of the total tax. Ordinarily, they make up at least half of the total tax of a community.

Owen S. Johnson.

Owen S. Johnson, the 18 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Olé A. Johnson, died last Friday evening, death being due to peritonitis. The deceased had been a resident of Thief River Falls for only a short time, having formerly resided with his parents in Excel township. Funeral services were held in the Skomedal church in Excel, Rev. I. T. Aastad, pastor of the Synod church, officiating.

Where Is Your Corn Crop? In The Field Or In A Silo?

Of course it is too late to get a silo up and filled for this coming winter, but you can keep a record and see whether a silo would save you anything or not.

Feed is high now and probably will be all winter and it's quite likely to remain high next year so that your figures on feed costs this winter will be a very good indication for next year.

We have a great deal of information on the silo problem that we will be glad to furnish you so you can study the question for your farm intelligently.

It's a pretty good idea to settle the silo question one way or another during the winter time. Will be glad to see you about it soon.

An Interesting Brochure.

The Empire Farms company is this week having a particularly interesting pamphlet turned out on The Times presses. The little folder is in the shape of an enclosure and deals with the advantages offered ffin this neighborhood to those seeking homes. Testimonials from farmers already here, comments on the country by prominent visitors and excerpts dealing with local conditions taken from the Thief River Falls papers. It is a sane and conservative little document and will do more than its share in aiding the outsider to become acquainted with this, the most favored section in the world.

STRONG ON NET RESULTS

Success of Fourth of July Celebration Here Held Up as Sample of What Can be Accomplished When all Pull Together.

The benefits of a Commercial club that is alive to all the possibilities of the present day can secure for a city is ably set forth in the current number of Town Development, a magazine published in New York City, and which is now recognized as one of the best of its kind.

Again Thief River Falls has come to the front and in the issue above referred to is an article inspired by Fred T. Lincoln, formerly secretary of the Commercial club of this city. Therein is set forth the tactics adopted for the recent Fourth of July celebration, which were so beneficial to the band boys.

As a result of the various activities, the article says, the Commercial club "saved the band" and thereby achieved success. The article goes on to tell of the needs of the band, and how previous efforts had been made to keep the organization alive after having won the state championship among the amateur bands.

"The net results on an investment of $500 were as follows: All bills were paid in full by the committee, including prizes for the best floats, farmers' races, etc.; the band boys netted about $500 from the concessions and ball game, the committee paid the team $100 for the afternoon game, the fair association $100 to clean up an old debt of the year before, turned over a $200 check to the band in addition to what it had already received from concessions etc., and had a small balance with which to defray the expenses of the band on an auto run the day following to attend a county fair and pay a friendly call."

WILL HELP BOOST THE BIG MEETING

Red River Valley Development Association Will Take Active Part in Drainage Meeting.

The Minnesota Red River Valley Development association through its secretary, C. H. Zealand, has proffered its good services in promotion of the big drainage meeting to be held in this city the latter part of the month. The Development association is one of the strong organizations in this part of the country and has done much toward the development of this fertile region.

It is expected that more detailed information from the engineering department of the federal government at St. Paul will be received shortly, when detailed plans will be made for the meeting. On account of the late arrival of trains in Thief River Falls from the country to the west of the city, there is an effort being made to make the meeting a two days affair.

Has Taken Elgin Agency.

Martin Swanson has taken the agency in Thief River Falls for the Elgin and the Alter automobiles. These cars are among the best of the medium priced machines and Mr. Swanson expects to do a good business when spring again makes auto selling possible. The Elgin is a particularly capable machine, according to all accounts. One of these cars was used by the starter in the recent Chicago-to-Peoria run, when all the controls and starting points were made in record time and without mechanical troubles of any kind. Throughout the whole run the car maintained better than the average time in spite of mud and bad weather conditions.

The Alter car is a small machine suitable for any work generally allotted to the lower priced machines.

TENTH YEAR OPENS AT CROOKSTON AGGIE

Gasoline and Tractor Engineering to be Subject of Short Course for Coming Winter.

Announcements regarding student's short courses in farm husbandry, stock raising, gasoline and tractor engineering and dressmaking are being sent out by the Northwest school of Agriculture and will be mailed to anyone who makes application for them. In addition, an important announcement regarding scholarships offered by the school is in preparation. A new departure has been made in the music department whereby students can secure lessons in piano, voice and violin at greatly reduced rates.

The school opened its tenth year with an average enrollment. Great interest is being taken by the students in all lines of school work. Debating teams are already organized and prospects are exceedingly bright for the musical organizations, including the band, glee clubs, and orchestra. Two football teams are practicing every day. The school team has played a schedule of games this fall, and the members are making rapid progress in mastering the intricacies of the game.

If you suspect that coffee contributes to your discomfort or illness, ask the grocer for the names of several POSTUM users in your neighborhood; get in touch with them and hear their story.

This industry is still the mainstay of the region, but as Mr. Gill says, "It is a very substantial mainstay." While he doubts if that section possesses our opportunities for permanent development, there is no doubt but that everyone is busy and hopeful at this time.

Owing to the fact that his hand struck a fellow football player in the mouth, Perry Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Johnson, who reside south of the city, was unable to play last Saturday as the result of a poisoned hand. In Tuesday's Minneapolis Journal appeared a halftone of the Thief River boy and had the following to say: "Rude jesters have often aroused the indignation of the loyal football rooters and devotees by gibes insinuating that players chew each other's ears and are guilty of other equally playful habits. Minnesota has a player who is just now suffering from wounds inflicted by the teeth of one of the players on his squad. Perry Johnson, sub-quarter back, was unable to be in his uniform Saturday for the Illinois game, because he had a bad case of poisoning in the back of his hand. Johnson was throwing a forward pass and struck Jordan a scrub, who was attempting to block the heave. Johnson's hand struck Jordan on the mouth. Jordan lost three teeth and Johnson a few inches of skin. The wound on the back of his hand festered and gave him great annoyance, but is healing now."

THE MODEL STEAM LAUNDRY COMPANY

George BEBAN in "The Pawn of Fate"

Princess Theatre, Thursday, Nov. 16. Admission 25c. No seats reserved.

The concert given by the Chicago Operatic company, the second number on the Lyceum course, was a treat long to be remembered, and the people turned out in sufficient numbers to half fill the Auditorium although the entertainment warranted a larger attendance. The recital made a most favorable impression upon the audience, this being apparent by the hearty applause accorded each soloist or group of soloists. In each instance the handclapping was so great that an encore was rendered. Those in the company were: Miss Amy Neill, violinist; Miss Lillian Pringle, celliste; John B. Miller, tenor; Lyell Barber pianist; Miss Fredericka Downing, contralto; Miss Esther Nelson, soprano. Miss Nelson sang three solos, displaying a voice of great beauty and sympathetic quality as well as interpretative ability. The violinist, Miss Amy Neill, is a master of the instrument. In her solos she delighted the audience and her performance in company with the pianist and celliste was superb. Miss Pringle, celliste, gave her numbers with an interpretation that caused a great amount of applause. She also displayed a great mastery over her instrument. Mr. L. Barber, pianist, rendered several selections and held the audience spell-bound with his great technique and wonderfully sympathetic expression. Miss Fredericka Downing, contralto, possesses a warm, sympathetic voice, resonant and well under control. Messrs. John B. Miller, tenor, and G. Magnus Schultz, basso, appeared in separate solos, the former giving "Rudol's Arit" by Puccini, and the latter "Mephisto's Serenade" from Faust by Gounod. Mr. Miller, tenor, gave his numbers an interpretation that won him many admirers. His voice is true and of a sweetness that is heard very rarely among present day tenors. Mr. Schultz, basso, has a voice that is not of unlimited range, but of true base quality, and his conceptions and singing are quite convincing.

Sixty-five people were present at the "Get-To-Gether-Banquet" given by the Epworth league of the Methodist Episcopal church in the church basement last Monday.

A four course dinner was served, and a program rendered between the courses. Miss Velma Price appeared in a reading, after which Miss Dorothy Bottleson and Myrtle Berg sang a duet. The hit of the evening was a male quartet composed of Jim Prichard, Dave Gustafson, Herbert Connor, and Hugh Bottleson singing in "An Attempt at Harmony."

After the last course was served, the toasts were given, Jim Prichard officiating as toastmaster. The following were called upon for remarks: Pres. Dave Gustafson; Secy-Treas. Hugh Bottleson; Herbert Connor; Miss Mildred Ingle; Professor Werner; Ed. Brevig; Rev. Parish and Charles Prichard.

The league membership roll is constantly being increased by the addition of live, energetic young people; and with the "Get-To-Gether" spirit in mind, the Sunday evening meetings are always well attended. The League has a rosy future ahead of it.

The 23rd annual ball of the Thief River Falls Fire Department will be held at the Auditorium, Friday, November 24. The committee in charge of the event is composed of Messrs. James Farr, Oscar Lawson, George Curran and Fire Chief Paul Medderigh. Elaborate preparations are being made and it promises to be one of the social events of the season. Music will be furnished by Morck's orchestra.

U. C. T. Council No. 521 will give their annual ball at the Auditorium, Friday evening November 17. Affairs of this nature given by the "Knights of the Grip" are always known to please, and all efforts are being made by those in charge to eclipse former attempts. The travelingmen have chosen as their slogan: "Boost for Us, We Boost For You." Music will be furnished by Morck's orchestra.

Mrs. Andrew Bottleson entertained informally last Saturday afternoon about thirty-five ladies. The afternoon was pleasantly spent with neddlework. Delicious refreshments were served and a most enjoyable time was enjoyed by all present. Mrs. H. W. Froehlich and Mrs. T. P. Anderson assisted Mrs. Bottleson in serving.

Mesdames Stowell and Heiber gave the third of a series of parties last Saturday afternoon at the home of the latter. Cards formed the afternoon's entertainment.

Mrs. A. E. Cataline, 319 Duluth avenue north, entertained seven ladies at her home last Friday afternoon. The afternoon was spent at needlework, after which a delicious luncheon was served. Those present were: Mesdames C. M. Carlson, J. Brennon, O. J. Odin, R. B. Shetler, James Wiley, Fred Johnson and O. F. Halldin.

The next number on the Woman's Club calendar is a most attractive one. Professor F. H. Koch, head of the dramatic department of the university of North Dakota, will read "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with musical accompaniment. Those who heard Prof. Koch read "A Christmas Carol" last winter know that a treat is in store at this meeting which will be held in the Auditorium, Monday November 13th, at 2:30 p. m. promptly. Members of the woman's club will be admitted without charge. N9

Carl Ludwig Somer, of Rudolph, county, illinois, and Rosie Anna Tichi, of Pennington county, Numedal township, were united in marriage by Judge Tarrant Wednesday morning in municipal court. The witnesses were J. H. Tichi and Stephen Tichi, brothers of the bride. They contemplate residing in Numedal township.

Miss Rose Nelson entertained a number of young ladies at her home at Main avenue north Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Mae Johnson, of Loda, Illinois, who is visiting with her brother, Mortey. The evening was spent in conversation and sewing. Refreshments were served.

On Monday afternoon occurred the marriage of Bjorn Tveitbakk and Ida Christina Aasen, Rev. I. T. Aastad officiating. The witnesses were: Ole J. Olson and Annie Olson. They will make their future home at WanKe.

Misses Belle and Marie Hermanson entertained the "Do Drop In" club at their home Monday evening. The young ladies spent the evening in doing fancy work. Light refreshments were served.

Miss Gilma Ostvolden entertained the Dorcas society of the United church in the church basement Tuesday evening November 7. There was a good attendance.

CARD OF THANKS.

It is a comfort to know that where best known, I received majorities for the position of Probate Judge, towit:

I thank all voters in the county who favored my candidacy; and, especially those who actuated by [illegible] purest motives, talked or wrote in [illegible] behalf.

IRA. C. RICHA[illegible]ON,
Dated Nov. 9. 1916.

"The Avenging Conscience."

On Saturday evening, Nov. 11th, will be shown at the Princess theatre at this place, that superb six-reel motion picture drama, "The Avenging Conscience," directed by the world famed picture genius, D. W. Griffth, the man that produced that most famous screen-picturization of all times, "The Birth of A Nation." Many of the leading stars who took part in the production of that most elaborate of photo-plays are also shown in "The Avenging Conscience." The picture is adapted from Edgar Allen Poe's "Tell Tale Heart," and "Annabel Lee."

"The Avenging Conscience" is a drama of the mind, completely visualized throughout and with a connected story. Though it deals with the penance inflicted upon a murderer by his own conscience, this penance is so personfied that the result is a very graphic narrative. This is brought out by the use of some extraordinary photographic effects which show the dead man returning to haunt the living murderer, who imagines among other things that he can still hear the heatr beating of the dead man. The plot as a whole is too lengthy to narrate in this space. In the picture it is most beautifully developed and will keep the interest of an audience at a high pitch through the show. No one who loves "movies" can afford to miss this picture for it is one of the highest class being shown on the screen today. Make your arrangements so that you can be at the Princess to see this elaborate photo-play Saturday evening, Nov. 11, show starting at eight o'clock sharp.

School Board Proceedings

Regular meeting of the board of education held at the office of the clerk on Nov. 6th, 1916. The following members were present:

W. W. PRICHARD,
LARS BACKE,
H. S. DAHLEN,
F. H. GAMBELL,
C. A. PITKIN,
SUPT. J. H. HAY.

Absent:
O. F. MELLBY.

The minutes of the previous meetings of Oct. 4th, Oct. 10, and Oct. 16th were read and approved as read.

Mrs. J. M. Bishop, Mrs. L. Larson, and Mrs. C. A. Pitkin representing the Public Health association and Woman's Club appeared before the Board in support of a plan to procure a community visiting nurse. They advocated as a small beginning of such plans that the expense of such nurse be divided between the school district, the city government, and the county government, and that the services of the nurse be apportioned between these three divisions. It was moved by Backe and seconded by Pitkin that the Board appropriate $30.00 per month toward the services of a nurse under such plan. Those voting 'aye' upon said motion were: Prichard, Backe, Pitkin. 'No,' Dahlen. Gambell not voting. The president ruled that the vote of the members present not voting must be construed as voting "aye" and declared the motion carried unless Dr. Gambell desired to vote. Whereupon Gambell voted "no" and the president declared the motion lost.

Upon unanimous vote the following bills were allowed and ordered paid.

Mostue, County Supt. of schools of Pennington county, dated Oct. 10th, 1916, notifying the Board that district No. 73 of Pennington county had duly voted to associate with district No. 18. The following resolution was offered by Dahlen:

RESOLVED, That the Board of Education of Independent School District No. 18 approve of the association with this district of Rural School District No. 73, Pennington County, which said district has duly voted to associate, and that a copy of this resolution be filed with the County Superintendent of Schools.

107 years old and never rode on a Railroad.

A backwoodsman died recently at the age of 107. The newspapers commented on the fact that he had never ridden on a railroad. He never knew what he missed.

There are people in Thief River Falls today who have never been in the New Princess Theatre. They don't know what they are missing, and will not realize their loss until they are measured by the fellow they are all trying to dodge.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE

By Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes

Copyright, 1916, by Adelaide M. Hughes

SYNCPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, with his daughter Gloria, is wintering at Palm Beach. Gloria is a vivacious but willful young lady who chafes under the restraining hand of a governess from whom she repeatedly escapes. Her childish capers cause young Doctor Royce to fall in love with her. Becoming lost in the everglades she falls into the hands of the Seminole Indians. She is rescued and returned to her father. Gloria falls in love with her rescuer, Freneau. Five years later she leaves school and meets Freneau at the theater; he has forgotten Gloria. Gloria feels that her one dream is shattered. Later Freneau persuades her to forgive him. Gloria's sister-in-law, Lois, becomes intensely jealous and Doctor Royce discovers in her an ally. Doctor Royce warns Freneau. Freneau goes sleighing with Gloria. It results in pneumonia for Gloria, whose family becomes incensed at Freneau when they learn the truth. Royce is summoned to alleviate Gloria's suffering. Freneau's finances being low he approaches Pierpont Stafford for a loan. Doctor Royce again warns Freneau of his conduct. But Lois, learning of Freneau's betrothal to Gloria, threatens him with dire punishment. Her husband, Gloria's brother David, becomes suspicious. Freneau driven to desperation by Lois' threats agrees to spend a week with her in the Catskills. He plans to have Mulry send Gloria a bunch of telegrams. Lois' husband threatens to kill a man. After Freneau takes leave of Gloria she sees from her window an attack made upon him when he goes to meet Lois. Doctor Royce convinces her that what she has seen is the result of delirium. Later a telegram, followed by a letter, comes from Freneau. She replies but her telegrams are returned. The first morning she is allowed from her room, she accidently sees the supposed suicide of Freneau reported in the paper. Then Gloria swears to find the murderer of her lover. Royce becomes alarmed and tells what he knows of Freneau to Mr. Stafford. Together they seek to prevent scandal from enveloping Gloria. She accuses them in her mind of conspiracy against her. Gloria sets about to run down Freneau's murderer. Royce warns Mulry to tell Gloria nothing. Gloria calls on Mulry and there sees Lois who also is worried. Gloria's suspicions are aroused. Royce endeavors to show her the difficulty she faces.

ELEVENTH EPISODE

The Fugitive Witness.

Aroused from its winter sleep, David's country house was aglow with good cheer. Gloria, her father, Doctor Royce, and David and Lois had come up to play for a little, to throw off the family tragedy and the formal duties of their city life, and to forget themselves boisterously in the open.

For men and women resting in the shadow of a crime they behaved strangely like children turned out in the yard to play after a rainy day's imprisonment. They ran through the house shouting hilariously to one another as they found their skates and wraps for a trip to the frozen swimming pool. The dogs added greatly to the excitement by loud barkings of "Come on out" and by a remarkable gift for getting in the way.

No one played harder than Gloria. She was trying to convince the others that she had put the mourning off her mind as well as her body. She wanted to find out what her people were concealing from her, and why.

The Stafford family lark was soon invaded by neighbors. A tobogganing party from another country house appeared. There were no invitations or only mumbled words, for ceremony had no place among flying snowballs, and dignity could not be kept up after a bump on the ice.

Gloria found herself the victim of the attentions of a large, jovial man whose playfulness was a little too heavy for her liking. She was about to snub him when someohe casually alluded to him as Frank Mulry.

Gloria staggered in the snow at meeting thus by chance the man she had tried in vain to overtake in town. Mulry, never imagining who she was, thought that she had slipped on the icy snow; he put out his hand to catch her. Mulry was always ready for flirtation. Preparedness was Mulry's motto.

Gloria studied him a moment. This was the partner of her murdered lover. He was too amiable of mien to be accusable of such a crime. She acquitted him of wishing to do away with Freneau. In fact, the papers said that Freneau's death had nearly wrecked the firm. Mulry did not look bankrupt. Gloria did not know that her father had given a large sum of money to Freneau a few days before his death and that Murly was living on that.

There was a shifty flippancy in Mulry's eyes and manner that made Gloria distrust him. She felt a little added distrust of her dead lover for having such a man as a partner. The hateful proverb about "birds of a feather" ran through her mind like a tune In any case, here at last was the man she sought, and she was impatient to question him. There were too many people on the crest of the hill to permit of conversation there. So she dared him to a toboggan ride.

He accepted. She got aboard and he steered. They swooped like a descending airship. But at the foot of the hill the toboggan careened and slid them deep into the drift before it capsized.

Mulry, for all his bulk, was agile and he was soon helping Gloria to her feet.

"Thank you a million times, Mr. Mulry," she said. "You saved me from drowning in the snow."

He beamed and congratulated himself on making such success with this pretty creature. He had not recognized her. He had seen photographs of her in Freneau's possession and he had seen her at the opera. But she was disguised to him now by her close-fitting cap, her rough sports suit and, most of all, by her coquettish smiles. Suddenly he had to leap for his life to escape another scooting toboggan. On it were David and Lois and a young man from the same house party of which Mulry was a member.

"Hurt yourself, Gloria?" David sang out.

"Did you get hurt, Miss Stafford?" the other young man cried.

Gloria shook her head and called after them, not noticing that Mulry's eyes were popping and his jaw drooping. He had pieced the name together. "Gloria Stafford!" He had come up here to escape her and he had just coasted down the hill with her, and she knew his name! He remembered Doctor Royce's warning of the danger of meeting Gloria face to face.

He pretended to be suddenly ill. He begged Gloria's pardon and said that he must go home. He was too big for Gloria to hold and she could not run after him without attracting attention. She stood bewildered while he got away.

Later she telephoned to his host and asked to speak to him. She learned that he had just taken a motor to the train.

Gloria forgot her suspicions of Lois in her newer suspicions of this man Mulry. He was evidently running away from her. Therefore she must pursue him. His flight was evidence of some mysterious guilt.

Gloria cut short her visit to the country and announced her intention of going back to town at once. Her father and her brother were used to her whims and did not oppose them nowadays out of pity for her.

The next morning Gloria made another journey to Mulry's office. She went early within business hours. The stenographer told her that Mr. Mulry had gone to Palm Beach the night before with a rich client who had invited him to be his guest.

Gloria was furious at this new escape. She pondered it all the way home. When she saw her father she told him that he was not looking at all well; he needed some golf and surf bathing. He ought to go to Palm Beach. He accepted the suggestion heartily. He was more than willing to undertake the golf and he was eager to get Gloria out of the region of her sorrow. He was so worried over her swift alternation of gloom and gayety that he invited Doctor Royce to came along as a member of the family party. He did not have to ask Royce twice.

Gloria had not been to Florida during the last five years. To her it was not so much a flight from her romance as a return to its birthplace. It was at Palm Beach that she had met her fate. It was there that she had made her girlish escapade in David's racing car, and wrecked it in the everglades. It was there that she had wandered into the heart of the wilderness and into the heart of the young Seminole chief who would have forced her to be his squaw, if her brave Freneau had not rescued her from him. And now her lover, who had escaped the dangers of the jungle, had been slain on Riverside drive; her romance had ended in vanity and despair.

A little more gorgeous, perhaps, but all the gloomier for that. She had come from the white winter of the North into the sudden July of Florida, and her heart ached anew remembering how love had bloomed in her life under the tropical sun of Freneau's eyes. It was like going over an old album of souvenirs to revisit the scenes of that far-off yesterday. The same throngs seemed to be dancing the same dances, bounding through the same waves, still sipping their tea under the palms in the royal gardens of the Poinciana.

She had almost forgotten her purpose in coming here when she caught sight of Frank Mulry's broad back. He was rolling along briskly. She did not know that he had caught sight of her first and made off in disgust and amazement at her discovery of his new retreat.

She dared not run after him and she could not keep pace with him. She lost him in the maze of the bazaars. Later she saw him riding in one of the rolling chairs propelled by darkies on wheels—the familiar "afromobiles" of Palm Beach.

Poor Mulry was winded by his speed and he wanted to get to his host's cottage. But he caught a glimpse of Gloria, also chartering an afromobile. To his horror her afromobile made after his. He dared not put back to his hotel. He ordered his driver to turn down a bowered path and to give him all the steam the black could afford.

The motorman was vigorous, but the passenger was heavy. Gloria was light, but her African was weak. It was anybody's race with every prospect of a spill for one jockey or the other, since the paths were filled with dawdling strollers and the bicycle had come back into fashion. Everywhere women in exquisite dresses were roving about on pedals. Dozens of other afromobiles also cluttered the race course. Now, Gloria gained and was about to head off her man; when a messenger boy on a wheel cut in ahead and it was necessary for Gloria's chauffeur to back pedal wildly or endure collision.

Mulry would shoot ahead and rejoice at his triumph, only to find himself in a tangle of pedestrians. His one-darky power machine began to feel the effects of his bulky cargo. Mulry applied gasoline in the form of a dollar bill brandished in front of popping, white eyeballs, and that gave him the advantage for a time. But even money cannot furnish everlasting power, and the heavy breathing back of him told Mulry that his engine was about to die.

He looked back and saw that Gloria's car had taken a wrong turn and shot down another avenue. He gave three silent cheers for himself.

Thus ended one of the most bloodcurdling rolling-chariot races since Ben-Hur's day. Mulry paid his exhausted man well and took the nearest way to the cottage where he was guest. He did not leave it that night, and it was well, for Gloria hunted for him everywhere.

She would not dance, though many asked her. The music hurt her cruelly. She remembered how she had wanted to dance that moonlit night so long ago, but had been put to bed by her heartless governess. She remembered how she had suffered till she could bear it no longer, and had risen to dress in the dark and steal out, leaving her governess a-snore.

She had envied David his liberty and had stolen the car that David brought round so that he might take Judge Freeman's daughter Lois for a moonlight spin—and spoon. Gloria had not prevented David from marrying Lois, and she had run herself into a series of adventures that had promised everything wonderful only to stop short in black disaster. Her poor, brave, patient lover would dance no more, smile at her no more. Love was gone from her life already and she was only twenty.

Frank Mulry did not dance that night, either. He sat at his window, listening to the music and wondering how long this game of hide and seek would last. He was tempted to go out and surrender to this young girl who was stalking him with such relentless stealth.

But he thought of the money her father had given to Freneau and he was afraid he would have to give it up. He thought of his share in Freneau's trickery and the ugly look it would have in court. He beat his fat head for some clever lie that would explain everything gracefully, but no inspiration came and he went to bed like a spanked and supperless child.

The next morning Mulry looked out late upon the flood of sunlight gilding the liquid emerald sea. The breakers called to him. He could not resist the summons. He stole down a corridor and along an unfrequented walk to a bathhouse. He unpeeled his clothes and squeezed into a bathing suit and so made into the ocean. Friends of his lolling on the beach said that the water rose when he went in and fell when he came out. But Mulry was happy. He wallowed and dived like a porpoise till he was blissfully weary, then he stretched himself on the sand for an Oriental snooze.

He heard a voice that sounded familiar. He sat up. Gloria was coming along the beach directly toward him. In her sea clothes she was an approval of all eyes except Mulry's. He did not make the mistake of the ostrich. He buried his entire self in the sand and tried to hold his breath till Gloria got past. Luck was against him and she casually stepped on him as she crossed his equator.

When she had gone, he exhumed himself hastily and made for the water to clear off the sand that loaded him. Just as he set his toe in the first froth Gloria sighted him. He could tell by her start that she recognized him. He ran into the waves, she followed. He dived through the first breaker and a second and a third. When he looked back she was not to be seen. He laughed and began to float—which was the easiest thing he did. Suddenly he saw a red turban come through the wall of a big billow. Under it appeared Gloria's face. Mulry struck out to sea Gloria came crawling after. He was astonished to see how well she swam But he swam well, too.

He wondered if he would have to cross the Atlantic and he regretted the necessity of landing in Europe with his bathing suit and nothing else. He was still at some distance from Europe when he suddenly felt a twinge of pain in his ankle—then in his knee—in both knees. He was doubling up with cramp! He knew real fear now. He looked back to shore and the far-off, misty crowd. He shouted for help. Nobody heard him except Gloria, and he placed no reliance in her.

She called to him, but he was past answering. Gloria had been raised an athlete and her brother David had taught her how to rescue drowning people. But her first practical demonstration alarmed her. She had not counted on so huge a barge to take in tow.

She set up a cry to shore. No one heard her. No one missed her except one man. Doctor Royce was looking for her. That was not strange. He was almost always looking for her or at her. Pierpont did not know where she was. David and Lois had no idea of her whereabouts. She was not among the crowds on the beach.

Royce stared out into the farther waters. Se saw her turban—or at least he was afraid that it was hers. He saw her put up her hand, though he could not hear her cry.

He howled to the life-saver in the boat and pointed to where Gloria swam with one hand, the other clutching at Mulry's collar. The life-saver bent to the oars; the shallop slipped across the waves and Royce plunged in and swam with all his might, diving through the white caps, cresting the big rollers. The life-saver checked his boat alongside Mulry, took him from Gloria, hauled him over the stern seat, and left him face down, heels in air, while he offered his hand to Gloria. Gloria shook her head. She felt better for having saved a life. She underestimated the distance to shore. She ordered the life-saver to make haste with Mulry.

"Take good care of him," she shouted. "He belongs to me."

The life-saver thought she meant that he was her husband. He thought it a pity that so pretty a girl should have so much husband. But he did as he was told and hurried Mulry ashore.

Gloria felt lonely and afraid when the boat was gone. She wondered if she could make the land. She did not really care, her life was too sad. She was beginning to droop and fail when Royce appeared at her side and set her hands on his strong shoulders. She liked him better than she thought she did. He swam magnificently. He saved her and she was glad to be saved.

When at last she staggered ashore and her father embraced her, wet as she was, she looked about for Mulry. He was gone. The life-saver had revived him and he had tottered away.

Gloria did not know whom he was visiting. He was not in the hotel registers. She did not know that he had gone to his friend's cottage, slammed his clothes in his trunk and suitcase, and returned North.

* * * * * * *

One of the picturesque features of Palm Beach life is the presence now and then of Seminole Indians, who come up from the everglades to sell baskets and other samples of their craft, rattlesnake skins, and trinkets of various sorts. Among those who stood offering bargains of the sort were the young chief who wanted to marry Gloria and the old squaw whose horse Gloria had tried to steal. They recognized her when they saw her wandering slowly along looking for Mulry.

Gloria paused and stared at them. She did not recognize them at first and stopped to price a souvenir of her captivity. But she noted the wild glare in the eye of the romantic peddler and suddenly remembered her swarthy suitor of five years ago. Her old fear came back to her for the moment. She started to escape. The chief clutched her hand and compelled her to pause. She was hardly reassured by his soft words.

"Don't be 'fraid. Nice squaw, nice squaw."

She could think of nothing to say. He did the talking.

"Many years since squaw run off. You got husband yet?"

Gloria shook her head and sighed. The chief sighed, too—with relief. He spoke grandiosely. "All right. You marry me now?"

Gloria was almost as much embarrassed by this second proposal in the Poinciana gardens as she had been by the first in the everglades. She could not imagine what to say. The chief crowded closer to her. Suddenly his face hardened as he looked past her. He clenched his fists and reached for a knife. Gloria followed his eyes and saw Doctor Royce in the distance. She wondered why the chief should hate him. The chief explained with a dog's snarl.

"That man nearly kill me once. He take you from me."

Gloria pointed to Royce questioningly. The chief nodded. Gloria protested. She would not permit the glory of her rescue to be taken from her dead love. "No, no; it wasn't that man. It was this one," she cried, and caught from her gown a little portrait of Freneau in a locket.

The chief clutched it and looked hard. The chief's lip curled with scorn. He laughed—almost.

"Him? Humph! Him white liver! Him run! That man there hand me big wallop. Ugh!"

Gloria was indignant. The chief described with vivid pantomime and guttural words the true history of her rescue, his own proposal of marriage, Gloria's swooning with terror, Freneau's arrival, his terrified retreat before the chief's advance. The struggle for the chief's knife, and finally the tremendous uppercut that had knocked the chief. Meanwhile, during the fight, he had caught glimpses of Freneau's hasty gathering up of Gloria and his escape with her, leaving Royce to his fate.

Gloria was aghast at the story. As the chief went on with it Royce sauntered up and paused. The chief turned on him and was about to attack him. Royce fell into an attitude of self-defense, but smiled and spoke soothingly and put out his hand. The chief took it. He was a good sportsman and so was Royce.

Gloria looked from Royce to the picture of Freneau in her locket. A terrible doubt of Freneau assailed her. She seized Royce by the arm and dragged him to one side, demanding:

"It was you that saved me. Why didn't you tell me?"

Royce looked sheepish and shrugged his shoulders. He did not know just what to say. Gloria looked at the locket with hideous new suspicion, then turned and hurried away with tears springing to her eyelids.

Royce stared after her adoringly.

Gloria wandered far down the beach alone. She was in a hopeless frame of mind. She dropped to the sand brooding over the crumbling of her hero's glory. From the sea the ghost of Freneau seemed to come to her and, kneeling by her, take her in his arms. She thrust him away, crying:

"Coward! Cad! Liar!"

The ghost retreated sadly into the sea. Gloria wept over the picture in her locket.

Royce, coming along the beach, found her. He knelt down at her side. Gloria turned to him with the old question:

"Why didn't you tell me that it was you who saved me, and not Dick?"

Royce gazed into her sad eyes pityingly. He was unable to deal the death blow to her trust in her dead lover. He spoke gently.

"It was Freneau that found you and saved you. I arrived a little too late, and I simply held off the Indian chief while Freneau made sure of your safety."

Gloria studied him with a longing to believe in Freneau. He did not flinch. She thanked him and he rose sadly and walked away. He had lied to her because he loved her. But his heart was almost bursting with protest against the sacrifice.

When he had gone, Gloria put out her arms to the sea, crying:

"Dick, Dick, forgive my suspicions and come back to me!"

From the waves Freneau seemed to come forth again and, sitting down beside her, take her in his arms. She wept, then rose and accompanied by his ghost, moved slowly and sadly along the beach.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Dire Possibility.

"Maybe it's lucky they didn't have moving pictures when Shakespeare wrote."

"Why?"

"He'd probably have put Hamlet into the form of a 's'nario' and left the poetry out."

Quite So.

"What is the difference between a horse track enthusiast and a strawberry grower?"

"I suppose the principal difference is that while one is trying to pick the winners the other is trying to win the pickers."

Preparedness.

Bill—He always carries a parachute about with him.

Jill—What for?

"Oh, he makes so many rash statements he wants to be prepared to let himself down easy."

MINNESOTA MAY DECIDE STRUGGLE

Vote on Presidency Is Very Close.

BURNQUIST WINS EASY

Governor Carries State by Over 100,000 Majority---Kellogg Secures Senatorship.

St. Paul, Nov. 9.—With returns from the country precincts coming in faster than at any previous time since the closing of the polls indications are that Hughes will win the Minnesota vote by at least 10,000 majority.

The Minnesota result is almost certain to turn the scales for the Republican candidate, giving him the electoral votes necessary to victory.

The figures defining Frank B. Kellogg's victory in the three-cornered contest for Minnesota's United States senatorship continue to grow as the returns come in from over the state and his total plurality is estimated at between 25,000 and 30,000.

With the exception of the Fourth district, where Congressman Van Dyke's runaway victory over Darius F. Reese was a surprise even to the congressman and his friends, there were few incidents of an exciting nature in the congressional race.

Minnesota's representation in the national house will maintain its political complexion, with eight Republicans in addition to Mr. Van Dyke, the lone Democrat, and Thomas D. Schall, Progressive.

FRANK B. KELLOGG.

Governor Burnquist has overwhelmed his opponents. His plurality, in all probability, will be more than 125,000, and it may reach 150,000.

Although James H. Quinn is leading his opponent, W. B. Anderson, for associate justice of the supreme court, the result of the election is in doubt.

BADGER STATE IN THE REPUBLICAN COLUMN

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 9.—Wisconsin's electoral votes will be cast for Charles Evans Hughes, the state having given him an estimated plurality of 20,000 over President Wilson.

United States Senator Robert M. La Follette, Republican, returns to the upper house of congress with a plurality estimated at 45,000 over William F. Wolfe, Democrat.

Governor Emanuel L. Philipp, Republican, succeeds himself, having defeated Burt Williams, his Democratic opponent, by an estimated plurality of 40,000. Governor Philipp, the returns indicate, will have a safe majority in both houses of the legislature.

Republicans have been elected in at least nine congressional districts in Wisconsin, with two districts, the Second and Fourth, still in doubt.

FIVE MORE STATES GO DRY

Anti-Saloon League Claims Big Victory at Polls.

Columbus, O., Nov. 9.—Headquarters of the Anti-Saloon league at Westerville, a suburb, reported it had information that the dry forces had won state-wide prohibition fights in five states.

The states named were: Michigan, Montana, South Dakota, Utah and Nebraska—Michigan by 80,000.

GOVERNOR BURNQUIST.

HUGHES CARRIES NEW YORK BY 100,000

New York, Nov. 9.—New York state gave Hughes a plurality of 100,000 or more and re-elected Governor Whitman by an even larger vote. All the rest of the Republican state ticket won by large pluralities, including the candidate for United States senator.

Returns from all but 282 out of a total of 5,807 election districts give Hughes 836,444; Wilson, 735,288, a Republican plurality of 101,136. Governor Whitman's plurality over his Democratic opponent, Samuel Seabury, with 528 districts missing, is 132,233. The totals are: Whitman, 773,906; Seabury, 641,673.

William H. Calder of Brooklyn, Republican candidate for United States senator, polled 683,353 votes against 508,742 for his opponent, William F. McCombs, former chairman of the Democratic national committee.

The New York delegation in the next national house of representatives, as indicated by present returns, will be: Republicans, twenty-five; Democrats, seventeen, with one district, the twelfth, still in doubt.

VAN LEAR MILL CITY MAYOR

Socialist Chosen Chief Executive of Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Nov. 9.—Minneapolis will have a Socialist mayor for the next two years.

Thomas Van Lear defeated Otto Langum for the office by a majority of 3,500.

The election closed one of the most bitter local campaigns in the history of Minneapolis. Mr. Langum, who has been sheriff of Hennepin county for several years, was supported by the citizens' mayoralty committee, an organization composed of members of all parties other than Socialist.

ILLINOIS RETURNS TO REPUBLICAN COLUMN

Chicago, Nov. 9.—With Illinois back in the Republican column election officials resumed the task of counting and tabulating what they believe might prove the largest vote ever cast by any state.

Women voting for the first time for president in Illinois swelled the total vote cast in the state to approximately 1,765,000. In 1912 New York set a record by polling 1,439,969 votes.

The Republican success in the state was sweeping. Frank O. Lowden, Republican candidate for governor, defeated Governor Edward F. Dunne, Democrat incumbent, by an estimated plurality only slightly under that rolled up by Hughes.

The Republicans also elected their candidates for congressman-at-large, Medill McCormick, and former United States Senator William E. Mason and fifteen other congressmen, to the Democrats four, with six districts still in doubt. This is a net gain for the Republicans of three congressmen.

SOUTH IS FIRMLY IN LINE

Gives Wilson the Usual Democratic Majorities.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 9.—President Wilson was given the usual substantial Democratic majorities in the election in the Southern states of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas.

The Democrats gained at least one seat in congress in the defeat of James J. Britt, Republican, by Zebulon Weaver, Democrat.

Senator Dupont Defeated.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 9.—Returns show that Hughes carried Delaware by about 800. Senator Dupont was defeated by Josiah O. Wolcott, Democrat, by 900 to 1,000.

Necessary to elect, 266.

New York, Nov. 9.—The presidential race is so close that the weight of a hair will give the victory to either Hughes or Wilson.

Although both sides claim majorities in the electoral college there seems nevertheless to be a feeling that there is a chance that the determination of the final result, with so many states doubtful, might be prolonged perhaps for another day, and there was unofficial talk that the decision might eventually be thrown into the house of representatives.

There were suggestions also that there might be in some states bitter contests over the integrity of the returns, which might be drawn out for days, with the result hinging on a recount.

George W. Perkins, at Republican headquarters, commenting upon the close vote in some states, declared that a recount might be necessary.

Democratic Chairman McCormick sent telegrams to every state and county where the result appears close, commanding them to personally see that the ballot boxes are guarded and protected.

Mr. McCormick claims "the Solid South," with Arizona, 3; California, 13; Colorado, 6; Idaho, 4; Maryland, 8; Missouri, 18; Minnesota, 12; Montana, 4; North Dakota, 5; Nebraska, 8; Nevada, 3; New Hampshire, 4; New Mexico, 3; Utah, 4; Washington, 7, and Wyoming, 3. Total, 288.

Three States Not Included.

"Delaware, South Dakota and Indiana are not included in this list," the chairman said. "The chances are better than ever to get two of these states. McCormick declined to say which two states he had in mind.

Hughes' early plurality of 22,634 in New Jersey, President Wilson's own state, with 777 districts missing, was reduced to 9,196 with the receipt of returns from 315 of these missing districts. The president's total vote with 462 missing districts is 184,660; Hughes, 193,856.

The Kansas City (Mo.) Star, which supported Hughes, concedes Kansas to Wilson by about 15,000.

A statement issued by T. B. Kennedy, secretary of the Wyoming state Republican committee, read: "The returns indicate that Wilson and Kendrick have carried Wyoming."

Wilson appeared to have carried the state of Washington by more than 10,000. Senator Poindexter, Republican, may have 50,000 majority over Turner, Democrat, for senator. Governor Lister, Democrat, maintains his lead over McBride, Republican, his majority in one-third of the state being 1,700.

How the States Line Up.

There seemed to be no doubt that President Wilson had carried Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah and Virginia.

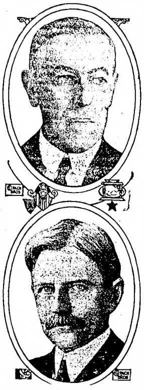
In the Hughes column were counted Connecticut, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont and Wisconsin.

From the doubtful states the returns continued to point first to one candidate and then to the other.

Although New England returns supported the predictions of a Republican victory, as the ballot counting started in the Middle West and on the coast, it was evident that President Wilson was far from defeat, that the Hughes landslide was entirely confined to the East, and that in the states which will make up the majority in the electoral college a very close race was being run.

WILSON AND MARSHALL.

Appear to Be Leading In Close Presidential. Race.



OPPOSING MANAGERS CONTINUE CONFIDENT

New York, Nov. 9.—Chairman Willcox of the Republican national committee, issued this statement:

"California and Minnesota are surely for Hughes. This means Hughes is elected."

The statement, he said, was based upon advices from the respective state headquarters claiming California by 10,000 and Minnesota by 20,000.

New York, Nov. 9.—Democratic Chairman McCormick said:

"When the count is finished Wilson will have more than 300 electoral votes."

He added that his advices were that West Virginia had gone Democratic by 10,000.

From O. K. Cushing, chairman of the Democratic state committee of California, Chairman McCormick received this telegram:

"Count continues to increase our confidence that Wilson will carry state."

NEW MEXICO VERY CLOSE

Official Count May Be Necessary to Decide

Albuquerque, N. M., Nov. 9.—The contest for this state's three electoral votes is so close that it may take an official count to decide. Democratic leaders are claiming the state for Wilson from 1,000 to 3,000.

Republicans do not concede this.

Wilson Goes Golfing.

Long Branch, N. J., Nov. 9.—President Wilson remained at Shadow Lawn during most of the morning receiving returns, and then went golfing with Mrs. Wilson. Although the outcome was still uncertain when he left, no efforts were made to supply him with returns while he was playing.

CONTROL OF SENATE IS REDUCED

Democrats Seem to Have It by Two.

LIPPETT LOSS SURPRISE

Partial Returns Point to More Losses for Democrats in Lower House.

New York, Nov. 9.—With the presidency in doubt the political complexion of congress also was undecided and party leaders were anxiously awaiting complete returns before definite claims could be made, although it appeared that the Democrats would retain control of the senate without question by a reduced majority.

With nearly seventy-six congressional districts still in doubt the Republicans had made a new gain of six, capturing nineteen Democratic districts, while the Democrats had taken ten from the Republicans.

Without further upsets this would reduce the present Democratic house majority of twenty-three to eleven. Republican leaders, however, insisted they would win the house. They claim a gain of several seats in Indiana and two in Michigan.

Practically complete returns showed the Democrats certainly have lost four United States senators, one each in Maine, New York, New Jersey and Maryland, while they gained one each in Rhode Island, Delaware and Utah.

HENRY F. LIPPITT.

Indications pointed strongly to a further Democratic loss of two senators in Indiana, one in West Virginia and Arizona, and possibly one in Ohio and Montana.

To offset this in the possibilities the election of Republican senators in Wyoming and New Mexico had not been assured.

If the Republicans and Democrats should lose all these, as indicated, the senate still would remain Democratic by two, forty-nine Democrats to forty-seven Republicans. The Democratic majority in the present senate is sixteen.

The most surprising development in the senatorial contest was the defeat of Senator Henry F. Lippett, Republican of Rhode Island, by Peter Golet Gerry, Democrat, as the state otherwise went Republican.

WILSON CARRIES NEBRASKA

State Selects Democratic Governor and Senator.

Omaha, Nov. 9.—Nebraska gave Wilson an estimated majority of 20,000 votes, elected a Democratic senator and a Democratic governor, it is claimed, and divided its representatives in congress equally between the two major parties. The state went dry by an estimated majority of 25,000.

WILSON SWEEPS MONTANA

Democrats Also Elect United States Senator and Governor.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 9.—President Wilson appears to have swept Montana. United States Senator Henry L. Myers seems assured of re-election by a majority of at least 15,000, while the election of Governor Sam V. Stewart to succeed himself, is assured by at least 6,000.

LYNN J. FRAZIER.

Republican Chosen Governor of North Dakota.

PRESIDENT WILSON GETS NORTH DAKOTA

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 9.—Wilson will carry North Dakota by several hundred.

The Fargo Forum, Republican, supporting Hughes, announced that the state was undoubtedly for Wilson.

Approximately half the vote of the state gives Wilson 1,041 majority.

The Nonpartisan League elected its entire state ticket by sweeping pluralities—Frazier for governor by 40,000 or better; Casey, the only Democrat on its ticket, for state treasurer, by 20,000, and its supreme court candidates, on whom a bitter fight was made, by 25,000 to 30,000.

McCumber, United States senator, defeats Burke by 15,000.

SOUTH DAKOTA GOES DRY

Prohibitionists Carry State — Also Woman Suffragists.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 9.—South Dakota's five votes in the electoral college probably will go for Charles E. Hughes.

Latest available returns give Hughes 34,452 and Wilson 29,301. If this ratio is maintained Hughes' plurality in the state should be about 15,000.

The prohibition amendment carried by a majority estimated at from 15,000 to 30,000 and the woman suffrage amendment by 8,000.

EASY WIN IN BUCKEYE STATE

Wilson Captures Ohio by More Than 80,000 Votes.

Cincinnati, Nov. 9.—President Wilson will carry Ohio by more than 80,000, if the ratio of voting continues which has prevailed throughout the state, except for the temporary lead that returns from Cincinnati gave Hughes.

While there is no doubt that Wilson has carried the state, both sides are claiming they have elected a governor, senator and a complete state ticket.

Five congressional races in the state remained in doubt.

REPUBLICANS CARRY INDIANA

Hughes Gets Hoosier State by Over 10,000.

Indianapolis, Nov. 9.—Returns show Hughes still leading Wilson in Indiana by 10,379. Out of 3,142 districts in the state, 2,168 gave Hughes 253,143, and Wilson 242,764. While Republican state headquarters claimed that Hughes carried Indiana by 25,000, more conservative estimates placed the plurality between 10,000 and 15,000.

WILSON LEADS IN KANSAS

Capper Re-elected Governor by Immense Plurality.

Topeka, Kas., Nov. 9.—Returns from seventy out of seventy-two counties give Wilson a lead of 350. Governor Arthur Capper has been re-elected by a 2 to 1 vote. Republican headquarters is claiming his re-election by 125,000 plurality, the largest ever given a Kansas governor.

Total Vote in Bay State.

Boston, Nov. 9.—The vote of Massachusetts complete was as follows: Hughes, 268,361; Wilson, 247,327. For governor, McCall, Republican, 274,853; Mansfield, Democrat, 220,175. For senator: Lodge, Republican, 266,-4476; Fitzgerald, Democrat, 234,466.

SPORT PROGRAM IS GIVEN BOOST

FREE FOR THE CHILDREN

Furnishing of Light May Prove a Stumbling Block—But One Member of Last Year's Championship Team Now In City.

Outdoor sports in general was up for discussion Monday evening at the Commercial club rooms when the advocates of hockey, curling and skating were present and gave their ideas as to the feasibilities of a skating rink of such proportions as would accomodate all three distinct classes.

Winners Last Year.

In introducing the matter to those present it was pointed out by President Johnson that last winter a hockey team from Thief River Falls had gone to St. Paul and there won a beautiful trophy which has since adorned the club rooms and been the pride of all lovers of sports in this city. He also called attention to the fact that the sports committee of the club had been active in the effort to secure the presence here of one of the marching clubs of the St. Paul Outdoors Carnival Association. The secretary of the club had also endeavored to have the carnival boosters that are going from St. Paul to Winnipeg the last of this week stop in this city for a short time, thereby awakening a still greater enthusiasm. An answer to this request has not yet been received.

Free For Children.

G. Howard Smith explained that there was an old indebtedness of about $200 against last year's hockey club but that there were assets of about $150 in the way of material etc. He estimated that it would take about $300 to fit up a new rink about 110 by 160 feet in size. He suggested that children be admitted free during the day time but that at night a charge be made for all. At Warroad a rink had been built, and in two years the receipts had paid for the cost thereof. The city furnished the light free and also took care of cleaning the ice after storms.

Wm. Devenney, captain of last year's team advocated going slow in the matter and being sure that the money was raised in advance. He said that of last year's team Clif Rice, Alec Welsh, and Ralph Bennett are still in the city, the latter having secured employment here for the coming winter.

Carelessness Costs Money

Fred Haug stated that about $800 had been spent in maintaining the rink on the river last year and that through carelessness much money had been wasted, as none of the building material had been saved. He though it would be advisable to have a committee wait on the mayor and the city council and bring the matter to their attention officially and see what they would do.

The younger element of the city was heard from when Leslie Provencher, a sophmore, stated that the young men in the school were desirous of a rink and were willing to put their shoulder to the wheel and boost in every way possible.

Other Opinions.

F. H. Herrick was called upon but said he was at the meeting to get the views of others rather than to express his own ideas.

A. Sapero told of the money that was always forthcoming in cities on the iron range and that everywhere there were rinks of the kind advocated here. He would like to see some kind of a rink for the benefit of those who like outdoor sports.

A. H. Fasel, city clerk, stated that the city funds were rather meagre, that the electric light plant was now running at more than its load and to furnish light for a rink would be a rather hard task. He added that the lamps used last year as well as the wire had been laid away and was at the disposal of the rink advocates if they reached a favorable decision in the matter.

C. A. Pitkin stated that hockey was but one form of outdoor amusement, and that those who were curling enthusiasts and also the devotees of skating should be taken care of in case a rink was erected this year. He thought that the river was not the proper place for a rink and was in favor of getting the co-operation of the city authorities in the matter of a public rink centrally located.

Dr. Crandall said that he felt sure that one hundred people in the city would willingly pay $5.00 for a season ticket and that the required amount could be raised in that manner.

Committee Appointed.

John Bratrud advocated the appointment of a general committee to have charge of the preliminary arrangements, for when the money was raised there would be questions of all sorts asked by those who were solicited. He moved that a committee of five be named by the chair for this purpose and the motion after being seconded by Dr. Crandall was unanimously passed.

Later in the evening President Johnson of the Commercial Club, appointed the following on the committee: John Bratrud, Dr. Crandall, G. Husby, Fred Haug, and Joe Lutz.

New Rural Carrier.

Carl E. Hovie, who has been substitute carrier on rural route No. 2 for some time has been appointed to the regular post, taking the place of C. J. Hoffman, resigned. His appointment dates from Dec. 1.

The local postoffice is in receipt of the blanks to be filled in and returned to the committee having charge of the gathering of data to be presented to the next congress on the subject of pensions for civil employees. All those in the classified service will be eligible for pensions if they have been in the postal employ of the government for a certain number of years, the sum being graduated according to the salary of the position held.

PLANS FOR SCHOOL ARE SUBMITTED

School Board Holds Lengthy Meeting Yesterday—Meet Again To-Day at Four O'clock.

Fifteen architects were present at the special meeting of the board of education Wednesday afternoon and evening and submitted twenty-five plans for a new school building to be built on LaBree avenue north and Ninth street.

The buildings vary from one to two and one-half stories in height and from 45x89 to 138x150 feet in size. There was a wide range in the cost of the building, one estimate being as low as $11,750.00, while the most expensive one runs up as high as $76,800.00.

Some of the plans call for a building of only eight rooms, while others run up to about twenty, this latter figure being obtained by building onto the original structure. The seating capacity will vary, some of the rooms providing for thirty-five pupils while others will accomodate forty, so that from 280 to 735 pupils can be accomodated by these various plans submitted.

One important feature that was brought out was the matter of entrance and exit. A few of the buildings have but one door, while the majority had two, but some went up still higher, one calling for five doors and another eight.

One of the features brought to the attention of the board was the matter of providing playrooms for the children, which are now recognized as a necessary adjunct, especially during inclement weather when it is impossible for the pupils to get out into the open at recess and relax from their studies. Nearly all the plans shown had one or two playrooms, and these are plainly shown on a ground floor. A few of the specifications provide for a gymnasium and still others for a kindergarden. The gymnasium could also be used for an auditorium in which community meetings could be held. So often are parents and teachers' meetings held that these rooms would give the opportunity that has been long sought for.

The board met at four o'clock and adjourned at six, with one hour for supper, and the meeting convened again at seven, and adjourning for the night at 1 o'clock. Another meeting at four o'clock today was decided upon, at which time the plans for which bids were received by mail previous to the hour set by the school board for presentation, will be gone over. There are some eight or twelve of these and the time this afternoon will be fully occupied. It is not known just how soon a decision can be reached as to what architect will be employed.

The following architects were present Wednesday: Sunda & Dunham, Minneapolis· Spalding & Stewart, Thief River Falls· George Hoffman, Rochester; Mosse & Company, Rochester; William Fox & Allerd, Duluth; W. J. Edwards, Grand Forks; J. C. Lutz, Thief River Falls, with whom is associated Housler & Wright of St. Paul; Elroy & Kinport, Minneapolis; Thomas Johnson, Bemidji; D. Brown, Bemidji; K. T. Synder, Minneapolis· Haxby & Braceth, Fargo; B. F. Broomhall; Duluth; A. H. Foss, Elbow Lake; and G. Parsons of Minneapolis.

LOOK INTO NEED OF NIGHT SCHOOL

A communication from the U. S. Department of Labor relative to cooperating with it in advancing the opportunities of those seeking citizenship papers in this immediate vicinity was brought to the attention of the directors of the Commercial club at their meeting Monday evening and the secretary was instructed to notify the department that the club was favorable to the movement.

In this connection the matter of a night school in Thief River Falls was brought up and a committee of three was appointed by the chair to investigate the advisability of such a school, as it had been learned that at this time there was a growing sentiment among the laboring people for such classes.

H. E. Ives, T. P. Anderson and Scott Laird were named by the chair for the committee and a meeting will be held shortly to get such information as they can glean.

PUBLIC HEARING ON RIVER WORK

Col. Schulz of Government Engineering Corps, Will Hear Testimony of Parties Interested.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25

The Most Important Facts and Arguments Should be Submitted in Writing But Oral Testimony Will Also Be Considered.

A meeting of the greatest importance to the people of the section by the Red Lake river will be held at the Commercial club rooms in Thief River Falls on Thursday, Nov. 23 at nine o'clock in the forenoon. At that time the first steps necessary in order to bring about the improvement of the Red Lake river will have to be taken and all persons who are in any manner interested in this work should make it a point to be present.

Government Officer Present

Col. Edward H. Schulz of the United States Engineering corps, whose headquarters are at St. Paul, will be present for the purpose of taking such testimony and recording such arguments as may be advanced for or against the project. In the notice of the meeting sent out Col. Schulz states that while for accuracy of record all important facts and arguments should be submitted in writing, oral evidence will also be heard. Should anyone submit written arguments these are required to be in typewritten form and in quadruplicate.

Purpose of Meeting.

The meeting is called in connection with the preliminary examination ordered by congress in the rivers and harbors act, of July 27, 1916, and reading as follows:

"Red Lake, Minnesota, and Red Lake river from its outlet at Red Lake to its junction with the Red River of the North at Grand Forks, North Dakota, with a view to devising plans for regulating works whereby the level of said lake and the flow of said stream may be controlled in the interest of navigation, and in making such examination and survey any proposition by local interests for participation in the expenses of said project shall be taken into consideration."

Most Important Event.

Of all drainage meetings, flood congresses and other gatherings called lately for the purpose of discussing ways and means for the betterment of conditions in the valley of the Red Lake river, this will be by far the most important. Every person residing in the counties traversed by the stream is vitally interested in the report to be made to the department by Col. Schulz, and should be on hand to give his support to the movement for the improving of conditions. Upon the findings of this officer may depend the future course of the government with regard to work to be done along the stream. A large attendance of well-posted citizens will have a tendency to impress Col. Schulz with the importance of the matter in hand and his recomendations will thus be given added weight.

The Commercial club of Thief River Falls will see to it that the meeting is given all the publicity possible.

WANT PLANS OF OUR LIBRARY BUILDING

Massachusetts Commission Advised That Model Institution is Located at Thief River Falls

Still the fame of Thief River Falls institutions keeps spreading. The success of our market days has been receiving much attention from journals devoted to municipal improvements and now our public buildings are coming for their share of notice—all except the court house.

The Massachusetts public library commission is in quest of plans for library buildings and the library in this city has been recommended as a model. Jos. C. Lutz, of this city, the architect who supplied the plans and supervised the construction of the building, this week received a letter from John A. Lowe, agent of the Massachusetts commission, reading in part as follows:

"We are making a study of plans of library buildings which have proven satisfactory for a working and attractive library. The Minnesota Public Library Commission has recommended your building erected at Thief River Falls. Have you any pictures of the exterior and interior of the building which you can conveniently send me, and are the blue prints of the floor plan available? I shall greatly appreciate anything that you can do to help me in this matter.

"The plans will be available at this Commission office for consultation by prospective builders. I shall appreciatee your kindness if I may know about this in the near future."

At a regular meeting of the city council held Tuesday evening, nine items of business were disposed of. All members were present with the exception of Tobias Reep. The minutes of the two previous meetings were read and approved.

New Fire Material.

Paul Medderigh, chief of the fire department, appeared before the council asking for 150 feet of hose and a reel for the chemical tank. Chief Medderigh stated that the department was badly in need of hose. The basket now used on the fire wagon to hold the hose is obsolete according to Mr. Medderigh, as it has a tendency to rot the hose. A reel will be more handy. Alderman Bakken made a motion that the request be granted and Alderman Ihle seconded the motion. Mr. Medderigh was instructed to write to the different supply houses for prices.

Extended Time For Contracttor

Owing to the cold weather, work in sewer district No. 3 has been retarded according to B. Robinson, of the Robinson & VanAlstine company, who appeared before the city council asking for an extension of time. The contractor addressed the council stating that it was absolutely impossible to continue the work. "Our steel sheeting is freezing up and with quick sand on the bottom it is impossible to continue," said Mr. Robinson. Alderman Froseth moved that an extension be granted and that the time of completion be on or before June 1, 1917. Alderman Benson seconded the motion.

Accept Official's Report.

The reports of the city clerk, city treasurer, municipal judge, chief of police, Auditorium manager and librarian were accepted and ordered filed.

Two Building Permits.

O. E. Jensen, the painter, had his application for a building permit before the council and the same was granted. Mr. Jensen will erect an addition to his paint shop on Main avenue south, the dimensions being 8x28, and a shed, 4x16. Both will be frame structures and in stucco. J. J. Aga applied for a permit to build a storage room near his iron foundry on Second street. The room will be 4x40, built of lumber and sheet iron. Alderman Ihle moved that the request be granted and Bakken seconded the motion.

Reject Cigarette License

Alfred Staynoff, proprietor of the Soo Line news stand, had his application in for a cigarette license, but same was refused, Alderman Bakken making the motion and Alderman Froseth seconding the move. Fifteen minutes were spent in deciding. At this juncture Mayor Gambell made a few remarks, saying that of late it appeared that the cigarette law, pertaining to the sale of cigarettes to minors was not being observed, although he did not have any direct evidence at this time. Mayor Gambell asked the council if they would revoke the licenses of cigarette dealers in the future if he could supply them with the necessary evidence, and all were unanimous in answering in the affirmative.

Committee Appointed.

A committee of two, consisting of Aldermen Bakken and Ihle, were appointed by President Ackerman to meet with representatives of the school board and library for the purpose of fixing the rent of the Auditorium for school purposes. Two rooms are being used in the Auditorium by school children at present. Leonard Peterson, superintendent of water and light, reported that he had installed a new set of electric lights at the library and that very satisfactory results have been obtained thus far.

Alderman Ihle made a motion, seconded by Bakken, that the consulting engineer's first estimate on water mains extension in the city in the sum of $3,203.31 be accepted and approved. City Clerk A. H. Fasel, was instructed to draw a warrant on the proper funds, payable to Robinson & VanAlstine, for amount specified. Alderman Froseth made a motion, seconded by Ihle, that the consulting engineer's estimate on sewer extension in sewer district No. 3 in the sum of $434 be accepted and approved. City Clerk Fasel was instructed to draw on the proper fund for the amount due.

No Light For Duluth Avenue

An application for a street light for the corner of Duluth avenue and Third street was before the council for consideration, and was laid on the table indefinitely. Supt. Peterson stated that it would be out of the question to furnish light at the corner above stated for the reason that the power plant has more than it can take care of at this time. The superintendent may be compelled to turn off the bottom lights of the "white way" during the winter months in order to meet the power question. He also reported that a pole would have to be set at the corner of Duluth avenue and Third street and that the street light circuit would also have to be extended.

The matter of receiving bids for gravel was laid over until the return of City Attorney Quale, as the matter requires considerable legal advice. The usual number of bills were allowed.

BEAVERS FILLING DRAINAGE DITCHES

Industrious Little Animals Cannot be Molested and Threaten to do Considerable Damage

A. J. Anderson and Baker Olson of Grygla, on Sunday brought to this city evidences of the activity of beavers along the drainage ditches to the north and east. The exhibits consisted of tree stumps that had been gnawed through by the industrious little animals, the teeth marks showing the cuts varying from one-sixteenth to one-fouth of an inch in depth. It is said that the animals are quite numerous along the laterals of ditches Eighteen and Twenty.

Beavers are protected by law in this state until 1917, and they have multiplied rapidly as the result. Their work this winter is liable to cause considerable damage as the ditches harboring colonies will be dammed up to such an extent that the flood waters in the spring will find no outlet. Beaver dams are by no means temporary structures, evidences of these obstructions being found throughout northern Minnesota in localities where no beaver has been seen for thirty years. Their work is very interesting but may also prove rather expensive.

GOVERNMENT WANTS 2 CARS FLAX STRAW

On Examination of Straw Rests the Fate of a Tow Mill For This City.

Believing that flax straw grown in the vicinity of Thief River Falls is adaptable for pulp manufacture of paper, the U. S. department of agriculture, through George A. Stewart, who was recently in the city, has written Secretary Laird of the Commercial club to ship the government two carloads of flax straw at once.

While in this city Mr. Stewart was very optimistic regarding the flax straw samples which he had seen, and after a more thorough examination of the samples sent to Washington it was determined to make a careful investigation of the flax straw grown here.

On the result of this investigation may rest the determination to establish a tow mill in this city and to which end the Commercial club is actively engaged.

CASH PRIZES FOR THE BEST EXHIBITS

Boy's and Girls' Clubs of Ten Northwestern Counties to be Encouraged to Compete.

The Red River Development Association wishes to encourage boy's and girls' contests as carried on by the county superintendents in the counties in this portion of the state under the direction of the Boy's and Girls' Club Extension Movement. To that end, prizes will be furnished covering the best exhibits of corn and potatoes from each of the following ten counties: Becker, Clay, Mahnomen, Kittson, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, and Roseau. Ten ear samples of corn and one peck samples of potatoes are required. Ten dollars will be set aside for each county to be divided between corn and potato exhibits. The prizes for corn will be: First—$2.00, Second—$1.00 and the next four, fifty cents each. The same prizes will be offered for potatoes. In addition, there will be special prizes offered for the best corn and potato samples entered in the Boy's Acre Contests exhibited in the entire district. These prizes will be announced later. It is expected that very valuable prizes will be included in this classification. Girls' Bread Contest will also be included.

The sixth annual farm crops show will be held at Crookston during the week of February 5th to 9th inclusive. Notices will be sent out later regarding time to send entries and information as to whom the entries should be sent. Mr. T. A. Erickson, University Farm, St. Paul, will send shipping tags to be used in sending exhibits to Crookston. Write Mr. Erickson or Mr. C. H. Zealand, Crookston, Secretary of the Red River Development association, for any information that you wish.

STOCK FARM IS NOW CERTAINTY

W. D. Mennen of Sterling, Ill., Has Made Arrangements Whereby Necessary Land is Secured

IN TOWNSHIP OF KRATKA

Holstein Cattle, Belgian Horses and Hampshire Hogs Will be Specialties— To Begin Erection of Buildings in Spring.

A modern stock farm for Pennington county is now assured. Two weeks ago The Times called attention to the fact that W. D. Mennen of Sterling, Ill., was here for the purpose of making the preliminary arrangements for its establishment. These have now been satisfactorily completed and the work of building will be begun early in the spring.

In Town Of Kratka.

Mr. Mannen owned considerable land in Pennington county, but it was more or less scattered. During his visit here he succeeded in making a satisfactory trade whereby he became the owner of 800 acres in one piece in Kratka township. The farm will be located about five and one-miles southwest of Goodridge, being also about the same distance southeast of Mavie.

Will Have Model Barn.

The buildings on the place will all be of the latest and most approved pattern. The main barn will be built of cement and steel, so arranged that the litter can be pushed into the basement to keep it from freezing. A dwelling house with all modern conveniences will also be erected, the work to begin as soon as the weather makes it feasible in the spring.

Milk Strain Holsteins

Mr. Mannen will specialize in the raising of thoroughbred milk-strain Holsteins. He has years of experience in the handling of this class and believes that they are the best for this section. Fine Belgian horses will be a product of this model farm, as will also Hampshire hogs.

Has Much Experience.

Mr. Mannen owns a number of farms in the state of Illinois and is one of the best known stockraisers in the Central states. He has of late been looking over the Northwest with a view to branching out and careful investigation has convinced him that Pennington county offers just what he wants in climate, crops and marketing facilities. He comes prepared to go into the matter thoroughly, being in no manner handicapped by lack of resources. He is a business man in every sense of the word and will make a success of the venture at the outset.

The establishment of this stock farm in the neighborhood will mean much to the northwestern counties of the state. Holsteins are regarded as the best general purpose cattle to be had, being prolific milkers and carrying excellent flesh. They are hardy, being in this respect perhaps better adapted to this climate than any other breed known. The Hampshire belt hog is not much known in this section, but has proven a great success in the Middle states. The maintaining of this farm here will mean that the territory will soon become one of the foremost live-stock and dairy regions of the country.

Is Local Victory.

Much of the credit for securing this immeasurably valuable institution for Pennington county is due W. H. Frederick, of the Thief River Land company. It was largely because of his presentations that the attention of Mr. Mennen was called to the adaptability of this section to his purpose. Mr. Frederick was largely instrumental in making the land exchanges necessary, easy for Mr. Mennan and was lavish in his expenditure of time and energy in order to present the possibilities of the undertaking in the right light.

POWER PROMISED ABOUT CHRISTMAS

A pump capable of handling 7,000 gallons of water per minute has been installed at the dam and this will be ample to keep out the water that is seeping through. It will leave the bed of the river at the point where the new dam is going in comparatively dry and the work of cement laying will progress without hindrance. Superintendent Hedlund states that unless some unforseen accident intervenes there will be power for the electric light plant by Christmas.

It is expected that the work of putting in the cement will be begun before the end of the week. The excavation work for the foundation is progressing rapidily and the boiler is in place and housed in. The cement has arrived and the mixer is all ready for operation. Supt. Hedlund says that about 150 yards of concrete per day will be laid, this amount being practically doubled when the work has advanced to the stage where two shifts can be employed.

Another Carrier After Dec. 1.

Postmaster John Morgan has received notice from the post office department at Washington, that after December 1, 1916, a third city carrier will be added.

The Decadance of Citizen Spirit In Minneeota.

" I don't carry a label any more; I vote for the best man regardless of politics."

This is a typical utterance from many Minnesota voters in these days of non-partisan Legislatures, personal politics, and anemic party organizations. Independent voting, long extolled as a virtue, has grown in Minnesota to such a degree that it has broken down the political fiber of citizenship. Personality rather than principle is what counts now with the great mass of the voters.

The Presidential campaign of 1916 has accentuated this condition. Not only is party organization nearly destroyed, but a large percentage of the voters really belong to no party. They claim no political allegiance. The reaction against the old "political machine" has gone to the opposite extreme, which is chaos.

Political conditions have been unsettled all over the country this year, but probably worst of all here in Minnesota.

The once strong party spirit, the party allegiance that could give a reason for the faith that was in it, is weak as dish-water in these days. Real leadership has almost disappeared. Young voters, for the most part, did not align themselves at all.

"Thinking men," politically speaking, were scarce, especially among the younger men. Thousands, "made up their minds" with the least possible effort. They hadn't studied issues on their merits. They made their choices through prejudice, or through some whim or catch-word.

I'll never vote for a man who wears whiskers," said one who had found a "reason" for opposing Hughes. " I can't stand for a knocker," said another, forgetting that every opposition candidate for President in the Country's history has necessarily "knocked" the Aaministration in power. Everywhere the same sort of trivial talk was heard from men who boast of their independence.

These men are not Republicans, Democrats, Progressives or anything else. The fact is, they are non-partisan, which means "neither fish, fowl, nor good red herring." Priding themselves on their independence, they really advertise their lack of political principles, the lack of solid ground beneath their feet.

The "Mugwump" of thirty years ago was a thinking independent, a force for progress in political affairs. The honest, independent thinker in many campaigns has turned the scales toward better things. But the unthinking independent is a ready tool of demagogues, a dangerous factor in the electorate.

Is it merely a coincidence that this condition has come about in Minnesota with its peculiar non partisan system? Is the weakness of party organizations a danger?

Party organization in Minnesota was weakened first by the primary. It was fairly strong up to the time the primary was extended to State Officers, thus doing away with gatherings of party men in conventions. The State-wide primary sapped the strength of the party organizations. Then came the non-partisan law and dealt them a death blow. First judges were made non-partisan, a move to take the judiciary out of politics. Then came non-partisan city elections looking to "business administrations" of cities.

Then came a bill to extend the non-partisan law to county officers. There seemed no good reason to draw party lines on these minor public servants. But unexpectedly the non-partisan Legislature idea was grafted onto the bill. It took instantly, was backed by the solid "brewery" influence, and was put through the 1913 Legislature without a glimmer of consequences.

Nothing is left for the party ballot but National and State officers and members of Congress. No candidate running in a territory smaller than a Congressional district has the party label. The local candidate, without exception, is a pale-blue "non-partisan," generally fearing to say his soul is his own and avoiding party issues and candidates as if they were smallpox.

Without local organization there is no longer any party solidarity, no propaganda, no community leaders interested in preaching political principles. As a result, there is little clear thinking on the issues of the day.

The tariff is "too hard," and few voters seem to realize how it concerns them. It is "dry stuff." They no longer realize that the Nation's tariff policy is vital to the individual, that it is a most practical business proposition, not only for the business man, but for the farmer and the wage-earner, that the Nation's "trade balance," is a vital factor in the prosperity of all of us, that Ameriaen labor cannot compete with the thirty-cent labor abroad and keep up its standard of living and its purchasing power.

Instead of studying such questions and forming principles for themselves, many voters in present day Minnesota take their politics from billboards, headlines, campaign lithographs, or mouthy street talkers. In this way they lose no time from the "movies."

Public men in Minnesota are beginning to realize the conditions and its cause. They blame the non-partisan craze for the political indifference and silliness of the day, and from all parts of the State is coming a demand for repeal of the non-partisan law, at least as to the Legislature. Coupled with it is another demand for restoring political conventions to an extent that will bring men of like faith together once more to deliberate, to voice their ideas, and as leaders to light the way for the rank and file of parties built on real principles.—Minneapolis Journal.

The convention of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association to be held in Thief River Falls on December sixth and seventh will in many respects be the most important meeting in the history of the city. Dairying has made phenominal advances in this section during the past few years and is now recognized as the one particular pursuit to which our conditions are adapted. Dairymen from every section of the state will be present and some of the foremost authorities in the country will be here to deliver addresses. The Commercial club has the matter of preliminaries in hand and will be assisted by the Pennington County Live Stock Breeders association in taking care of the delegates and other visitors upon their arrival. This convention will do much to stimulate interest in dairy cattle, and the results of the work done and demonstrations made will be far-reaching.

* * *

The veterans of the Minnesota legislature were very generally discarded by the voters on election day. Such well-known names as Sam Y. Gordon, Gunnar Bjornson, Lewis C. Spooner, L. A. Lydyard, John A. Lartmore and John B. Sanborn will be missing from the roster of the 1917 session. The case of Spooner is unique. A practically unknown man started out with a handful of ballot "stickers" a few days before election and managed to get enough of these attached to the ballot to encompass the defeat of the Morris statesman.

Now that the quadrenial spasm is over, let's all forget it and devote our time and attention to securing more and better dairy cattle for Northwestern Minnesota.

DEER HUNTING ARMY INVADES NORTH WOODS

Northern Minnesota's Timbered Sections Are Alive With Nimrods After Big Game.

Many Thief River Falls big game hunters have left for points in the northern part of Lake, Beltrami and Cook counties with the idea of knocking over a deer or moose. The season was officially opened last Friday morning but to date not one specimen has been brought into the city. The slaughter of moose and deer has not been heavy as yet, owing to the fact that there is no snow.

Trains going out of this city to the deer country are carrying many nimrods, and many have returned to give it up until snow falls. It is safe to say that more than 2,000 hunters are hitting the trails over northern counties. Many parties of Thief Riverites have gone to the various timbered sections in the Rapid River country, where they will camp for a week—or until they get the limit. Other hunters are seeking the limit near Plummer, where deer has been reported to be plentiful. Parties of hunters leave the city in the morning via the motor route for the east country and return by night. The roads to and through the district are in excellent shape.

The following big game licenses have been issued from County Auditor T. P. Anderson's office:

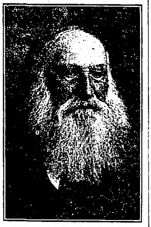
WILL REACH THE 91st MILESTONE IN LIFE NEXT TUESDAY



CHRISTOPHER JOHNSON

On next Tuesday, November 21, Christopher Johnson, who resides at the home of his daughter, Mrs. O. P. Staavas, 933 Arnold avenue north will reach the 91 milestone in life.

Mr. Johnson came to the United States after having resided in Norway for fifty-six and one-half years. He was born at Modum, Norway. On reaching this country he settled at Fergus Falls, and made his home in that city until coming to Thief River Falls in June, 1915. When eleven years old he was an employee in a cobalt mine in Norway. Later he took up the carpenter trade and has followed this trade to the preseent time.

Not once during his life has he been seriously ill and is to this ripe old age, hale and hearty. He delights in splitting rails and chopping wood. He is also a good booster for Thief River Falls and says it is the best town in the world.

Mr. Johnson is the father of ten children, nine of whom are living. they are: Mrs. Mary Gulbranson, Norway; Andrew Johnson, Canada; Mrs Mary Anderson, Washington; Charles Johnson, North Dakota: Mrs. Andrew Iverson, Canada: Mrs. Knute Vaale, Gully, Minn., Karsten Johnson, North Dakota; Mrs. H. Halverson, Churches Ferry, N. D., Mrs. O. P. Staavas, Thief River Falls.

Mr. Johnson will be pleased to have his friends call on him Tuesday.

COMMERCIAL CLUB NOTES

The Commercial club is in receipt of a communication from the Safety First Federation of America stating that the second annual convention will be held in Baltimore Dec. 7, 8, and 9, and asking this club to send delegates to said convention, two being the allottment that this city can send.

The directors of the club do not feel that the club can afford to pay the expenses of a delegate to the meeting, which is recognized as being a most worthy one, and suggests that if any one from Thief River Falls expects to be in Baltimore on either of the dates named above, that he get in touch with the secretary and ask to be given authority to represent the Commercial club and thereby give prestige to the club.

Secretary Laird of the Commercial club has been asked by the directors to attend meetings of the city council, school board and board of county commissioners in the future to adivse with these and other various organizations of a public nature, to the end that the interests of the city and community as a whole be best served.

Many members of the Commercial club have expressed themselves that the club was not taking sufficient interest in public matters and this will meet these suggestions. It is not the intention of the club to dictate the affairs of any of the various bodies, but rather to offer suggestions and to advise as to means of carrying out of such matters as each board deem of the most importance to the community. It will also serve to bring the various public bodies into closer relationship and should do much to bring about better harmony.

* * *

The matter of a rest room and visiting nurse which is being advocated by the Woman's Club, was given an endorsement Monday evening by the directors of the Commercial club who believe that the idea is a good one and should be put into effect. Just what proceedure will be adopted is not as yet known but the idea is meeting with popular favor in almost every quarter of the city, and if the plan is carried into effect there is little doubt but that it will result in a considerable increase of trade from the rural districts, to say nothing of the health advancement that will be manifest in the schools and homes generally.

SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Mabel Carney, state inspector of the normal training departments, visited the local normal on Thursday of this week.

* * *

The reason notes of excuse are required of all parents whose children are absent from school or tardy is simply to protect the delinquent against himself and to correct irregularity or truancy. There is no occasion for parents to take offense at this or to send impolite notes to the teachers, as sometimes happens. The school and the parents are both anxious to advance the child's interests and must act in harmony to accomplish this.

A former student in the high school, Frank Grundy, wrote the superintendent a long, interesting letter this week from a military training camp near London, England. Frank is a lieutenant in a Toronto, Conada, regiment and, like the former school boy he was here, is worrying because he cannot get into the thickest of the trouble on the front.

Several high school boys and girls are willing to accept Saturday work. They can be reached through this office.

The Woman's Club of this city invited the high school students and faculty to attend Prof. Koch's rendition of Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew", at the Auditorium Monday afternoon, during the last period.

The Northwestern Minnesota Educational Association meets at Crookston next week. The local school will not be in session on Friday as the local teachers will be expected to attend for at least one day. Last year, when the convention met in Thief River Falls, every Crookston teacher was here.

There are no regulations governing the control of mumps, so the school authorities are informed. The Central school district is suffering an epidemic of mumps, while few cases are found at the Knox or Washington.

The Berg school district voted last Friday evening to associate with the Thief River school for industrial purposes.

Additions to the school enrollment this week included a high school pupil from Bemidji, a grade pupil from Wisconsin, a family from Fargo and another from Devils Lake.

"THE FARMERS"

OF PENNINGTON AND ADJOINING COUNTIES

Desiring to be thoroughly representative of the section throughout which it circulates, The Times has added a "Farm Department" to its other features. This column will differ from those usually contained in weekly papers in agricultural sections in that it will deal with the work accomplished by the farmers of the immediate neighborhood. Articles of a general nature on agricultural topics are of much value, but for interest they are not to be compared with those dealing with your immediate neighbors. This section is undergoing a change. From a grain-raising region it is becoming one of diversified farming and dairying, and the success of those who have broken away from the old order will prove a decided factor in determining others to do so. It is for the purpose of encouraging and aiding this work that the Times begins the publication of this series.

Mr. M. A. Mattison, recently of Luverne, Minn., has been added to The Times staff and will have this department in charge. Mr. Mattison is a newspaper man of many years experience and ashe has resided in a section made prosperous by the very system of farming that is just now gaining a foothold here, his observations of the progress made will be of more than usual interesr.

Mr. Mattison may not be in your particular section for some little time, but he will be there, and any information given him as well as all courtesies extended will be greatly appreciated.

R. H. ROSS.

Facing the cool breezes from the north and equipped with a means of locomotion bearing the name of a famous peace advocate, the writer started the first of the week to take a glimpse of the country surrounding Thief River Falls. Having recently come to the city from the extreme southern part of the state, he naturally had formed his opinion of this country from a distance and had visions of a frontier wilderness of the first degree—such as is described in Wild West books and occasionally seen at the movies. Imagine his surprise, therefore, when he actually came to gaze upon the fertile farms and beautiful buildings to be seen on every hand when one emerges from the city limits of the county seat.

With the idea in mind of picturing to distant readers of The Times some of the advantages and possibilities of Pennington county, the writer will endeavor briefly to describe what he sees in his wanderings from place to place. From a literary standpoint his observations will doubtless be very commonplace, but it is trusted that this fact may be overlooked and that these articles will be of some value in showing to the outside world what can be accomplished in this part of the state by the man who chooses it for his home.

M. A. MATTISON.

The Rustabakke Place.

One of the first places to the north of the city is the fine farm of S. A. Rustebakke. Mr. Rustebakke and family came here four years ago from Palo Alto county, Iowa, and have found this section of the North Star state entirely to their liking. The place consists of 320 acres and is nearly all under cultivation. Although in some respects the farm did not produce as heavily this season as in past years, taken as a whole the results were very satisfactory. Mr. Rustebakke has a nice herd of cattle from which he derives a large part of his revenue. He has just completed a residence on his place at a cost of nearly $5,000, which would indicate that he has faith in the future of Pennington county.

Wants More Corn.

A little farther to the north is the farm operated by M. A. Nelson. Mr. Nelson came here two years ago from Turner county, S. D., and has been reasonably successful in his undertakings. Being accustomed to a country where corn is the chief crop it is a little difficult for him to become acclimated here. He has decided to return to his former home in South Dakota next spring but his neighbors say that he will return to Pennington county at no distant date.

Diversified Farming Successful.

In striking contrast to the opinions of Mr. Nelson are the enthusiastic praises given to this locality by H. G. Borden, whose fine farm home is located just beyond that of the former. Mr. Borden is one of the "bonanza" farmers of the neighborhood, having at the present time in his charge 700 acres, 440 acres of which he owns. The place is well improved, being exceptionally well equipped with barns, etc., besides a fine home. Nearly all of the farm is under cultivation and every available acre remaining will be "broken" next year. Mr. Borden is a firm believer in diversified farming and his year he proved his argument by planting ten acres of potaoes from which he has sold "spuds" for $1,000, besides still having 500 bushels stored in his cellar. He also raised this year 350 bushels of the finest kind of clover seed, which will be distributed to the farmers of Pennington county who may desire it for planting. It is the claim of this successful farmer that clover is one of the most important crops that can be raised in this country. Combined with stock raising, which Mr. Borden claims should also in the near future become one of our chief industries, clover is the most profitable and the least liable to failure of any crop that can be raised here. The hardships of frontier life are unknown to Mr. Borden and his family for they have a telephone in the house and the rural mail man passes their door each morning at nine o'clock. A glance at the family reading table is a convincing argument that these people are thoroughly alive to their advantages for it is loaded down with the best to be found in books, magazines, daily papers and publications devoted to the interests of the farmer. The family came here five years ago from Todd county and are firm in the belief that it is the best move they ever made.

Successful Woman Gardener.

Just a mile north of the city limits may be seen a nice, comfortable dwelling surrounded by six acres of well cultivated land. This is the home of Mrs. Hannah C. Bakken, who came hereten years ago fromChicago. When asked how she liked the country, she replied that there was just one place in the world where she would rather be at the present time—and that place is southern California, where the weather just now is probably a little more agreeable. Mrs. Bakken and her family have made a good living and have accumulated a competence in the truck gardening business, which goes to prove that "garden sass" will grow in abundance in northwestern Minnesota.

Better Than Canada or Dakota

Near the bank of Thief river, two and a half miles north of the city, lives a family which recently decided to return to God's country after a sojourn of eight years near Young, Sask., Candda. This is Ole H. Haugen, wife and daughter. They went to Canada from Irene, S. D., but when it was decided to move back to the States they chose this locality in preference to their old home farther south.

Boosts Cattle and Clover.

F. L. Hagen and family, who are near neighbors, have made that place their home for the past five years and have been very successful in their farming operations. Mr. Hagen has resided in this county for fourteen years, having previously made his home in Grand Forks county, N. D., while he resided in Roseau and Marshall counties for some time before coming here. He has his farm of 320 acres in a good state of cutivation and has a fine herd of cattle as a side line. He, also, is enthusiastic on the clover question and says that it is the coming crop. Mr. Hagen stated that, in his opinion this section of Minnesota offered to the man of moderate means opportunities to be found in no other place.

Sees Where He Could Do Better.

On the west side of the road three and a half miles north of this city is the comfortable farm home of R. W. Williams. Mr. Williams may be considered one of the pioneers of this section, having lived on the same farm for the past fourteen years. He has not engaged very heavily in dairying and stock raising in the past, but says that he has learned his lesson and in the future will not depend entirely upon one source of revenue for his income. He has come to see that the man who depends altogether upon grain raising will, in adverse seasons, be the heaviest loser, while the man who has a herd of cows, some clover and timothy will come out on top even with the most unfavorable weather. Mr. Williams came to this country from Iowa and has never seen the day when he had a desire to return to his former home.

Depends Upon "Bossie"

Situated on the north side of the road and bordering on the Marshall county line is the prosperous looking farm of Thomas and Peter Jacobson. Messrs. Jacobson have been in the county long enough to find out what it is good for, having come here thirty years ago from Wisconsin. If it had not been to their liking they probably would have left it ere this. With three quarter sections of fine farm land and a beautiful home, they have nothing to wish for. This large farm is all under cultivation and has been producing satisfactory crops every year with a very few exceptions. What more can be said of any part of the state? The Jacobson brothers have about fifty head of choice cattle and expect to increase the herd. They find that it is really the most profitable part of the farming business as it is easy to raise timothy, clover and other feed. Thief River runs through the farm and furnishes good fishing, while the trees alongside the stream furnish shelter and shade for the stock. The Jacobson farm is truly one of the most nearly ideal to be found anywhere.

New Englander Is Satisfied.

Just over the line in Marshall county lives a "Yankee." That is, he came from way down east in Maine. His name is R. L. Muzzy and he has one of the fine farms of this section. Mr. Muzzy and his family came here eight years ago from Maine and have made good in every sense of the word. They now have a beautiful farm home and a half section of the best land that ever laid out of doors. Mr. Muzzy is a firm believer in diversified farming and accordingly keeps a bunch of cattle and raises clover and other feeds in addition to his crops of small grains. When asked his opinion of northwestern Minnesota, Mr. Muzzy stated that he was entirely suitedhere and wuold not under any consideration go "back East" to live. He knows a good country when he sees it.

Stigen No Quitter.

Thos Stigen is tenanting the farm on the west side of the road a mile farther north. He came here three years ago from Norman county, this state, and although he did not raise a bumper crop this year he has unbounded faith in the country and is going to stay right by it and make it win. Mr. Stigen has the right spirit and will doubtless in a few years be amply rewarded for his tenacity.

Among The Pioneers.

Thirty-five years ago a man, his wife and two children started from Crookston with a team and wagon and headed northward over the prairie in search of a home. For forty miles they drove before finding a place that exactly suited them. Upon this quarter they made entry under the homestead law and proceeded at once to lay the foundation for a home. This family was Mr. and Mrs. John P. Swanson and two childreen, and the place they selected for a home is the farm upon which they still reside, on section 32, Excel township, Marshall county, six miles north of this city. Before coming here the Swansons had resided at Willmar. Thief River Falls at that time had not yet begun to exist. On the site of the present city stood an old log cabin and Indians roamed the country. Crookston, forty miles away, was the nearest market place, and the nearest point at which it was possible to obtain provisions. A year or two later, however, the Great Northern built a road as far north as St. Hilaire, which was the terminal for some seven years. This brought market advantages to within twelve miles of the homestead. John Swanson and his family endured in fortitude all the hardships of pioneer days but had unbounded faith in the future and remained while many others who came in the early days grew discouraged and either allowed their claims to revert to the government or sold them. The fine Swanson home and the 400 acres of land clear of encumbrance, owned today by Mr. Swanson, bear ample testimony to the fact that he had placed his faith correctly. Mr. and Mrs. Swanson are still hale and hearty and have a family of eleven children, all of whom are living. In company with other progressive farmers in this section Mr. Swanson has a nice herd of cattle. When asked his opinion of northwestern Minnesota, Mr. Swanson said that as far as he had been able to learn, there is not another place in the United States where a man with plenty of energy, but with small capital has a better opportunity to advance. And Mr. Swanson has lived here long enough to know whereof he speaks.

Tempest in a Teapot.

St. Hilaire, Minn.

Editor of the Times:

Some of our citizens who have been congratulating themselves upon having experienced one of the quietest hallowe'ens in the history of our burg were rather surprised upon reading the outburst of our worthy (?) Spectator scribe in last week's issue of said Great Family Journal (this title is not original with us) in which said scribe claims several hundred dollar's worth of property damage having been inflicted mainly, we presume, upon said scribe's dignity. The facts seem to be that several chickens and a calf had in some inexplicable manner gained entrance to the Spectator headquarters. Also some more or less appropriate fixtures had been added to the roof garden of said building. If such pranks are worth several hundred dollars to said scribe, his dignity must be quite high priced, especially in his own estimation.

So far so good. But then said scribe comes along with an offer of immunity to the perpetrators providing they settle for damages done to the roof and one 12x28 window pane. In this connection he also mentions a certain "party," the secrecy of which he promises not to divulge if said settlement is made. This really smells something like blackmail and doesn't seem to harmonize with the wonderfully high priced dignity said scribe betrays in the first-mentioned article.

As for "parties," we would like to ask the scribe about that party in the back room of his office about sixteen months ago when has as "manager" he saw to it that his proteges were entertained and refreshed (?)

Also, if he is so virtuous, why did said scribe keep the back room of his office at the disposal of a certain gang of linemen last winter? "Parties" indeed. It would be well for a certain person we know to heed the old admonishion, "People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones."

A word to the wise is sufficient.

SOO TRAIN NO. '13' FIGURES IN WRECKS

Passenger Train No. 13—Jinx Gets Busy, Axle Breaks, 15 Hurt. Train Then Derailed.

The Soo Line express No. 13 figured in two wrecks in rapid succession on Thursday of last week. The train was wrecked south of Portal, N. D., in the morning when an axle of the passenger coach broke as the train neared Vandewalker, N. D. Then again at 3 p. m. the train was derailed at Estevan.

When the axle broke it resulted in the death of one woman who died from injuries and 15 other passengers were injured, ten of them so seriously that they had to be removed to a hospital.

The train was under way after a few hours delay and turned over to the Canadian Pacific railway at Portal. While passing over the diamond with the Canadian Northern railway two miles south of Estevan, the engine, tender, mail car and coach were derailed. The cause is unknown and no one was injured.

A complete inquiry into the wreck at Estevan will be conducted according to a statement from the general offices of the Canadian Pacific railway at Moose Jaw, Sask.

8 HOUR DAY OR STRIKE; ULTIMATUM OF RAIL MEN

Brotherhoods And Railway Representatives Again Gather in New York For Meeting.

Failure of the railroads of the United States to live up to the spirit and intent of the Adamson 8 hour law will result in the strike vote of the four big brotherhoods being put into effect, it was announced in New York City on Monday afternoon, after a three hour conference between railway managers and brotherhood heads.

The purpose of the conference was to discuss, and, if possible, reach some agreementas to working out the provisions of the law, which goes into effect January 1, 1917.

An interpretation of the law had been work out according to the brotherhood representatives, but they refused to divulge it for the reason that several roads had announced their intention to fight it through injunctions.

"A strike vote is still in effect," said Mr. Lee, "and if the railroads do not live up to the very intent and spirit of the law in accordance with their agreement there is no reason why the brotherhoods should not take advantage of their strongest card. This time nothing can stop them."

Mr. Lee also added that any attempt at subterfuge by the railroads in placing in effect the 8-hour law would meet with instant action by the brotherhoods.

To Henning.—Eugene Hance, assistant local storekeeper at the Soo round house, left last Friday evening for Henning, Minn., for a short visit with friends.

Fossum to Minneapolis—Ingvald Fossum, local storekeeper at the Soo round house, leaves tomorrow evening for Minneapolis to be in attendance at the Minnesota-Wisconsin football game. He will return Monday morning.

Home on Visit— John Warmuth, telegraph linesman for the Soo Line located at Mahnomen, arrived home the latter part of last week and will remain there for some time

Accepts Position.— Leo Jackley went to work at the Soo round house Friday, November, 10, as wiper.

Larson On Visit.—Ole Larson, locomotive fireman for the Soo, running on the Fordville-Drake line, arrived in Thief River Falls Falls Saturday evening for a short visit with his friends. Larson is out on a leave of absence.

TO TEST LEGALITY OF ADAMSON LAW

Union Pacific Railway Has Entered Suit to Decide Validity of Eight Hour Law.

Suit was filed at Omaha, Nebraska, last week by the Union Pacific railway in federal court to test the constitutionality of the railroad men's eight-hour law, recently passed by Congress and known as the Adamson act. Thomas S. Allen, United States district attorney, and four Union Pacific trainmen, representing the different railroad brotherhoods have been made defendants.

The bill of complaint alleges that the law is unconstitutional for the reason that it is not a proper regulation of inerstate commerce, because it violates the guarantees of the fifth amendment to the federal constiution, and because it is unworkable as applied to existing conditions under which the trainmen are operating. The bill of complaint is a printed document of considerable size and contains copies of all the schedules under which the trainmen work.

Special Passes Through.

A special train made up of business car number 50, carrying General Manager G. R. Huntington, of the Soo Line and T. A. Foque, general mechanical superintendent, passed through Thief River Falls Tuesday at 1 p. m. The train arrived here at 12:45 o'clock, and made a fifteen minute stay. Engines were changed here and also the train crew. Conductor Barnette took charge of the special on leaving this city. The party was bound for Kenmare, N. D., on a tour of inspection of the line.

Clock To Hospital.—Herman Dacke the janitor at the Soo depot, beamed with satisfaction last Friday morning—so much that every one noticed it. The corners of his mouth were wrinkled upward, and he acted as if he had just found a $100 purse for which there would be no claimant.

It was all about the depot clock. He thought the company had paid enough for the time piece to keep correct time but of late the clock has failed. Dacke was forced on some days to hang a piece of paper over the clock because he didn't want an honest man to look the clock in the face. On Friday the clock was taken down and brought to the railroad jeweler for a general overhauling.

Lodge To Meet.—A regular meeting of the Brotherhood of All Railway Employees, organized in this city in August, will be held at the Odd Fellows hall Wednesday evening, November 22, 1916, at 8 p. m. All members are urged to be present.

Windmill Repaired.—The windmill on one of the water tanks at the Soo yards is now again in working order. Several sections which were torn out by a recent wind have been replaced.

To Mahnomen.—E. E. Wells was checked in as telegraph operator for the Soo at Mahnomen the first of the week to relieve A. B. Pfeffer, who has been transferred to Halma, to relieve C. W. Herzog, who has resigned.

Winters On Visit.—W. W. Winters, auditor for the Western Express company, was a visitor in Thief River Falls the later part of last week. Mr. Winters was merely passing through and visited his railroad friends while here.

Franklin Quits.—Verner Franklin, machinist helper at the Soo round house, resigned November 10. He intends to go to Canada to take up his residence on a claim.

Eggerud Returns.—Oscar Eggerud, employee at the Soo yards, returned the latter part of last week from Minneapolis, where he had spent a short time visiting with friends and relatives. He was accompanied by Walter Jonas.

On As Operator.—A. D. Pfeffer was checked in as second trick operator for the Soo Line at Mahnomen the first of the week, vice A. Glaholt, who has resigned.

Attends Fight.—Frank Duprey, messenger on the Minneapolis-Thief River Falls passenger local, spent Friday evening in St. Paul, where he was in attendance at the Dillon-Gibbons fight. Mr. Duprey is a personal friend of Gibbons, the two having been schoolmates, and his favors naturally lie with Mike. Duprey stated, however, that he had a lot of respect for that man Dillon. Duprey, before entering the Soo service, was employed by the St. Paul Daily News as police reporter.

Resumes Work.—G. B. Danielson resumed his duties as station agent for the Soo at Wabun the first of the week, vice A. P. Pfeffer, who has been transferred to Mahnomen as telegraph operator.

Relieving Agent.—L. M. Schulty, agent for the Soo at Brooks, has been sent to Russell, N. D., to relieve the agent at that place. The agent, R. F. Dye, is on a leave of absence on account of illness.

Big Engine For Wheatline.—The two drive wheeled engine will no longer be used to drag the Wheatline passenger train. Tuesday evening the train came in and was pulled by a engine with three drive wheels and equipped with a gigantic snow plow. Owing to the many large cuts on the Dakota line, the larger and stronger type of engine is necessary during the winter months.

Barnard On Trip.—W. A. Barnard, superintendent of the "Peg" division, returned Tuesday evening from a trip of inspection over the Wheatline. He had his private car attached to the 7:40 p. m. local.

Erecting the Fences.—A crew of men are engaged at the Soo depot this week erecting the iron fences around the express platform. The material arrived two weeks ago. Swinging gates will be used and the trucks when loaded will be pulled the doors behind the gates to safeguard the express.

On Flyer Run.—Soo Engineer J. L. Stitt, of this city, has been at the throttle on 110 the first of the week relieving John Linth, who is on a leave of absence. Stitt takes the train from Emerson to Mahnomen and a change is made at that point. "Jack" Nelson is fireman. Engineer Mitchell, an old time Soo engineer, who has the 110 run is also on a vacation.

Transferred.—Walter Bens, former ticket agent at the Soo depot in this city, who was transferred to Overly, N. D., where he has spent the past two months as warehouseman, has been sent to Silva, N. D., to relieve the station agent, who is on a leave of absence. J. W. Aiken relieved Bens at Overly.

Change at Halma.—A. B. Pfeffer, who has been stationed at Mahnomen as station agent for the Soo, has been transferred to Halma, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Agent C. W. Herzog. The latter has held down the Halma job for many years.

Taylor On Hunt.—E. T. Taylor, claim agent for the Soo Line at this division point, returned Monday evening from the country around Bemidji, where he had been on a deer hunt.

THE ONLY WAY OF REACHING PEOPLE

The Value of Advertising Was Put To the Test in Campaign Just Closed.

Has the spellbinder been pushed off the boards by the more popular and sensible publicity method of newspaper advertising? The campaign just closed would indicate that such is the case. Both the great parties used the columns of newspapers for the purpose of setting forth the claims of their candidates, even the the country newspapers of the better class being employed liberally. The Times, although a Republican newspaper, received an order for a page advertisement boosting Woodrow Wilson for president.

Commenting on this new idea in American politics, the New York Herald says:

"The distinctive "high note" of this year's campaign has been the wide use of the advertising columns of newspapers by candidates and party organizations. Never before in the history of American politics has resort been had in so marked a degree to this manner of placing issues before the people. Money that heretofore has been wasted in the many ways which politicans are familiar has this year been put to the far better use of presenting the claims of parties and their candidates through the columns of newspapers that are widely read.

"This development marks a distinct progress in political management. It shows realization of the fact that the American people can be best reached through appeal to their intelligence and the days of reliance upon prejudice and passion are of the past. No campaign can be shorn of such characteristic accompaniments of American politics as "skyrocket" oratory and a certain amount of outside display, both of which cost money, but it has been driven in upon managers this year that if they were to reach the masses of thinking voters they must rely upon newspaper advertising. This exp[illegible] the large number of politica[l] advertisements appearing in the columns of the Herald and other newspapers that reach the people."

ALL CROPS EXCEPT CORN, ARE SMALLER

Government Report For Minnesota Shows Decreased Grain Production Compared to Last Year

A summary of the crop conditions in the state of Minnesota sent out by the bureau of crop estimates under date of Nov. 9, shows that corn is practically the only cerial showing an increase in production over last year. The estimate at this time is 76,000,000 bushels as against 62,100,000 bushels a year ago.

The government's wheat estimate at this time is 28,950,000 bushels for the state. Last year's production amounted to 73,420,000 bushels, a difference of 44,570,000 bushels.

The oat crop also shows a very large falling off. Last year the total threshed in the state was 134,375,000 bushels while the production this year is 85,304,000 bushels, a difference of 49,071,000 bushels.

Barley also fell off 13,375,000 bushels, being 27,702,000 bushels this year and 41,175,000 in 1915.

In spite of the large flax crop predicted for the state, this also fell away nearly a half a million bushels, the figures being 3,150,000 to 2,680,00.

Potatoes show a decided decrease. Last year the production in the state was 30,210,000 bushels while this estimate gives 17,100,000 bushels as the 1916 crop.

Hay is about the same for the two years. In 1915 there were 3,209,000 tons cut while this year's production is 3,232,000 tons.

The report shows an increase in the apple production of 10,000 barrels for the state, the total being 42,000.

Wheat	$ .87	$1.63
Corn	.87	.76
Oats	.29	.45
Potatoes	.33	1.26
Hay	6.50	7.50
Eggs	.25	.31

CITY GROWS FAST DIRECTORY SHOWS

A new directory of the city of Thief River Falls will be ready for distribution about the first of the year. J. H. Ley, who has been publishing these directories during the past five years, is busy with the enumeration and the work will soon be in the hands of the printer.

Mr. Ley put out the first directory in 1910, and at that time the city showed a population of about 3,000 people. He says that each succeeding year has shown a substantial increase and he is of the opinion that the forthcoming book will indicate that the past twelve months have been no exception. It has been his observation that the city has about doubled its population every five years, this being one of the best showings made by a Minnesota municipality.

Thief River Falls is but one of a number of cities in this section for which Mr. Ley publishes the directories and he says that none of the others can show such substantial improvements in the same length of time. Eight years ago there was not a brick building in the city, while now the structures of this class are among the finest to be found anywhere. Advancement along other lines has been fully as noticeable and Mr. Ley considers this one of the best points with which he has business connections.

Will Send Big Representation.

Crookston Times.—Crookston and other Red iRver Valley towns should be strongly represented at the hearing to be held by the government at Thief River Falls on Nov. 23. This hearing is in connection with the preliminary examination ordered by congress, and is with a view to devising plans for placing regulating, works at the source of Red ake river for controlling the level of the lake, thereby preventing floods in teh Red Lake and Red rivers. This is a matter of vital importance to the whole valley and nothing should be left undone to present necessary evidence and arguments to induce the war department to take up this important work.

Football Banquet.

In honor of their triumphant conclusion of the 1916 football season, the young men members of the Alumni of the Thief River Falls high school will give a banquet to the 1916 champions at the Masonic Temple Saturday evening, November 25. The total attendance is estimated at fifty-nine, their being 39 members of the alumni, fourteen members of the football team, Coaches Johnson and Strand and Prof. J. H. Hay. At the banquet will be assembled most of the former gridiron veterans and the evening will be one of merriment. Harry Prichard, president of the alumni, has been especially fortunate in securing the elegant Masonic lodge rooms for the affair and it will undoubtedly be one of the most elaborate school affairs of the year. Coach Johnson at this meeting will present the football members with letters and it is expected that the 1917 captain will be chosen. Speeches will be given by the team members and others will be called upon for impromptu addresses. The banquet proper will be handled by one of the hotels. After the above program has been carried out a dance will be given. To this part of the program young ladies of the Alumni are cordially invited, and also members of the faculty.

Was Stag Party Host.

H. A. Brumund was the host to a party of about forty-five gentlemen friends on the evening of election day. Mr. Brumund had just returned from a hunting trip and the guests of the evening made away with the trophies of the expedition. During the banquet the guests received the returns of the election through the special service of the Times and thus kept posted on how things were going throughout the nation. After dinner whist and rummy was played by those inclined toward those pasttimes while the others disected the figures showing how the election was going. In common with the rest of the population, the members of the party went to bed at an early hour fully convinced that Hughes had been elected and were surprised when they found that the West had changed the outlook at the last minute.

Mesdames M. C. Cutter, H. W. Froehlich, G. W. Booren, O. F. Mellby, and F. J. Stebbins acted as hostesses to ninety guests at the Brumund hotel parlors this afternoon. A delicious luncheon was served at 1:30 p. m. after which the afternoon was passed in playing cards. There were 25 tables with four ladies at each. The dining room was darkened and candles were used at each table for illumination, making a very pretty sight. Yellow chrysanthemums were used for decoration and at each table a chrysanthemum was used for nut baskets.

The home of Mrs. Charles Nason, 121 St. Paul avenue north, was the scene of two pretty social events last week when Mesdames C. A. Nason, A. Bottleson, L. Rayson, T. B. Stauff and John Cronkhite entertained informally. On Friday there were sixty guests present. The afternoon was spent in playing Norwegian whist at 16 tables, after which a delicious luncheon was served. The decorations were large yellow chrysanthemums. The same ladies entertained again on Saturday, there being forty-three guests. Music for both occasions was furnished by Morck's three piece orchestra.

Fuller, 112 Markley avenue north, entertained twenty-seven little girls of her own age Monday afternoon, the occasion being the ninth anniversary of her birth. Originally he had intended to read "Midsummer Night's Dream," but as music could not be obtained he was obliged to give the above number. All the four high school classes were in attendance and also the high school faculty. The club was also represented in full force. The St. Hilaire Woman's club was the guest of the local club during the day.

Celebrate Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Rinker entertained sixty guests last evening at their home on Conley avenue, the occasion being the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. At six o'clock a five course dinner was served. An interesting item of the celebration was the fact that the same wedding cake that adorned the table twenty-five years ago, was used. The decorations were in yellow and white, large yellow chrysanthemums being placed at different places in the rooms. Mr. and Mrs. Rinker were presented with many valuable and beautiful pieces of silverware by those present. Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Smith and Mrs. Dave Krause, of Crookston, and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Swanson of Minneapolis. Mrs. Swanson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rinker.

Thirty-five young people pleasantly surprised Jay Phelps at his home Monday evening, the event being his twenty-third birthday. The evening was spent in playing cards, games and dancing. At 12 o'clock a midnight luncheon was served, the lunch being furnished by the young ladies. The gentlemen contributed a sum of money and presented Mr. Phelps with a beautiful birthstone ring.

On Tuesday afternoon at the parsonage of the Swedish Lutheran church, occurred the marriage of Emil Anderson and Miss Thomie Nomeland, both young people of Grygla, Rev. Albin A. Larson officiating. The next regular meeting of Winslow Chapter 182, O. E. S. will be held at the Masonic temple, Wednesday evening, November 22. At that time a chicken pie supper will be served to all Stars and their families at 6:30 p. m., for which a small charge of 25 cents will be made. Problem Play at Princess.

"The Innocence of Ruth" will be offered at the Princess theatre Friday, Dec. 8th, with Edward Earle and Viola Dana in the title roles. The story unfolded in this photoplay is forceful and interesting in an unusual degree and exceedingly well presented in the film. It is essentially a tale of Greater New York, Wall Street, millioanaires, debauchers, charity balls, a helpless, beautiful girl, an equally fascinating bad woman and the usual high life side lights.

Reginald Travers, dying, places his young daughter in the care of Jimmy Carter, a very rich, easy going sort of a chap but withal honorable, honest and moral, whose housekeeper, Mrs. Jenkins, a motherly soul, looks after his bachelor apartments. Ruth is taken there and Mrs. Jenkins does not fail in her duty toward her. At first Carter is only lightly attract- by the young girl and treats her as an indulgent father would his own daughter. Gradually, however, as she grows and develops mentally and physically, Carter finds his is even more than a fatherly or platonic friendship—he really loves her.

In the meanwhiie, Mortimer Reynolds, not satisfied with having ruined Ruth's father, appears determined to sear Ruth's soul, and plots her moral downfall with his mistress, Edna Morris, who finds opportunity to tell Ruth that the world really thinks she is Carter's mistress, not his ward. That starts a conflagration, and before the smoke has cleared away, Ruth figures in some exciting and dangerous situations, from which Carter does his utmost to extricate her before too late. As the intended prey of an immoral scoundrel, Ruth is led into compromising situations and appears morally doomed.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 24—

"The Scarlet Road"

A Powerful Photodramatic Story of the Bright Lights, by George Kleine, Discreetly Shorn of Objectionable Realism, Ably Directed and Well Acted

Fair Laughs the Moon and soft the zephyr blows,
As o'er Life's wave the gilded vessel goes,

The story can lay claim to orginality in many respects. I have never read nor seen one like it on the screen. Here we have a young man, who has been circumspect in his life up to his twenty-fifth birthday, supporting himself and his old father (as he believes), who lives a lonely life in an old cabin out in Montana, by hard work in an office in New York. One night a messenger brings an important telegram and Harry carries it to the head o fthe firm, who is taking supper at the Cafe de Paris, a gay resort for the upper ten, where the cabaret is in high favor. There he meets a famous cabaret dancer, and the prosaic current of his life is suddenly changed.

A day afterwards he is notified that his father had died and left him $200,000. Then begins a season of high life, in which the cabaret dancer and her dancing partner figure prominently. They fleece him of his money in various ways, and he is penniless in a few short months. Owing to his wild career on Broadway he fails to find employment or assistance, but a hardheaded old gentleman, while refusing aid, hands him a letter from his father which he had been instructed to deliver under just such conditions as then existed. Harry is instructed in the letter to go out to the old cabin in Montana and there he will find a way out of his difficulties. He beats his way on a freight train to the spot and, finds a hangman's noose dangling from the ceiling. Horrified and angry at the callousness of his dead parent, he swears that he will make good yet. How he kept his vow and married the girl of his choice, whom he had neglected in his mad infatuation for the cabaret dancer, is absorbingly told in the pictures.

"MILLION A MINUTE" PRINCESS FEATURE

Another Big-Bushman-Bayne Feature Coming to Popular Play House Sunday Night.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, recognized as the foremost starring combination in the silent drama, will be seen on the screen here at the Princess Theatre on Sunday, Nov. 19, in "A Million a Minute". The production is brimful of interest and presents a story of intrigue, romance, adventure and mystery, together with a comedy relief, which makes for the most satisfactory entertainment. These stars are supported by a strong cast.

In this production Miss Bayne has one of the best parts she has had since she came to motion pictures, about five years ago. She is seen in scores of big dramatic situations, and then there are lighter scenes where she is given an opportunity to display her versatile charms to full advantage. Mr. Bushman, too, has a strong role, and is seen to good advantage. He has many thrilling adventures and scenes which call forth the fullest range of his dramatic powers and, as always, he meets the demand upon his art in a manner that pleases.

There are many interesting scenes taken in and around New York, on shipboard and along Broadway, and the cafe life and underworld of Paris are faithfully reproduced. Metro has spared no expense or effort to make "A Million a Minute" one of the big features of the year.

Thief River Falls citizens, who rose early Monday, found the coldest morning of season thus far. The mercury at 6:30 a. m. stood one-half degree below zero on a standard thermometer, while others state that it had been down as low as six degrees. The river is frozen over from shore to shore, and intrepid school boys enjoyed their first afternoon of skating on Sunday. The ice is now several inches thick and even the "grown-ups" are now enjoying the poplar winter pastime.

Mrs. Shrewd Shopper's Confessions.

No. 1.

LET me begin by saying that these confessions are not the usual kind you read about in the papers.

NO HIDDEN AND HORRIBLE CRIME WILL BE DISCLOSED; NO SECRET MARRIAGE WILL BE HERE DIVULGED TO A STARTLED COMMUNITY; THERE WILL BE NO REVELATIONS OF "PRICELESS" BEAUTY SECRETS.

Perhaps you expected something of this sort when you glanced at the heading and now feel a trifle disappointed.

BUT I PROMISE YOU THAT THESE REVELATIONS WILL SURELY BE QUITE AS INTERESTING AS THOSE YOU HAVE BEEN ACCUSTOMED TO SEE IN THE NEWS COLUMNS—PERHAPS MORE SO, BECAUSE I AM GOING TO TOUCH ON A SUBJECT HERE THAT VITALLY AFFECTS YOU AND YOUR FAMILY AS THE OTHER "CONFESSIONS" DO NOT.

I was commissioned by this progressive newspaper to tell its women readers from time to time some of the secrets of profitable shopping. I know quite a few.

I HAVE SPENT ALMOST A LIFETIME IN BUYING THINGS. I HAVE SHOPPED FOR PRETTY NEARLY EVERYTHING FROM PINS TO PIANOS. I HAVE BEEN IN ALL THE STORES AT HOME AND IN SOME IN THE BIGGEST CITIES IN THIS COUNTRY. I AM GOING TO TELL YOU WHAT HAS TAKEN ME YEARS TO LEARN.

And I am going to tell you of some of the shopping opportunities that I come across in my daily visits to the stores—things that you usually don't hear of and that will help you to take some of the cost out of the "cost of living" we hear so much about. I am going to tell it to you in a neighborly way—as one woman to another.

I think I've said enough for today, however. Watch for my next article.

Mrs. Shrewd Shopper's Confessions.

No. 2.

SOME of my good neighbors whose home duties have kept them from traveling around much sometimes express a slight contempt for the stores here in town. It's the old saying of "familiarity breeds contempt" over again.

They usually come out with this sort of remark when I am telling of my travels, and they follow it up with:

"OH, BUT YOU MUST HAVE SEEN SOME WONDERFUL STORES WHEN YOU VISITED SUCH AND SUCH A CITY! DO TELL ME ABOUT THEM!"

I hear this quite often, and it always makes me smile and at the same time rouses up all the civic pride in me, and I tell them a few things that open their eyes.

There's nothing like shaking the dust of your home town and going out to see the rest of this glorious country of ours to make you feel proud and enthusiastic about the little spot on the map you call "home" and its pleasant folks and good stores and EVERYTHING in it when you get back.

OUR "LITTLE OLD TOWN" HAS SOME STORES THAT WOULD REFLECT CREDIT, IN THE WAY OF BROAD STOCKS OF STYLISH MERCHANDISE, GOOD SERVICE AND FAIR PRICES, ON MANY CITIES TWICE ITS SIZE AND POPULATION.

We all ought to feel mighty proud because towns of our size that can boast of such fine stores as we have are mighty scarce—about as scarce as diamonds at a hodcarriers' ball.

I FEEL SURE THAT IF EVERY WOMAN HEREABOUTS COULD TAKE A FEW MONTHS OFF AND GO "TRIPPING," AS I HAVE, SHE WOULD COME BACK WITH A GREATER APPRECIATION OF THE FINE SERVICE OF OUR LOCAL STORES.

MRS. SHREWD SHOPPER.

Storage Batteries

Will freeze unless they are charged during the winter and they do not remain charged when the car is out of service. If they are allowed to stand without being charged, the plates deteriorate.

We are equipped with the latest facilities to care for storage battery charging and winter storage, which keeps them in proper condition. Our prices are moderate.

Overhauling is a specialty at our shop and we guarantee the work to be satisfactory. Bring your car in during the winter months and have it ready for spring. There is not a better time to have them gone over than during the winter. We have a first-class paint shop in connection. If your car needs a new coat of paint or a little touching up, you have the opportunity of having it done at a resonable price. The mechanical part of the car should be attended to, however, before painting. We can do both. Give us a trial.

Gloria's Romance

by MR. and MRS. RUPERT HUGHES

Copyright, 1916, by Adelaide M. Hughes

SYNOPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, with his daughter Gloria, is wintering at Palm Beach. Gloria is a vivacious but willful young lady who chafes under the restraining hand of a governess from whom she repeatedly escapes. Her childish capers cause young Doctor Royce to fall in love with her. Becoming lost in the Everglades she falls into the hands of the Seminole Indians. Gloria falls in love with her rescuer, Freneau. Five years later she leaves school and meets Freneau at the theater; He has forgotten Gloria. Later Freneau persuades her to forgive him. Gloria's sister-in-law, Lois, becomes intensely jealous, and Doctor Royce discovers in her an ally. Freneau goes sleighing with Gloria. It results in pneumonia for Gloria, whose family becomes incensed at Freneau. Royce is summoned. Freneau's finances being low, he approaches Pierpont Stafford. Doctor Royce warns Freneau of his conduct. Lois threatens him with dire punishment. Her husband, Gloria's brother David, becomes suspicious. Freneau spends a week with Lois in the Catskills. He plans to have Mulry send Gloria a bunch of telegrams. After Freneau takes leave of Gloria she sees from her window an attack made upon him. Doctor Royce convinces her that what she has seen is the result of a delirium. Later, a telegram, followed by a letter, comes from Freneau. She replies, but her telegrams are returned. She accidentally sees the supposed suicide of Freneau reported in the paper. Gloria swears to find the murderer of her lover. Royce becomes alarmed and tells what he knows of Freneau to Mr. Stafford. Together they seek to prevent scandal from enveloping Gloria. She accuses them in her mind of conspiracy against her. Gloria sets about to run down Freneau's murderer. Royce warns Mulry to tell Gloria nothing. Gloria calls on Mulry and there sees Lois who is also worried. Gloria's suspicions are aroused. Royce endeavors to show her the difficulty she faces. Gloria goes to David's country home. She meets Mulry, who flees at once. Gloria insists on going to Palm Beach. Again she sees Mulry there. He leaves for the North. She is recognized by her one-time captor, the young Indian chief. He tells her that Royce and not Freneau was her rescuer at that time.

TWELFTH EPISODE

The young Indian chief who had found the girl Gloria, a tattered runaway, lost in the everglades, and had tried to marry her, had been the cause of her falling in love with Dick Freneau. After five years the Indian was still only a poor Seminole selling his wares to Palm Beach visitors. But Gloria had loved and lost, had been the unwitting object of Freneau's intrigues and the helpless witness of his murder.

Now the chief had attacked the only foundation of her trust in Freneau. The Indian had laughed at Gloria's story of the courage of Freneau and had given the credit for the battle to Doctor Royce. The young chief was in danger of unconsciously destroying the romance he had unconsciously begun. Doctor Royce had disclaimed the credit, and Gloria had been overcome with remorse at suspecting Freneau.

Still, the suspicion rested there. It kept flitting back to mock her whenever she tried to resume her quest. What difference did it make who killed Freneau if he had been dog enough to take a young girl's gratitude and adoration and praise for bravery when he had been a poltroon?

She was worn out with alternating between upbraiding Freneau and herself for turning against him on the word of an Indian. She could not find Frank Mulry, and she did not care much whether he had gone back to New York or not.

She loitered about Palm Beach and responded to none of her father's appeals or her doctor's efforts to brighten her eyes. She went back to New York at length. Of evenings she refused to go out. She sat while her father played solitaire. She played cards with him once or twice, but she was so absent-minded that he preferred to play alone or occasionally with Judge Freeman, a kind of relation—that is, he was the father of Gloria's brother David's wife, Lois.

One evening while the two old men were playing Doctor Royce dropped in. He found Gloria in a deeper lethargy than usual. He cudgelled his brains to think up something to interest her, but without success until the judge rose and said:

"I hate to quite when I am winning, Pierpont, but I'm overdue at the night court. I mustn't keep the criminals up late."

"That's it," muttered Royce.

"That's what?" Pierpont inquired.

Royce, startled from his reverie, apologized.

"I think Gloria needs diversion of some unusual sort, Mr. Stafford. Now, while I would not call Judge Freeman's decisions a diversion, exactly, I do think that his night court would be interesting enough to compel Gloria's thoughts."

"The very thing," said Pierpont. "It will appeal to her, and possibly she will try to mother some of your black sheep, if you'll let her, judge. Will you take us?"

"Of course; glad enough to have you," answered Freeman.

Gloria received the proposition languidly, but consented to be taken along. When they arrived at the courthouse they entered Judge Freeman's room. He donned his judicial robe and they followed him to the bench, where chairs were placed for them on either side of him. Everybody in the courtroom rose as the judge entered and then sat down with him to the banquet of justice. Gloria sat at his left, and frequently he leaned toward her, explaining a case or answering a question.

She became at once another Gloria, vividly alive and interested in the human documents spread before her. Sometimes the row of faces seemed like her childish memories of the chamber of horrors in Mme. Tussaud's waxworks; then again the beauty and nobility of some countenance would completely bewilder her when the judge told her that it belonged to the worst confidence man in New York or to a professional beggar who would certainly refuse any offer of real work, however real the remuneration.

Gloria was constantly amazed at the judge's insight into human nature and his general fairness and discrimination.

A ferocious Irishwoman of huge proportions begged protection of the court from a much battered and meek little husband whose head bore, among other decorations, the outline of the familiar flatiron. His face was almost lost in the wilderness of bandages and adhesive plasters. His legs were a complete wreck, and he clung to the officer's arm for support. The judge motioned the policeman to take the stand. As he did so the little man tried to follow him. He was restrained and upheld by another officer, who protected him from the threatening uppercut of the woman.

The policeman on the stand took the oath and tried to conceal his grin as he explained:

"Your Honor, the lady had me to arrest her husband for assault and battery."

The spectators shook with laughter. Even the solemn Gloria had to smother her snickers. The judge pounded on his desk for order. The court officers silenced the spectators.

The judge motioned the woman to the stand. The policeman stepped down. The injured innocent began to talk on her way to the chair. She was interrupted to take the oath, and threatened the clerk, took the oath with indifference, and began at once to harangue the judge about the wickedness and brutality of her husband: "His croolty is somethin' ahful. I deman' protection for the poor, wake woman I am."

The judge tried to quiet her. She reached out her hand imploring help. Seeing Gloria, she appealed to her. Gloria recoiled in terror. It took two policemen to get the woman from the witness stand, but it would have taken a hundred to silence her. Next the timid little husband was put on the stand. He told his story briefly, and the judge sentenced him briefly to "Thirty days on the island for rest and recuperation." He received from the little man a smile of beatific gratitude; then he turned an unmistakable glare of triumph on the wife of his bosom and marched safely past her under the shelter of the police. The wife bustled out of the court through the spectators. They opened an alley quickly in the face of her wrath.

Next on the docket was a sad-eyed and timid Hungarian waiter. As he entered from the detention cell with the officers an agent of the Gerry society came from among the spectators leading a ragged little boy, seven or eight years of age. The waiter and the boy, father and son, flew to each other's arms. Then the waiter, casting one heart-broken glance at the boy, turned to the judge and poured forth his story. His name was Casinur; his son was Stas. He was out of work, with a sick wife, living in a miserable room. An ambulance had taken his wife to a hospital and then the law had taken his child away because he was unable to give it proper care. He had fought to keep the boy and had resisted an officer.

Gloria listened tensely while tears of sympathy gathered in her eyes. To her the man's story was finished. The judge shook his head sadly. He was powerless to restore the child to his father, and he was about to sign the paper committing him to the children's society when Gloria rose from her chair and commanded a halt in the proceedings.

The court was thunderstruck as she turned to the judge, crying:

"Give me the boy! I'll take care of him, and I'll get employment for his father."

The judge was amazed, but when he saw how serious Gloria was he murmured to Pierpont: "The child will be a toy for her. Let her have him." Pierpont groaned, and the judge nodded his consent, if not his approval. The judge conferred with Gloria, and she took a card from her case and underlined her address. The judge gave it to the father and said, "Tomorrow." The father bowed and scraped to Gloria and, pushing the boy's head, made him bow, too. They went out at the gate together, so sure of protection henceforth that Gloria, the author of their contentment, sat back, proud and comfortable as a purring kitten.

She forgot her pride in the abrupt entrance of the man she had pursued in vain for weeks. It was Frank Mulry. An officer brought him forward. He had been arrested for speeding. He was indignant. Gloria crouched behind the judge's desk, so that Mulry could not see her while he explained: "I was going only eight miles an hour." The policeman laughed aloud with scorn and indicated that the speed was nearer eighty.

Gloria tugged at the judge's robe. He bent down to hear her whisper: "That's the man I've been chasing for weeks. Put him on ice till I can get at him." Judge Freeman nodded and ordered Mulry sent back to the cell.

Mulry pulled out a roll of money and looked inquiringly at the judge, but he shook his head in denial. Mulry was led away, crestfallen and disgusted. Dragged back to the detention room, he tried to bribe the policeman. This unheard-of insult was rejected and Mulry was thrown into a corner, while the policeman looked on the next candidate for Judge Freeman's consideration.

The officer called to a prisoner who had slumped on a bench with his back to the others. He did not answer. The policeman went to him and tapped him on the shoulder. The man turned suddenly in fright. He regained some composure as the polceman smiled at him. He smiled back craftily.

Gloria and Royce were whispering and laughing together over Mulry's wrath. They did not see the new prisoner brought in. When he came to the bar the officer spoke as he handed up the complaint. The judge nodded wearily and said, "Plain drunk. First offense. Discharged."

At the sound of the judge's voice Gloria looked up. Her casual smile changed slowly to wonder, incredulity, conviction, wild excitement. She sprang to her feet, pointing at the man and trying to cry out. She toppled and swooned as Doctor Royce leaped to catch her.

The prisoner gaped in amazement and started to leave, but the policeman checked him.

Royce carried Gloria out of the room, followed by Pierpont and the judge. Royce deposited Gloria on a divan and, putting a cushion under her feet, ran to fetch a glass of water from the ice water stand. He sprinkled her face lightly. The judge and Pierpont murmured together in bewilderment. Gloria returned gradually to consciousness, looked about, still dazed and wondering. At length she saw the judge, lifted herself to her feet, and, finally gaining her voice, pointed to the door, crying, "That man—that man is the murderer! saw him when he killed my Dick!"

She fairly assailed the judge to drive him back to the courtroom, crying "Quick! Quick! Stop him!"

The judge walked out more slowly than Gloria wished. Gloria started to follow. Pierpont restrained her. Royce tried to quiet her.

The crowd in the courtroom was still in a flurry of excitement when the court officer called for order. The tramp was greatly alarmed. He struggled with the policeman. The judge entered and paused with one foot on the step. He stared at the tramp, then back at the door, hesitated, set his jaws in stern resolution, motioned to the officer, and said, "Release him."

The policeman holding the tramp let him go. He threw a glance over his shoulder at the judge, then hurried through the gate and through the crowd and out. The judge waited a moment, pondering deeply.

An officer brought to the bar two fierce looking desperadoes. The judge motioned them to wait and left the courtroom, pausing at the door to control himself.

When Gloria saw the judge returning she ran to him demanding, "Is he there? Is he a prisoner?"

The judge shook his head and mumbled, "He had gone when I got there." Gloria flew into a fury and commanded, "Then send some one after him." The judge shrugged his shoulders, nodded, and went slowly back to the courtroom. The outside steps of the court were lighted by street lamps and the court lamps. Various people were loitering outside the courtroom or going up or down the stairs when the tramp came down, forcing his way through the crowd. He ran into a policeman standing there. The policeman gave him a shove and he hurried away.

Back in the retiring room Gloria thought hard a moment, then made up her mind, and darted for the door to the street.

Pierpont checked her. "Where are you going?"

Gloria answered, resolutely: "To find that man."

She tore the door open and rushed through. Royce seized his overcoat and dashed after her. Down the private stairs to the judge's room ran Gloria, followed a moment later by Royce. Reaching the street, Gloria stared up and down, wildly searching the crowd. She was frantic to see the tramp. She turned to Royce, questioning him suspiciously. "The judge let him go. Why?"

Royce shrugged his shoulders and tried to dismiss the riddle.

Gloria rounded on him with sudden doubt. "And you told me it was all a delirium. Why?"

Royce was startled by her tone. He lowered his eyes before her, and then spoke suddenly: "It is too cold for you. I'll get your furs."

He tried to lead her inside. She refused. There seemed nothing for him to do but leave her there and go for her wraps.

She stared at the crowd, then on sudden impulse ran down the steps to a policeman standing on the walk. Timidly she tapped him on the arm. "The man who just went by so hurriedly—he was poorly dressed, had a slouch hat and a beard, did you see which way he went?" she asked.

The policeman pointed to the right and Gloria started immediately to run that way. The streets were ill lit and poor, but she hurried on with hardly a glance at her surroundings. To lose the real murderer now was unthinkable to her; to have had him there in the very arms of the law, the man whom she had seen actually do her lover to death, only to have him escape again, drove her into a frenzy. She ran on, peering into dark doorways and alleys. Judge Freeman, whom she had watched all evening mete out punishment to far lesser crimes, had actually made no effort to catch this demon for her. What was the mystery of it all? Why were they all in league to thwart her and to refuse vengeance on Dick's slayer?

Her brain was whirling, her searching eyes ached and burned as they peered vainly ahead for the dread figure of the tramp. So absorbed was Gloria in her pursuit that she gave no thought to the dangers she was exposing herself to, and the dangers were many. It was a bad district, a very hotbed of crime and poverty. The hour was midnight and she was alone—a young and beautiful woman carrying money and jewels, as well as her own priceless girlhood, but the impetus of her search carried her on without a thought for her own safety.

Doctor Royce and her father had returned with her wraps to the courthouse steps only to find her gone, and wild with anxiety, they started recklessly in pursuit, each taking a different direction. By misfortune neither of them was right.

Meanwhile Gloria hastened on. She actually caught a glimpse of the tramp ahead of her; he was loitering in a doorway gnawing a crust of bread hungrily, and she redoubled her speed, but he started on and turned the corner of a street while she was in the middle of a block and when she got there he was nowhere in sight.

Suddenly she realized she was tired and weak, that she could actually go no farther, and that she must rest. As she slackened her pace she was alarmed at seeing a rough-looking man cross the street toward her; he reeled as he came on, so that she was further aroused to danger at thinking him under the influence of liquor. She did not know that this was one of the numerous dodges of the pickpocket and that she would have been safer with an actually intoxicated man. She looked up and down the street as far as she could see, but there were no policemen in sight, and, hearing steps behind her, she turned to seek protection, only to find three men more evil looking than the oncoming drunkard.

Suddenly the whole world of Gloria Stafford seemed to crumble before her eyes. Her dreams of vengeance, her hopes of ferreting out the murderer, indeed the murder itself became unreal as the immediate danger to her own person was felt. She longed to scream for help, but pluckily stayed quiet and, backing into the steps of a tenement suddenly, threw the following men into surprise for an instant.

The thing who was crossing toward her, however, came on without pause and, lurching against the iron railing to which she clung, snatched the gold bag she carried and fled with sure and steady steps, the other three following slowly in apparent oblivion of the theft.

With a sigh Gloria sank to a sitting posture on the steps behind her. The loss of a gold mesh bag with its contents meant nothing to Gloria Stafford. The sudden plunge into a whole new world—a world of maliciousness and crime; a world where murderers went free and bandits gained their aims unchallenged — appalled her. Breathing in little frightened gasps, she leaned against the friendly railing and tried to reassemble her scattered views of life.

31½ Horsepower

Speedy and Easy Riding

There's little comfort in most low priced cars. You can't use their speeds. They jostle you—they ride roughly—they don't hold the road.

The $635 Overland is different. It is not only the speediest of low priced cars—

But you can use the full speed of its powerful motor when you need it.

It has long 42-inch, easy riding, shock absorbing cantilever rear springs. In addition the 75 B Overland is a longer car—104-inch wheelbase. And it has 4-inch tires.

Its smoothness and ease of riding at any speed would do justice to a much larger and heavier car.

Come in and let us demonstrate. That's the best kind of proof.

Official Proceedings of the Board of County Commissioners of Pennington County.

Thief River Falls, Minnesota, Nov. 11th. 1916.

On the call of the County Auditor pursuant to chapter 230 of the laws of Minnesota for the year 1905 and Acts amendatory thereto, the County board of Pennington County met in special session in the office of the County Auditor, in the city of Thief River Falls, Minn., at 2 o'clock p. m. for the hearing and considering the report of the committee to inspect the repair work on the culvert on Judicial Ditch No. 14 and for any such further business that may legally come before said meeting.

Meeting was called to order by Commissioner Wold. Members present: Commissioners Wold, McGinn, Larson, Aubol and Peterson, also County Attorney H. O. Kjomme.

The committee appointed to inspect the work on the repair work on Judicial Ditch No. 14 reported that the work of replacing culverts and also the bulkheads and the backfilling over the culverts were done in a very satisfactory way, but that there was a lot of dirt left at both ends of the culverts that prevented the water from running through. This should be removed.

Motion made by Commissioner Aubol duly seconded by Commissioner McGinn that the contractor be paid the sum of $500.00 to apply on his contract, balance to be paid as soon as dirt will be removed from ends of culverts. Motion carried.

There being no further business the County Board adjourned sine die.

PETER C. WOLD,
Chairman County Board.

EVERYBODY HELPS GOOD ROADS WORK

Bemidji Commercial Club Will Also Aid Clearwater in Securing Federal Aid.

When the attention of the Bemidji Commercial club was called to the action taken by the Commercial club of Thief River Falls relative to the aid offered to Clearwater county in securing a portion of the federal apportionment for good roads in Minnesota, that organization also took similar steps. Thus the matter of cementing the various interests is steadily progressing.

With the joint action of Pennington, Red Lake and Beltrami counties there should be little trouble for Clearwater county road enthusiasts in securing sufficient aid to place the Highway near Bagley in the best shape for tourist travel the coming year.

Secretary Laird of the Commercial club is in receipt of a letter from President Meredith of the Jefferson Highway association thanking him for the action taken by the club and also for the publicity given the matter. Copies of both local papers were sent to him and Mr Meredith states that he hopes the good work will continue.

MAKING PLANS TO CARE FOR VISITING DAIRYMEN

Hotels Will Not Be Able To Accomodate All—To Secure Rooms At Private Homes.

With from five to six hundred expected delegates coming to the Dairymen's convention in Thief River Falls on Dec. 6 and 7, the convention committee of the Commercial club is busy making arrangements to care for the crowd.

It is realized that the hotels will not be able to accomodate the entire number and it will be necessary to secure rooms in private homes beyond a doubt. To get accurate information a canvass of the hotel situation was determined upon at a meeting of the committee in Tuesday afternoon.

Inasmuch as there is to be a banquet the night of Dec. 5, no doubt some of the delegates will arrive that evening so that there will be three nights that accomodations will have to be provided for, although few will be here all three nights. Some will be here only two nights, and again others only one night.

WILL BOOST SALE OF RED CROSS CHRISTMAS SEALS

Smaller Towns Will Have Opportunity to Secure Trained Nurse For ~~ Week or More.

Two Pennington county municipalities were last year among those securing the services of a visiting nurse because of the number of Christmas seals sold. Thief River Falls was one of five cities securing the services of such nurse for one month, the others being Bemidji, Montevidio, Warren and Worthington. St. Hilaire was among the smaller towns visited by a nurse for one week.

This year visiting nurses will be sent to any community, rural as well as city. Dr. I. J. Murphy of the Minnesota Public Health association in making the announcement for the year, says:

"Rural communities and small cities stand on an equal basis with the large cities in the annual Red Cross Christmas Seal Campaign. A nurse will be sent to any community for one week, regardless of size, for each 6,000 seals sold. As a rule, the larger the town, the longer they will be able to maintain the nurse. The small towns, however, should be able to sell enough seals to win a nurse for at least one week. Last year the following towns won a nurse for one month: Bemidji, Montevideo, Thief River Falls, Warren and Worthington.

In many other towns school boards and local committees hired the State Association's nurses outright; all these and many others are now striving to win a free nurse.

RECEPTION AND SMOKER PLANNED FOR DAIRYMEN

Committee Having Dairymen's Convention in Charge Arrange For Delegates' Entertainment

Active arrangements still continue for the coming Dairymen's convention to be held in Thief River Falls Dec 6 and 7. A special meeting of the three committees recently appointed by the Commercial club to arrange the details of the convention was held last Thursday, at which time sub-committees were named to provide for hotel accomodations, the club smoker, reception of delegates and their friends, and the proper display of the butter exhibit.

These committees, together with the three main committees, will meet again shortly and report back to the club, so that no detail will be overlooked. It is intended to have the convention the best ever held in the Red River valley.

Arrangements have been concluded for a banquet to be given at the Brumund hotel Tuesday evening preceding the convention proper, as many of the delegates will arrive in the city at that time. The banquet tickets will cost one dollar each and can be obtained not only by delegates and their friends, but also by all those interested in the promotion of the convention. Local dairymen, farmers, business men and citizens as a whole are welcome to the banquet on December 5.

Will Insist On Payment

County Commissioner Robert McGinn will have to rustle up a load of good, sound body maple wood and have it delivered at the home of Ed. O'Hara, democrat. Mr. McGinn is a Republican and had so much faith in the ability of his candidate for president to win out that he made a wager of a load of maple wood with Mr. O'Hara. The latter says that he will enforce payment, no matter to what extremes he is forced to go in order to do so. A money consideration equal to the cost of a load of maple will not answer the purpose—Ed. wants the wood. He has any amount of the material in his own wood yard, but is bound to have this extra load.

Lutfisk Supper.

NO REFUNDING OF LICENSE MONEY

City Under No Obligation to Make Restitution of License Fee Paid By Saloon Keeper

The supreme court finds that a saloon keeper whose license money has been paid into the treasury cannot recover any part of said money when the license is revoked for cause.

Chris Porter, formerly a liquor dealer in this city, brought suit to recover the money paid into the city for a license to sell intoxicating liquors. This license had been granted in spite of the fact that Porter was under indictment on a charge of selling liquor to a minor at the time of the application. A protest was entered and the license was revoked. Porter asked that the unearned portion of his license money be returned, but the city council decided that they had no authority under the law for such action. Suit was brought in the district court and the contention of the city upheld by Judge Grindeland. Porter appealed and the verdict of the lower court is upheld. The opinion states, however, that while there may be some doubt as to the justice of the proceeding, there is no warrant in the law as it now stands for returning the money to appellant.

The concern will have a decided buying advantage because of its two stores and as all the partners in the concern are business men of the highest calibre, the public will always be assured of the latest goods and most courteous treatment. MAY ERECT A G. A. R. MEMORIAL IN THIS CITY

Citizens Committee and Representative of Marble Works Have Matter Under Consideration

Shall a memorial to the G. A. R. be erected in Thief River Falls? If so, it will be done by popular subscriptions, and to this end, a jonit committee of the Commercial club will meet with the Cemetery board this evening to more definitely consider the proposition made by the Thief River Falls Marble Works.

Mr. Halvorson, representing the Marble Works, last evening presented a scheme to the board of directors of the club, with whom two of the members of the Cemetery association met, but it was deemed advisable to more carefully consider the proposition.

A memorial commission was proposed, to be selected from both bodies and the funds raised by popular subscription to be turned over to them for such disposition as they should deem would best serve the city's interests.

The committee from the Commercial club that will meet with the Cemetery board is composed of T. A. Way, Ed. Korstad. .O A Naplin, Wm Michelet and Daniel Shaw.

WHEN a "buyer" for an out of town retail store lands in New York on his spring or fall buying trip his troubles begin. It requires all his shrewdness and alertness to avoid the many freakish styles offered him and the many temptations to buy inferior merchandise which he can sell at a larger profit with which he is confronted.

TAKE OUR OWN MERCHANTS HERE IN TOWN, FOR EXAMPLE. WHEN THEY LEAVE ON THEIR BUYING TRIPS THEY TAKE WITH THEM A PRETTY INTIMATE KNOWLEDGE OF THE WANTS AND DISLIKES OF THE PEOPLE OF OUR COMMUNITY.

They know that, while our women demand the very newest of everything, they look unkindly on "freakish," crazy styles. They know also that we want merchandise whose quality we can pin our faith to.

WHEN THE STOCKS FINALLY ARRIVE IN THE STORES AND ARE PLACED ON DISPLAY THEY HAVE EVERY REASON TO BE PROUD OF THEM, AND SO HAVE WE SHOPPERS. THE BEAUTIFUL, SENSIBLE AND PRACTICAL STYLES ARE A DELICATE COMPLIMENT TO OUR GOOD TASTE IN STYLE MATTERS.

The average shopper doesn't appreciate the enormous amount of work entailed in getting together a stock of merchandise that will be just right.

Besides the many laborious weeks in the wholesale markets mentioned above, there are the days and nights spent in unpacking the merchandise when it finally arrives, sorting it and marking prices and then displaying it on counters, shelves and racks in attractive fashion.

AND ALL THESE THINGS, JUST THINK, ARE FOR YOUR BENEFIT, SO THAT YOU MAY GET THE NEWEST IDEAS IN ALL LINES OF MERCHANDISE ALMOST AS SOON AS THEY COME OUT, AND ALSO THAT YOU MAY DO YOUR SHOPPING EASILY AND COMFORTABLY!

Representative men from various parts of the valley will speak on methods of financing purchases of live stock. Considerable work has been done along this line in various communities. BOARD CONFERS WITH ARCHITECT Meeting Held Tuesday Morning At 9:30 In Clerk's Office For Understanding.

WILL EXCAVATE FOUR FEET

President and Clerk Authorized to Sign Contract In Behalf Of Board For Plans and Specifications.

The board of education met Tuesday morning at 9:30 in the office of Charles Pitkin, clerk of the board, to confer with Mr. Dunham of the architectural firm of Sund & Dunham of Minneapolis, who was in the city at that time.

Mr. Prichard, president of the board, stated that the board should come to an understanding with Mr. Dunham relative to the work in construction of a new school building for Thief River Falls. After some little discussion it was moved by Mr. Gambell and seconded by Mr. Backe that the president and clerk be authorized to sign a contract in behalf of the board with Sund & Dunham for the preparation of plans and specifications, provided that in case of a bond issue failing to be carried that the board would not be further obligated to Sund & Dunham. This motion prevailed and Mr. Dunham stated that he would be willing to abide by the vote for bonds.

There was considerable informal discussion as to the construction of the building, such as whether the stairway and main corridor should be of fireproof construction or not; also as to whether storm windows should be provided in addition to weather strips. The plans and specifications were ordered for bids along either line of construction as noted.

Inasmuch as there is no provision made in the tentative plans for either a playroom or an auditorium, it was thought best by some of the board to excavate under the entire building to a depth of about 4 feet, which would be down to a water line. If this were done considerable space could be utilized at any time in the future for any purpose that the board might decide upon, and which would conform to the state requirements.

AUDITOR RECEIVES STATE AID MONEY

Regular Share of State Apportionment Also Included—$25,878.50 Is Total Apportioned.

$25,878.50, Pennington county's share of the school apportionment, was received by County Auditor T. P. Anderson the first of the week from State Treasurer Gooding. The money will be ready for distribution to the school districts the first of next week.

The regular semi-annual apportionment for October is included, amounting to $10,573.50, and the special state aid apportionment, amounting to $15,305. The last sum is Pennington county's share of the state aid fund of $1,550,900.

Of this special fund, Thief River Falls schools will receive $6,240. Other schools will receive amounts proportioned to certain provisions of law regarding attendance and number of instructors.

Each pupil is reckoned at $3.50 by the October semi-annual apportionment, while the March apportionment was $2.10, making a total of $5.60 for each pupil attending school for forty days or more.

For rural school libraries there was no special aid, but County Auditor Anderson received the sum of $5.60 for four associated districts.

$703 is the sum districts will receive, which sum represents the difference between the sum that the fifteen mill tax will bring and the $500 to which they are entitled under the state law.

SEMI-MUNICIPAL RINK IS ASSURED

Action is Taken By City Council At Special Meeting of That Body On Thursday

ROARK GETS GRAVEL JOB

Time Granted Water and Sewer Contractors—Park Question Discussed—Application For Pool Hall Refused.

Light and water will be furnished free of charge by the city of Thief River Falls for the Semi-Municipal Skating rink to be built near Ramstad's barn. This was the only demand made by those in charge of the undertaking and the council very gladly granted it at a special meeting Friday evening.

The welfare of the younger element of the city for the coming winter was under discussion at this meeting. John Bratrud, Daniel Shaw and Fred Haug, appointed to look into the rink proposition by the Commercial club, appeared before the city dads and explained the course to be taken in handling and financing the ice rink problem.

Bratrud is Spokesamn.

John Bratrud acted as spokesman and told the council that their plan was to make it a semi-municipal affair. He explained fully the poor results obtained by conducting the rink on the river, and how the rise and fall of the river caused the ice to crack. Danger from air holes was another item in his speech that was covered. Mr. Bratrud stated that the committee had made arrangements for the rent of the ground, and that Mr. J. M. Bishop would allow the use of said ground for $25, providing it was partly a municipal rink. A fence 200 by 150 feet will be erected and also a large warming house with two stoves and it will be partitioned off for ladies and gentleman. "The approximate cost will be $500," said Mr. Bratrud, "but by making a small charge for skaters and by selling season tickets, I think we will be able to raise the necessary amount."

Daniel Shaw, member of the committee appointed by the Commercial club, also addressed the council, saying that it was the welfare of the young people that they were concerned in and that the rink would be one of the best places for them to pass the long winter evenings. Mr. Shaw stated that their plan was to keep the place well regulated and that a man with police authority would be placed in charge. He would also attend to the sweeping of the ice and keeping it in first class condition.

Council Members Pleased.

All the councilmen expressed a great surprise at the small demand made upon the city, as compared to last winter when over $800 was spent in the upkeep of the rink. All the electric lights and wiring are stored in the attic of the Auditorium ready for immediate use for the contemplated rink near Ramstad's barn. Alderman Reep moved that free light and water be furnished and Alderman Benson seconded the move.

Bids For Gravel Hauling

Another important matter that came before the council at its meeting was the receiving and opening of bids for the hauling of 2,000 yards of gravel to be used in graveling the main approaches to Thief River Falls. There were nine bids opened. The contractor and his price follows: Olson Bros., 79.8 cents per yard; C. C. Schuster, $1.09 per yard; P. W. Roark, 98c per yard; Poston Bros., $1.65 per yard; Ed. O'Hara, 99½c per yard; L. Crown, 97.9c per yard; M. Anderson & Sons, $1.75 per yard; T. D. Roche, $1.06 per yard; Christ Engen had in a separate bid for $1.20 per yard, including the gravel and hauling. On motion made by Froseth and seconded by Benson, P. W. Roark was awarded the contract. The motion carried unanimously.

Crown Demands Explanation

Mr. Roark's bid was acompanied by a check of $218 as a security, while the others were not. After a motion had been made that Roark be awarded the contract L. Crown demanded an explanation. President Ackerman explained that the work had been according to the terms of the advertisement and that Roark had 18 horses ready for work and that his certified check was a big item. He also stated that Mr. Roark was a taxpaying citizen of this city and he was well known to all the council members and was able to carry out the contract. "The Council," said Mr. Ackerman, "reserved the right to reject any or all bids."

Reject Pool Hall Application.

The application of Oscar Lawson for a license to operate a pool hall and bowling alley in the basement of the Citizens State bank building was rejected. Alderman Bakken making the motion, seconded by Alderman Froseth. It will be remembered that the license of this business, formerly conducted by Arnt Auli, was revoked a few weeks ago when a poker game was raided by the police. Since that time the council members have gone on record as not favoring business of this nature to be conducted in basements of buildings where police surveillance is cumbersome. Alderman Bakken said the head of the city was opposed to pool halls being located in

HONORS OF WAR WON IN CANADA

C. L. Diffenbacher Now "Somewhere in France," Was A War Hero Before Crossing Atlantic.

GERMAN NAME WAS HELP

In Detective Role, Former Local Man Effects Capture Of A Canadian Cobbler Guilty of Securing Desertions From Army.

All the honor and glory of war is not achieved along the battle front 'midst the shriekin shells and the stifling smoke of the battle line. 'Tis true that is where heroes are made with the greatest frequency, but one may acquire reknown and official recognition for acts performed far from the maddening crush and jam of the fighting hoards. Witness the case of C. L. Diffenbacher, formerly engaged in the plumbing business in this city, and who left about three years ago for Stettler, Alberta.

Mr. Diffenbacher prospered in his new home and became a loyal subject of King George. When the European unpleasantness assumed alarming proportions, "Diff" answered the call and enlisted in the Fourth Pioneer Battalion at Berlin, Ont. "Diff" is now "somewhere in France," along the battle line, and it would not be unexpected news to learn of his further recognition for deeds of valor. He has started right, as may be seen from a recent newspaper story regarding military matters in which he was deeply concerned. Facts in the case, taken from the St. Andrews Daily Telegram of Aug. 19, are as follows:

During the month preceding Aug. 19, over 100 men deserted from the ranks of the Fourth Pioneers, then stationed at St. Andrews awaiting transportation across the Atlantic. The general supposition was that these men were being taken across the frontier to the United States in motor boats. The situation became so alarming that the authorities detailed Mr. Diffenbacher and a Lieut. Pawson to discover the method by which the desertions were accomplished.

"Diff" Plays Detective.

For several days, "Diff" loitered along the water front, visiting with the owners of the various motor boats moored there. Among these chance acquaintances was Frank Loring, a St. Andrews cobbler. During one of the frequent conversations between the two men, Loring made the statement that "young men are foolish to go to the front to be shot. If I had a son who wanted to shoot Germans, the shooting would be done in my own back yard and I would do it, with the boy as the target." This was the lead for which "Diff" had been watching, and when he asserted that he wished he could desert, he was agreeably surprised to be informed that his desertion might be accomplished with very little difficulty if he so desired. A bargain was then made by which Diffenbacher, with three comrades, were to be transported that night by Loring to the United States shore, and in return for the favor, they were to pay Loring $4 each. A retainer of $6 was paid by "Diff" on the spot and the hour of departure was set for eleven o'clock, with the cobbler shop as the place of meeting.

Given Civilian Clothes.

"Diff" next made arrangements with Lieut. Pawson by which the latter was to follow the party in another boat, and assist in making the arrest. When the soldiers arrived at the cobbler shop that night, they were given civilian clothes and their uniforms were concealed in the attic. Loring suspected nothing as the party speeded along "o'er the bounding waves," but "Diff" became fearful lest Pawson might fail to overtake the boat before land was reached.

"Diff" Makes the Arrest

It was then he decided immediate action was necessary, and pulling his revolver, he ordered Loring to throw up his hands. Stopping the engine of the boat, Diffenbacher arrested Loring and placed handcuffs upon him. After the arrival of Lieut. Pawson, Loring was returned to St. Andrews and the following morning was taken before Stipendiary Court, where he was charged with "endeavoring to persuade a soldier, duly enlisted, to desert." Another charge, of "aiding and abetting in a desertion" was lodged against him, and he was bound over to the higher court for trial. The punishment for either offense, is left to the discretion of the presiding judge, and may be made life imprisonment.

Act is Recognized

Following the arrest of Loring, Mr. Diffenbacher was specially commended by the commanding officers in charge of the detachment at St. Andrews, and later, official recognition of his services was announced by the Canadian minister of war—then the the details were forwarded to the crown.

Was Secret Service Agent.

During his residence in the United States, Mr. Diffenbacher was an active member of the United States Secret Service, seeing service in the south and west in the crusade against counterfeiters, opium smugglers and Japanese blockade runners. In the performance of the duties of his vocation he was the principal in many thrilling escapades, and the experience thus gained aided him materially in securing the arrest of the man Loring.

German Name Inconvenient.

Mr. Diffenbacher has been subjected to much careful scrutiny, in some cases bordering upon the unbearable, since enlisting, this being due to the fact that he bears a German name, and that he might be a spy in the service of the Kaiser, though apparently a British subject. The Daily Telegram, in a heading over the article referred to above, says "Frank Loring Falls into a Trap of Canadian Soldier With German Name." "Diff's" further exploits as a "fighting ally" will be of much interest to his many friends here. He is the son of Mrs. W. F. Edgar, 122 Zeh St. W.

Installing Woodmen Lodge.

E. R. Nelson, manager of the Nelson Real Estate Agency, and Senator D. P. O'Neill returned to this city on Wednesday morning from Parkers Prairie, where they had organized a Woodmen lodge. They left again this evening for that city to install the lodge. Senator O'Neill came up from Parkers Prairie for the purpose of attending the flood meeting that is being held at the Commercial club rooms today.

HOOP SHOOTERS BEGIN PRACTICE

First Basketball Workout Given the High School Boys At Gym Monday Night.

ANOTHER TITLE IN SIGHT

With Gridiron Title Neatly Tucked Away, Boys Are Confident That A Winning Quint Will Be Perfected.

Coach Johnson sounded the gong for basketball practice at Lincoln high Monday afternoon and each evening a crop of athletes are in action at the gym, rehearsing the methods of handling the slippery sphere.

From the dignified senior to the verdant freshman, the sport has drawn its aspirants and a supply of good material is on hand and with Coach Johnson's able tutelage a team of championship calibre will be turned out. This was proven last year when the boys won the district title and went to Northfield to play for the state championship.

Classmen from the different classes will be on the job shortly to show their ability and skill in handling the ball, with the hope that Coach Johnson will choose them for the regular team.

The Candidates.

Among last year's veterans who were out for practice Monday afternoon were Alvin Holzknecht, Coleman Line and "Chuck" Connor. The latter will captain this year's quint. Among the stars who were lost with the graduation of the class of 1915 were Harold Schmitt, Roy Brown, Willis Fasel and Carl Hovie. There is a good list of reserves on hand, however, in the persons of Ambrose Zeh, Hobson Rogers, Elmer Tandberg, Edwin Stebbins, Ray Kiland and Charles Prichard. Among this squad all of the boys bear ear marks of being good players and some of the regular men will have a hard time to weather the storm of competition.

New Men.

Twelve men were out for the initial rehearsal and out of the dozen several fast players can be developed. These were Borry, Penney, Bryant, Johnson, Kromer, Krohn, Miller, Hanson, Flattum, McGinn, Barackman and Trulson. Borry, who played such sensational football this fall, is among this squad and will try out for standing guard. "Bullet" Rogers is also on the list for a tryout.

Coach Johnson believes that with this formidable array of candidates a winning five will result. Class games will be played and a keen watch will be kept for any trace of class shown by the players in these games. The boys are confident that they have a rosy future ahead of them and most of the followers of the game think they will close the season as they did in football—the undisputed champions of Northwestern Minnesota.

Plans For Straightening Red Lake River and Building of Retaining Dam Presented—Estimated Cost $300,000.

The special meeting in this city today to consider drainage problems in connection with the regulation of Red Lake waters as viewed for the Red Lakes and Red Lake river by the federal government which is interested in the matter from the standpoint of maintaining navigable streams, was well attended by delegates from various cities, communities and states.

Plans for straightening and deepening of the Red Lake river from the outlet of the lakes to Thief River Falls were presented by O. L. Dent of Bemidji judicial referee in ditch matters for the county of Pennington, Red Lake, Clearwater and Beltrami, embodying also the construction of a retaining dam at the outlet of the lake, the cost of which was estimated to be about $300,000.

This sum, it is proposed to divide equally into four parts. The power interests, the river and harbor interests, the state of Minnesota and the land of the white man and the Indian—each of the latter bearing an eighth.

Water power interests were represented at the meeting and to a certain extent indicated that they would be willing to stand a share of the expense, but that they could not afford a quarter of the cost. Senator D. P. O'Neill of this city then advocated that if he could influence the state legislature, he would do so to the end that if the undeveloped water power rights refused to pay their just share, then these rights should be taken from them and revert to the people.

It was generally conceded that the high water in the Red Lakes was excessive this year, some contending that it might be due to heavy precipitation, while most of those heard advanced the theory that it was due to drainage of lands around the lakes into that large body of water and its increased volume being forced down the Red Lake river, where there are no protecting banks, it overflowed with disastrous effects to settlers all along the banks for miles.

A communication from A. B. Kaercher, of Ortonville, was read into the minutes of the meeting, stating that it was in reality a very broad affair and included not only the drainage basin of the Red Lakes, but also that of the entire state, as well as the Red River valley of the North and which would also include the Dominion of Canada, making it an international affair.

Settlers along the whole Red River Valley from Highlanding to the outlet of the lake were present and presented statements that they had in several instances been forced to vacate their premises and that the overflow of the river this past year had certainly been disastrous to them.

J. J. Opsahl of Bemidji, called attention to the fact that the federal government had already spent millions in maintaining 225 miles of navigable shore line on the upper Mississippi while not one cent had

PIG RAISER GETS NATIONAL MEDAL

Roman Paulson Will Get Free Trip to State Fair in 1917—Is the "Champ" Pig Raiser.

Among those who attend the Minnesota state fair at Hamline next year will be Roman Paulson, of Thief River Falls, if he is able to take advantage of the free trip offered him for winning the championship of Pennington county in the state pig contest of the boys' and girls' club this year. The awards in the contest were announced this week by T. A. Erickson, University farm, St. Paul, state leader of boys' and girls' club work. The county winners will have a week's camp at the state fair under one of the club leaders at University farm. The national club medal was awarded to Mr. Paulson as county champion.

The pig that won the championship of Pennington county gained 1.32 pounds a day at a cost of 4.62 cents a pound. A report of the amount of the feed given, the cost of the feed and attention and a story of how the pig was raised were required in the contest. Mr. Paulson made a score of 69.79 out of a possible 100 per cent.

Thirty-eight county champions, thirty-six sectional prize winners and twenty-one winners of special prizes offered by live stock associations were selected from those who sent in reports. More than 400 finished in the contest. The contest was carried on by State Leader Erickson, county agents, high school agriculturists, teachers and club leaders all over the state.

Why the Dry Movement Grows

Four states—Michigan, Montana, Nebraska and South Dakota—have gone dry and we will now begin to hear various explanations from the liquor interests.

There is only one explanation for the fact that nearly half the states in the Union are now dry territory; a majority of the people in these states believe that the licensed sale of intoxicating drinks is an evil. It is public sentiment and not a "bunch of cranks" that is responsible for the dry wave.

And the liquor dealers themselves have done more to build up this anti-liquor sentiment than all the "reformers" that ever ventured forth to get the goat of Demon Rum. Saloons have always been flagrant violators of the law. They have persisted in operating after legal closing hours, in selling on Sunday and in furnishing booze to minors and drunkards. They have spent barrels of money to corrupt public officials and to influence legislation.

Every effort has been made to "regulate" saloons and laws have been passed without number designed to eliminate the more objectionable features of the business. If the saloon men themselves considered these laws as statutes to be obeyed, instead of to be evaded, and if they had "regulated" themselves the dry movement would never have gained headway.

But the liquor interests persisted in lawlessness and evasion until men lost all faith in their honesty of purpose and came to the conclusion that the only way to regulate the saloons was to put them out of business.

A majority of the people in dry territory have voted against the liquor interests and the saloon men should abide by the decision of the majority and obey the dry laws. But they won't. Instead they will continue their disgraceful practice of bootlegging and blind pigging.

And this will continue until at last the sentiment of the country will be aroused to such a pitch that the people will wipe out the liquor business in the whole nation with one mighty wallop by passing a national prohibition law.

It will be hard for us to find sympathy for the liquor dealers when that happens because the responsibility for the act will have to be laid at their own doors.—Grand Rapids Herald-Review.

Northern Minnesota is noted for its enterprise, progressiveness and hospitality. The business men of the various municipalities in this part of the state have the reputation of co-operating in every public movement that has for its object the betterment of business and social conditions. In this respect Northern Minnesota stands head and shoulders above any other section. Evidence of this in Thief River Falls this week is the manner in whch the business and professional men have taken hold of the municipal skating rink proposition. With apparent ease the necessary amount to finance this undertaking has been subscribed. Almost without exception those approached have contributed liberally and the rink is now assured. During the winter months to come men, women and children will enjoy this most healthful of all outdoor sports and those behind the movement will be more than repaid, knowing that they have provided a place of clean amusement for the people of the entire city. Yes, indeed, Northern Minnesota is in a class by itself.

◆

The organization this week of a society to look after the wants of and aid the needy poor of the city is certainly a worthy movement. Too often the purse strings are loosened to give aid to those in want at distant points while those equally or more worthy of assistance right at our own door are neglected and overlooked. An unlimited amount of charitable work can be done in Thief River Falls, as well as any other city, and the local women who have taken the initiative in the organization of this society should have the hearty co-operation of all and thus let the outside world know that Thief River Falls is one city that looks after the needy poor at home FIRST.

◆

The voters of the city will in the next few weeks be called upon to vote on a bond issue for the erection of a new school building. In times past the voters have never shifted responsibility in the matter of providing proper facilities for the education of the children of the city and there is no reason to believe that they will respond in any different manner when called upon this time. A new school building is needed. This the voters know and they care nothing about private grievances or personalities that sometimes enter into affairs of a public nature such as this. They elect school directors to look after the business details for them.

◆

The enterprise shown by the Woman's club in their efforts to secure a rest room, with a visiting nurse in attendance, for Thief River Falls is indeed commendable. No person can raise the objection that the undertaking is unnecessary or extravagant. The need of a rest room for this city and a visiting nurse for the entire county is woefully apparent and every citizen and public official should put their shoulder to the wheel and assist in every way possible.

◆

"More cattle, clover and corn" is now the motto of the farmers of Pennington county. It is heard on all sides and the farmers themselves are becoming enthusiastic. It is the chief topic of conversation at farmers' club meetings and wherever two or more farmers are found in conversation. This means much to Pennington coun—better farming, more money and permanent prosperity.

◆

Some men spend two-thirds of their time around a card table and then complain about business. No matter how small, a business demands the constant attention of the owner. If it does not get this it will soon take on the appearance of a poorly fed child. The man who is "on the job" and awake to every possibility is the one sure to prosper.

What will Governor Burnquist do in the matter of state employees? This is the question that is just now causing the "hungry" ones uneasiness and loss of sleep.

CLUB'S AID SOUGHT FOR BETTER TRAIN SERVICE

Representative of Duluth Commercial Club Addresses Local Club Members Last Thursday.

While in this city two weeks ago Mr. Pardee, of the Duluth Commercial club made a statement that the train service along the Soo line from Thief River Falls to the head of the lakes was not such as was considered suitable to bring people from the west to that particular part of the state, either for business or for pleasure. He sought the co-operation of the Commercial club of this city in a talk made before the club members Nov. 9.

This past week both of the daily papers in Duluth have taken up the matter and are pushing it as hard as they can consistently do in the hopes that better service may result from the agitation. The News-Tribune in its issue of Saturday says:

"The Soo Line from Thief River to Duluth was built for Duluth traffic. It serves freight traffic, but not passenger traffic. Nobody comes to Duluth from that country over that line. Passengers from North Dakota get to Thief River Falls at 7 p. m. They can take the night train to the Twin Cities and get there at breakfast time. To come to Duluth over the Soo Line they would have to spend the day on the road, getting here about evening. They don't come."

Further comment is made and then the article states that this city of Thief River Falls is not the best place to stay over night—at least that is the impression carried, as witness:

"To Duluth it is one night in Thief River Falls before they start, an all-day ride here, an-all day ride returning, and something worse than a night in Thief River Falls before they take the last leg of the tedious of the journey."

MUSKOGEE SELECTED FOR HIGHWAY MEETING

Delegates From Every State Traversed by Jefferson Highway Will Attend

The work of the Commercial club and citizens as a whole last summer in securing the Jefferson Highway for this city and the counties of Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater, will bear the fruit the coming season in even more evident manner than it has already done.

It is only a year ago this month that the Jefferson Highway Association was formed at New Orleans, but during this time there has been done a vast amount of work toward making the Highway the success that was proclaimed for it at that time. All along the route roads have been put into shape for a hard surfaced highway and in many localities they have been hard-surfaced.

Next week at Muskogee, Okla., the annual meeting of the association will be held, to which delegates from every state traversed by the Highway is invited to send delegates. The newest state in the union is not afraid to care for the crowd that it feels sure will be in attendance.

After the meeting is concluded a sociability run will be made to New Orleans and there is every reason to believe that thousands of machines will make the trip south over the Highway.

The president in issuing a call for the annual meeting says: "A few years ago it would have been thought extremely difficult, if not impossible, to make an automobile trip from any point in Minnesota or Iowa to New Orleans, west of the Mississippi river.

"Since the establishing of a definite route in the Jefferson Highway, nearly all well marked, and with a vast amount of improvement between Winnipeg and New Orleans, this wonderful trip from anywhere in the extreme north to the Crescent city at the mouth of the Mississippi river is now a practical trip for pleasure or business.

"Eighty-seven counties in the province of Manitoba and the states of Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana, are crossed by the Jefferson Highway.

THE "FLYING SWITCH"

Newslets of the Division Point Combed Out With The Teeth of Interrogation.

DEFENSE OF 8 HOUR LAW TO BE STRONG

Commerce Interference and Constitutionality May be Issues in Fighting Railroad's Suits.

In defense of the Adamson 8 hour Act, the administration is ready to start an aggresive fight. The law is now the object of a concerted attack by most of the big railroads of the country, this being made clear last Friday. High officials expressed the belief that the efforts to enjoin the operation of the law would fail.

If enforcement of the Adamson law is tied up, the railroad workers are expected to strike. It is the view of some of the president's advisers that the courts would hold the railroads responsible for interference with interstate commerce in such a case, and would compel them to abide by the provisions of the act.

May Try To Block Suits.

This belief is strengthened by the administration's claim that the Adamson law primarily is a measure designed to obtain a thorough and scientific investigation of facts on which to base the final legislation. It is to be effective only six months, during the time of the investigation on the application of the eight hour day. It can be extended only 30 days, at the request of the special committee appointed under it.

On the other hand it is thought it may be possible to enjoin "interference" by the railroads of interstate traffic, as labor leaders were enjoined in the famous Pullman strike of 20 years ago.

Issue May Be Act's Legality.

Work of formulating the governments course of action proceeded rapidly last Friday, under the direction of Assistant Attorney General E. M. Underwood and Solicitor General John Davis. It appeared likely the government would file a demurrer, claiming the Adamson law constitutional, in answer to the railroad's plea for an injunction restraining its enforcement. This would result in a straight-away fight on the constitutionality of the act, and would serve more quickly to bring the case before the United States supreme court.

Barden Hurt Again.

Chester Barden, alias, "Otto Luck," alias "Steve," alias "Noisy," is at it again. He is a Soo Line brakeman and has the record of being in more accidents than any other one man on the road. During the latter part of last week he met with another accident. Chester brakes on a Wheatline freight and the crew was out along the line somewhere. For some reason it was necessary to do a little repairing and "Christy" Christianson got out to "spike" a "frog" as Chester puts it. Anyhow after the job was completed "Christy" threw the hammer towards the rail and said hammer flipped around, the handle striking Barden in the corner of his left eye, and as a result, Chester is wearing a blackened "lamp." This wasn't all of the bad luck that befell Barden. Monday night the crew was frying some hamburger on a following block in the caboose. There was considerable lard in the pan and it became hot during the time the hamburger was being fried. Chester was chief cook and bottle washer on the ground, and during the operations some of the lard splattered out and burned his right hand, but not severely.

Officials in City.

G. A. Huntington, general manager of the Soo Line, and W. F. Foque, mechanical superintendent, were visitors in Thief River Falls last Friday evening while enroute to Minneapolis. They arrived here Friday afternoon from a trip of inspection over the wheatline and left again for Emerson. Engineer Booren and Fireman Dablow were in the cab and Conductor Barnett had charge of the train. They returned to Thief River Falls later in the afternoon and had their private car attached to the flyer at 10 o'clock.

$1,250,000 Order.

The Soo Line has placed orders for 800 box and 200 automobile cars that will cost the company $1,250,000, president Pennington announced last Friday. He said equipment was being added "to keep pace with the development of the country."

Mix To Minneapolis.—Chase Mix, clerk at Supt. Barnard's office, left last Friday evening for Minneapolis to attend the Minnesota-Wisconsin football game. He returned Monday morning.

Senstad in City.—Arthur Senstad, a Soo Line brakeman, who has been working on the main line in North Dakota, arrived in Thief River Falls the latter part of last week. He is on a leave of absence. Mr. Senstad was injured in the wreck at Vandewalker last week when an express car and a passenger coach went off the tracks. Mr. Senstad was "deadheading" from Enderlin to Kenmare, N. D., when the accident took place. He stated that the train had gone a mile with the trucks off the track. A traveling salesman who was on the train discovered this and hurried to notify the brakeman, but before he could reach him the train had left the track. Senstad was slightly injured and spent a week in the Minot hospital.

Attends Football Game.—Ingvald Fossum, local storekeeper at the Soo round house, left last Friday evening for Minneapolis, where he was in attendance at the Wisconsin-Minnesota football game on Saturday.

Brink To St. Hilaire.—Mortz Brink, telegraph operator at the Soo offices, passed Sunday at St. Hilaire as the guest of his parents, he returned on Monday morning.

Rayson to Wolverton.—Louis Rayson, chief clerk at Supt. W. A. Barnard's office, left Monday afternoon for Wolverton, N. D., for a visit with friends and relatives. He was accompanied by Mrs. Rayson and child.

Hoffseth On Leave.—John Hoffseth, Soo Line brakeman, who has been running out of Fordville, N. D., arrived in the city Monday evening. Mr. Hoffseth is on a leave of absence and came over for a visit with friends.

Hawes in City—G. W. Hawes, traveling freight agent for the Soo Line, with offices at Alexandria, arrived in Thief River Falls Tuesday evening to attend to matters connected with his position.

Elephant Breaks Windows—A special baggage car was attached to the Soo flyer Tuesday evening, it being used to haul a large elephant to Winnipeg from Minneapolis. Several of the windows were broken by the trunk. Every Monday morning the Soo flyer is augmented considerably in the number of cars carried as the result of the adding of several show cars passing to Winnipeg from Minneapolis.

Taylor On Trip.—C. T. Taylor, claim agent for the Soo, returned last evening from points along the Duluth line, where he had been attending to matters in his official capacity.

Keene To Minneapolis.—Trainmaster, H. D. Keene, of the Soo Line, left last evening for Minneapolis in company with his wife for a visit with friends.

New Chief Clerk.—R. T. Lindahl, accountant at the Soo offices, is relieving Louis Rayson as chief clerk at Supt. Barnard's office, during the latter's absence. Mr. Rayson is visiting at Wolverton, N. D.

Ahlborn On Visit.—Ed. Ahlborn, employed by the Soo Line in Minneapolis in the freight auditor's office, passed Sunday in Thief River Falls as the guest of his parents. He returned to Minneapolis Sunday evening to resume his duties Monday morning.

COMMERCIAL CLUB NOTES

Patrons of the reading table at the Commercial club are justly complaining of the fact that some people seem to think they can appropriate the newspapers that they find there for their own selfish use. The papers and magazines are there for all the members and are not to be taken to the homes of any one member at night time.

Rehearsals for the club play, "My Friend From India," will be held regularly from now on and the cast will be whipped into a presentable shape in a short time. The play will be a "howling" success in more ways than one.

Through the courtesy of Senator D. P. O'Neill a Minnesota Blue Book now graces the reading table of the club.

Inquiries from outsiders regarding lands and other features that might induce people to come to Thief River Falls and vicinity will hereafter be accessable to club members for such use as they might deem they can find advantage in.

MONUMENT COMMISSION NAMED AT EXTRA MEET

G. A. R. Memorial May Be Ready For Dedication by Next Decoration Day.

A special meeting of the board of directors of the Commercial club was held Tuesday morning to further consider the advisability of the erection of a suitable G. A. R. memorial in Thief River Falls.

Monday evening at a meeting between the cemetery board and a special committee from the Commercial club which had been appointed last week it was decided to refer the matter to the Commercial club for final disposition, after having carefully considered the proposition made by Mr. Halvorson, representing the Thief River Marble & Granite Works. ered the proposition made by Mr. Halvorson, representing the Thief River Marble & Granite Works.

As the result of the director's meeting George G. Johnson, Scott Laird, W. B. Fuller, W. W. Prichard, jr., and Olaf Tessum were named as a monument commission.

These men will have charge of the funds which shall be raised for the purpose by popular subscription. A meeting will be held shortly and plans made for carrying out the work of the commission and it is hoper that a suitable memorial will be ready for dedication by Decoration Day. of next year.

INSPECTED RIVER PRIOR TO MEETING

Government Engineers Pass Through Thief River Falls On Trip of Investigation Yesterday.

For the purpose of gathering general information relative to conditions existing in the Red Lake valley, including the entire area from the lakes to the Red River of the North, Col. Edward H. Schultz and E. J. Dugan, government engineers of St. Paul, on Wednesday made a trip through the country east of Thief River Falls.

The gentlemen arrived nere early on Wednesday morning and left after breakfast by auto, accompanied by Senator D. P. O'Neill, traversing the road as near the river as possible, and going to the river at certain points where they could procure such evidence which could be used at the big drainage meeting held in this city today.

The federal engineering department is interested in the drainage matter in connection with the maintenance of deep waterways for navigating purposes, and as the Red Lake river has been considered by the government a navigable stream from the Red Lakes to Thief River Falls for many years, it was merely a precautionary step on their part to secure reliable information relative to the actual conditions as they now exist.

STATE BODY OF "J-H" TO FORM TOMORROW

Meeting For That Purpose To Be Held in St. Paul Hotel—Seven Delegates From Each County

The board of directors of the Pennington County Jefferson Highway association have been notified by Vice President Beek of the parent association that a state body should be formed and for this purpose he has issued a call to attend a meeting in the St. Paul Hotel in St. Paul on Friday of this week.

Just how many will go to the meeting it has been hard to determine, but Secretary Laird of the Commercial is trying to have Pennington county represented by its full quota of seven delegates, to which each county in the state is privileged.

The county organization was effected on Friday, Aug. 25, just three months ago, and the following officers elected: President, C. L. Hansen; Vice President, A. H. Pitkin, St. Hilaire; Secretary, M. Barzen; Treasurer, Ed. A. Aubol, St. Hilaire. The remainder of the board is composed of Daniel Shaw, Olaf Larson and .V C. Noper.

"Next year we must make great progress all along the line, and if we all take hold, I am sure we can," says Mr. Beek. "This year has been devoted to organization work and the preliminaries."

The Highway has been inspected from one end of the line to the other, and much actual construction work has been done. The prospects are most encouraging for next year.

CLEARWATER CO. TO SPEND BIG SUM

County Commissioners Appropriate $10,000 For Jefferson Highway $10,000 Federal Aid Given.

Jefferson Highway enthusiasts in Minnesota and especially in this vicinity will be pleased to learn that the county commissioners of Clearwater county have decided to spend a considerable sum of money during the coming year on the improvement of the highway running through that county, and especially the bad stretch of road near Bagley.

Some three weeks ago the Commercial club of this city passed resolutions offering to render such assistance to those in charge of the Jefferson Highway in Clearwater county as they should desire. This action was followed by similar resolutions of Commercial organizations in Red Lake and Beltrami counties.

With this start the matter was taken up with the state highway commission at St. Paul and the county commissioners of Clearwater county were advised that $10,000 of the federad aid for good roads would be apportioned to Clearwater county for the improvement of the Jefferson highway should that county appropriate a like sum. Word has been received that the county board of that county had a meeting last week and set aside $10,000 for this purpose and have instructed the proper authorities to comply with all the requirements of the state highway commission.

This will give $20,000 for the improvement of the Jefferson highway through Clearwater county and will really complete the missing link in the highway from north to south. The heaviest part of this construction work will be done in the town of Holt.

OLDER GENERATION MAY ORGANIZE CURLING CLUB

Committee Appointed To Ascertain Sentiment Regarding Such An Organization.

Even the older generation of Thief River Falls are contemplating on taking advantage of some of the joys Old Man Winter affords. This was evident at the club rooms Wednesday evening when many of the gray haired citizens met there for the purpose of discussing the probability of forming a curling club.

John McKinney made a motion that a committee be appointed to ascertain how many would be in favor of a curling club, and if an asosciation could be formed. George Johnson, presiding officer, named a committee consisting of Daniel Shaw, E. O. Mogenson and H. H. Spink to attend to this end. Another motion was made by Daniel Shaw and seconded by Prof. Hay that John McKinney and George Johnson make arrangements for an auto tour to Grand Forks to view the rink at that place, with an idea of formulating plans for the local club.

There was some discussion at the meeting as to whether the curlers would make use of the municipal rink or whether they shold secure quarters at the Winton-Nichols lumber company's shed. The committee named will report at a later meeting.

Says More Pictures of This Kind Would Tend To Purify Social Conditions.

Rev. F. O. Bostrom, of Grygla, and Goodridge, who witnessed the performance of "Where Are My Children" at the Princess a few weeks ago, has given out a statement to the Princess manager setting forth his views of the spectacle. The letter follows: Princess manager and Patrons:

I had the opportunity to see the Photo Play, in the Princess Theatre the other evening, entitled "Where Are My Children?" and since, quite a few who were in attendance have asked me regarding my opinion of this play.

As a minister I take the pleasure to do so now, and by doing so, I sincerely trust that no one may misconstrue my motive.

In all fairness to all concerned I must confess, that judging the picutre from the knowledge we have of life, it simply illustrates what is true. Had it been an exaggeration of facts there might have been some excuse for shy modesty to shrug her shoulders and retreat in blushing shame behind the lattice, but such was not the case. In some instances the exhibition refrained from going into the vile depths of horrors, the menace-threatening, the moral and religious decline and decay and finally death of our boasted civilization.

No word picture from sacred or profane history, produced by silver-tongued orators could have made a better impression or eclipsed the facts set forth in that picture. It was a parable true to life and no individual not guilty need blush. Only those excercising themselves in such shameful and degrading practices need the rebuke. More pictures of the same kind would do much to purify our social conditions.—F. O. BOSTROM. Gospel Minister.

Meeting Held at Commercial Club Rooms—Plans Changed and Building Will Be of Brick.

W. B. Gislason, of Badger, was elected president of the Tri-County Sanitarium at a special meeting held in this city last evening, to succeed W. S. Anderson, resigned. Hon. Dan Robinson of Argyle, was elected to fill the vacancy on the board of directors.

An excellent supply of water has been secured at a depth of 120 feet and the well being exactly on the site of the proposed building, will be thoroughly protected so as to insure a pure supply of water at all times.

The architects presented a sketch of the building which will be erected at a cost of $40,000, including the site. The plans have been altered so that the building will be of brick instead of stucco as originally planned.

FLOOD MEETING WELL ATTENDED

been spent by the government on this very important body of water, where the development was just as equally important. He believed that the government if it were approached in the right manner, would undertake the work as outlined by Mr. Dent.

Daniel Shaw of this city, stated that the Indians of the Red Lake reservation had already asked the government to drain their 300,000 acres of land at their expense, offering to stand the cost thereof, and protecting the government as to its expense by placing the standing timber of the reservation as a lien against the lands. If this drainage was put into effect it would make their lands worth from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Among those in attendance were: Prof. Chandler and W. H. Brown of Grand Forks, Jos. Ball, Crookston; J. J. Opsahl and O. L. Dent, Bemidji; O. A. Stenvick, Bagley; J. A. Duffy, Red Lake Falls; E. W. Willard, state drainage bureau, St. Paul; A. H. Pitkin, St. Hilaire; W. G. Hunt, Sunbeam; Ole Howard, Highlanding; Lars Lee, Hickory; E. B. Jones, A. Anderson and many others.

Regrets were received from Gov. Burnquist, Mayor Waugh, Winnipeg, Manitoba; Senator Nelson, Senator Clapp, St. Paul; and Congressman Steenerson.

The Afternoon Session.

The flood meeting convened again at 1 o'clock. The matter of building a bridge at Highlanding was discussed at length and all phases were looked into, such as the heighth above the water mark and whether there should be one span or whether a pier should be erected. Commissioner Wold, of the county board, stated that one span 110 feet and 10 feet above the water mark was the kind of bridge favored by the county board. This was the only topic of discussion during the afternoon.

Just previous to adjourning Senator O'Neill moved that a committee of eight be named to keep the ball rolling. One representative from each county was named. They are as follows: Andrew Johnson of Remer, Clearwater county; Mr. Giles, city engineer, Crookston, Polk; D. A. Colestrand, Highlanding, Pennington; J. A. Duffy, Red Lake Falls, Red Lake; J. J. Opsahl, Bemidji, Beltrami; Sen. L. H. Nord, International Falls, Koochiching; E. F. Chandler, Grand Forks, N. D., Rep. Stevens, Warren, Marshall county.

J. J. Opsahl of Bemidji, moved that an attempt be made to get a survey of the drainage problem under the state law. He also urged that bills be persented at the next session of the state legislature on the twenty-five per cent basis, as outlined above. Ira Richardson seconded this motion, and the meeting adjourned sine die.

OVER 50 SIGNERS ON RINK PETITION

Required Number Expected to be Signed Up by Saturday—Work of Building Will Start.

With the initative already taken by the business men of Thief River Falls, prospects for the building of a semi-Municipal ice rink immediately west of Ramstad's barn appear unusually bright.

Messrs. Fred Haug, John Bratrud and Daniel Shaw, who are canvassing the city for signers have now over fifty business men on the list. By Saturday the required number, which is 100, is expected to be in, and the work of starting the rink will begin immediately thereafter. The rink will be 200x125 feet and a fence that size will be built around the ice. A warming house 40x16 feet and divided into two parts, for ladies and gentlemen, will be erected. The approximate cost of the rink will be in the neighborhood of $500 and it will be necessary to secure this number before any operations will be commenced. Season tickets will cost $5, which also admits one other.

The following is the heading of the petition, which is being circulated:

The honorable City Council in session on Friday evening, November 17, 1916, generously donated to the public the use of water and light for the purpose of a Municipal skating rink, providing sufficient funds can be realized for the erection and maintenance thereof; now we, the undersigned, being cognizant of the dangers of the skaters on the Red Lake River and wishing to promote, if possible, and if any money sufficient can be raised, a Municipal skating rink to be built in Thief River Falls and to be constructed and managed by a committee to be selected as a permanent committee at an open public meeting to be called for such purpose, hereby subscribe the sum of $5.00, said sum to be returned to me if sufficient funds cannot be secured to construct a fence and warming house, but in event sufficient money is raised, this sum shall entitle me to a season ticket for myself and one other.

SUIT FILED WITH COURT THIS WEEK

R. K. Callaway and Wife Named Defendants In Suit and F. T. Satre Plaintiff.

Rev. R. K. Callaway and wife, residing in Rocksbury township, were named as defendants in a suit filed in the district court Tuesday with F. T. Satre plaintiff.

Mr. Satre complains of the defendants and alleges for cause of action, that on the 24th day of July 1916, Rev. and Mrs. Callaway entered into a written agreement with A. S. Chase and F. F. Haynes for the sale of the North half, northeast quarter and southwest quarter, northeast quarter and lot 1 and 2 of section seventeen in township 153, range 43, for the sum of $9,945. On the 28th day of July, 1916, before the commencement of the action, A. S. Chase and F. F. Haynes, for a valuable consideration, assigned said agreement and all their interest therein to the plaintiff. Mr. Satre also alleges that the agreement entered into by the defendants calls for a conveyance by the defendants of a tract of land consisting of 153 acres, that the abstract of title delivered by the defendants to the plaintiff shows that the tract of land comprises 154-25 acres, less a strip of land 100 feet wide across the entire west half of the northwest quarter, deeded to the Great Northern railway for right of way, which strip consists of 6 acres and a fraction of an acre. He also alleges that the agreement entered into by Mr. and Mrs. Callaway calls for a convevance of 153 acres for the sum of 9,945, or at the rate of $65 per acre, which was the value placed upon said land by parties to the agreement at the time it was entered into. On the 24th day of July, 1916, Mr. and Mrs. Callaway were and now are owners in fee of the above mentioned land and that the description contains 154-25 acres and no more, less 6 acres of right-of-way to the Great Northern, as mentioned above, and that the defendants are not able to convey to Mr. Satre more than 148¼ acres.

Mr. Satre further alleges that on the 14th day of November 1916, he tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Callaway the sum of $3,270.05 which was the balance due upon the agreement, after the plaintiff had assumed first mortgage of $5,000 and second mortgage of $396 and a payment made of $1,000 on or about August 1, 1916, and that the plaintiff then demanded from the defendant a warranty deed of that part which the defendants were owners of in fee, but that the defendants refused to deliver such a deed to the plaintiff and has refused t odo so ever since.

Mr. Satre in his complaint states that he is still ready to pay the balance of the purchase money upon the delivery of the warranty deed to premises actually owned by the defendants, at the rate of $65 per acre.

The plaintiff, Mr. Satre, now demands judgment that the defendants execute a warranty deed and deliver to the plaintiff for 148¼ acres upon the payment of the balance of the purchase money in the sum of $3,270, or the return of purchase money of $1,000 already paid and one thousand dollars damages, with interest on $1,000 from the first day of August 1916, in case the defendants cannot execute such a deed.

O. A. Naplin has been retained by Mr. Satre.

CITY CARRIER ROUTES BEING REARRANGED

One Carrier For East Side and Two For West Side—Wm. Sponheim New Carrier.

Postmaster John Morgan and his assistants are now busy rearranging the city carrier routes. This is made necessary by the announcement from Washington that a third city carrier will be put on Dec. 1.

One carrier will be assigned exclusively to the east side but just how the two routes on the west side will be divided has not yet been determined. It is likely though, that one carrier will be given the business section and a small portion of the residence district, while the other will handle the remainder of the residence portion.

Wm. Sponheim, who has been acting as substitute carrier, has received the appointment as the third city carrier.

A Correction.

Two weeks ago an artcile appeared in The Times, stating that certain parties claimed they had seen Game Warden Wm. Munch out hunting before the season opened. In justice to Mr. Munch it is only right that his explanation of the charge be given space.

Mr. Munch's statement of the incident causing this charge is as follows: On the particular day that he was accused of hunting before the opening of the season he arrested J. Belloma at Anita for hunting out of season and was taking his prisoner by auto to Warren. On the way he passed a field and at a distance saw two men who appeared to be hunting with a gun. He stopped the car and, leaving his prisoner in charge of Prof. Lake of Argyle, in whose car he was riding, walked across the field to where the men were. He found them to be two farmers boys with an air rifle. They walked back to the car with him and just as they reached the edge of the field two men passed in a car. One called out "are you getting much?" Mr. Munch answered, "about as much as you are" and then thought no more of it. The men evidently thought that Mr. Munch was actually hunting and later told their friends so.

Another misstatement in The Times was that the state laws made it an offense to shoot ducks from a boat except in an open lake. The law is just the opposite of this, the section reading as follows: "It shall be unlawful to pursue, take, catch, kill or shoot from any boat, canoe, contrivance or device whatever, not otherwise prohibited on any waters of this state outside or beyond the natural covering of weeds, rushes or other vegetation growing above the water, or within such natural covering or vegetation in any boat or craft except such as are propelled by paddle, or, oars or pole held in the hands."

Holds Court At Residence.

Judge N. W. Tarrant, although physically unable to be at the Municipal court rooms, was called upon to hear two cases at his residence on Wednesday. A. G. Mellem was the plaintiff in the case, while Fred Sandberg was the defendant in the first and G. M. Mefford in the second. Both actions were brought to compell tenants to vacate land. The first case wsa settled before the trial and after six witnesses had been furnished by both sides in the second case, it was taken under advisement until Saturday by Judge Tarrant, the attorneys wishing that time to submit authorities bearing on the case. Chas. E. Boughton of Red Lake Falls, represented the plaintiff and Frank A. Grady of Crookston, the defendant. The lands, the right to occupancy of which is under dispute, are situated in Black River township near Wiley.

ZION CHURCH TO BE DEDICATED SUNDAY

Seven Visiting Pastors Will be Present To Take Part in Services—Many Visitors Coming.

With the completion of the Zion church parsonage at 315 Arnold avenue north, the congregation believes that their church is now complete and dedication of same will occur Sunday morning at 10:30.

During the past few years the edifice at the corner of Horace avenue and second street has undergone many changes and it was not owing to debt or a mortgage on the structure that the dedication exercises have not been held. A fine parsonage has now been erected by the congregation and several alterations have been made at the church, which makes it complete.

The exercises will begin at 10:30 Sunday morning. There will be special music by the choir and it is expected that many visitors are coming for the occasion.

Rev. E. E. Jyndild, president of the Lutheran Free church of Minneapolis will be in charge of the dedication. The pastors who will be present are: Rev. Mortenson, Fosston, Rev. Gromboe, Bemidji; Rev Logeland, Nevis; Rev. Hjelmeland, Maple Bay; Rev. Gilseth, Newfolden; Rev. Hoium, Esplee.

Mrs. Douglass Ill.

Mrs. Douglass, pioneer resident of this city, residing on Red Lake Boulevard, is ill at her home. Her condition was regarded as being very grave the first of the week by attending physicians, but the danger point has now been passed and her rapid recovery is looked forward to. All the members of the Douglass family were summoned to her bedside, but on their arrival her condition had changed for the better. Mrs. Douglass is well known here and has a large host of friends, who are rejoicing over the news of the change in her condition.

Sam Clark Marries

Sam Clark, at one time editor of the Thief River Falls Press, now editor of Jim Jam Jems and widely known as a traveler and writer, was married to Clara Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. H. Johnson, 621 Sixth avenue Grand Forks, on Tuesday morning in the city of Chicago.

The marriage came as a complete surprise to even Clark's closest friends and to whom he announced his intentions only a few days ago. News of the plans leaked out Monday night but the report could not be verified. The friends of the bride knew she was to be united in marriage some time during the winter, but she would give no further information. She would not even tell the groom's name.

Sunday night Miss Johnson left Grand Forks for Minneapolis, where she met Mr. Clark and the two proceeded to Chicago.

Clark and his bride will spend a month in New York City, and in January will depart with Governor Hanna, of North Dakota and other of his friends for Germany. Upon their return the Clarks will make their future home at Bismarck, N. D., where Jim Jam Jems is published.

From the first issue of Jim Jam Jems and especially since the government attempted to deny the privilege of inter-state carriage of his magazine, Sam Clark has become nationally known.

Mr. Clark was at one time a resident of Thief River Falls and edited the Thief River Falls Press. He also resided at Minot, N. D., where he published the Reporter. He was at one time mayor of Minot.

"The Price of Malice."

In the "Price of Malice," which will be shown at the Princess theatre on Sunday, Nov. 24, there appears half a score of prominent artists of the stage and screen.

"The Price of Malice" is a big five part feature produced on a big scale. Some of the striking scenes include a large yacht in a colliion with an iceberg, and of its sinking in the ice fields off Larbador. The Metro company spent several weeks in the Far North making these scenes. It is an interesting story from beginning to end, and promises to be one of the biggest things of the season.

Codfish Supper.

Swedish Lutfisk and Norwegian Ludefiske is really dried codfish. It is softened by soaking it in lye and then in water. In recent times some concerns sell it already prepared or soaked, but in this way it losses a great deal of its strength and flavor. The Ladies' Aid of the Swedish Lutheran church will serve the old style Lutfisk Friday evening, November November 24th, at the church basement.

ROARK GETS GRAVEL JOB

Time Granted Water and Sewer Contractors—Park Question Discussed—Application for Pool Hall Refused.

basements and all the aldermen voted in favor of rejecting the application.

Alfred Styanoff, proprietor of the Soo news stand, whose application for a license to sell cigarettes was rejected at their meeting on Monday evening of last week, appeared in person before the board. Mr.Styanoff stated that his business did not consist of city trade, but had a large call for cigarettes from people passing through on the trains. President Ackerman said that it appeared as if the councilmen were opposed to the granting of any more licenses to sell cigarettes and the matter stood as in the meeting of Monday night.

Time Extended For Water Contract.

Mr. Van Alstine, of Robinson & Van Alstine, sewer and water contractors, was present at the meeting and asked for an extension in time for completing the laying of the water mains. Mr. Van Alstine said the work had been going in fine shape up to the time the sudden freeze-up came on last week. He said that two blocks yet remained to be laid, and asked if the work might be "tied-up" and continued in the spring. He also explained that considerable trouble was being experienced with their pumps, in that they would freeze up. Alderman Bakken moved that an extension be given the firm until June 1, 1917. The motion carried.

Take Up Park Question.

Emil Zeh, a member of the city board, appeared before the council stating that several years ago Mr. Knox gave a block to the city for park purposes and wished to remind the council that there was a park board in existence. Mr. Zeh said that last summer the block was given over to the raising of potatoes. President Ackerman explained the action taken by the council last spring and said the block was covered with underbrush and that they wished to have the ground plowed and seeded to potatoes so as to get the ground in shape and keep the weeds down.

Daniel Shaw who was present, came in with some good advice at this time, and said the block now owned by the city would make a better residence location than a park, and that the city would do well to dispose of the ground and purchase a piece near beautiful Squaw Point.

To Clear Brush on Duluth.

Milton Forder was granted his request to clear away the underbrush on the side of Duluth avenue, which could be used as a picnic ground. He asked no renumeration for his work, only permission to keep the brush and small trees cleared away, for fuel.

Adjourned regular meeting of the Board of Education held pursuant to adjournment.

All members were present.

By unanimous consent an informal ballot for the choice of an architect for the proposed new grade building was taken, each member of the Board writing a choice of five from among the architects in competition. Result of such ballot was as follows:

F. H. Mosse & Co.,	1.

By unanimous consent another informal ballot was taken, each member choosing one name from those included in the previous informal ballot which resulted as follows:

Sund & Dunham,	4.
J. C. Lutz with Hausler & Wright Associated,	2.

It was moved by Gambell, seconded by Dahlen that the last named informal ballot be declared to be formal, and that Sund & Dunham be selected as architects, subject to a further conference with them, and subject to the ability of the Board to enter into a contract with them embodying terms satisfactory to the Board. The clerk prepared to call the roll, whereupon the president objected, stating it to be his belief that the members had informally agreed that all votes upon the selection of an architect be made by ballot. It was stated by Gambell, with the consent of Dahlen, who seconded his motion, that his motion was made with the intention that the vote should be by ballot; and after an informal discussion in which a majority of the Board declared it to be their wish that the vote be by ballot, the vote was so taken, resulting as follows:

For the motion 4, against the motion, 2. The president declared the motion carried, and the secretary was instructed to arrange for a conference with Sund & Dunham.

Moved by Backe, seconded by Mellby that the president appoint one member to act with himself as a committee to meet with like committees from the Library Board and City Council to arrange for the amount of rent to be paid by the Board for the use of the rooms in the auditorium. Motion carried, and the president appointed C. A. Pitkin to act with him upon such committee.

On motion the meeting duly adjourned.

CHAS. A. PITKIN,
Clerk.

Special meeting of the Board of Education held at the office of the clerk at 9:30 a. m. on November 21st, 1916.

All members present together with Supt. J. H. Hay.

A. D. Dunham of the firm of Sund & Dunham was present and discussed the proposed plans for the new building on the Oakland site. Moved by Gambell, seconded by Dahlen that the president and the clerk be authorized to enter into a contract with Sund & Dunham as architects to prepare plans and specifications for the proposed new school building to be erected on the Oakland site, such contract to contain among other things, a provision making the liability of the Board under such contract contingent upon the passage of a bond issue to be voted upon at a subsequent election.

Upon roll call the motion was carried, all members voting in the affirmative.

Moved by Dahlen, seconded by Backe that the superintendent be given authority to dismiss the schools on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 23rd and 24th for the purpose of enabling the teachers to attend the meeting of the Northern Minnesota Educational Association at Crookston on those dates. Motion unanimously carried.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the clerk.

"Germany Will Never Win" Is Statement Issued by the Man From Petrograd—Allies Will Be in Same Fix.

That Russia will be the strongest power next year and that the European struggle will continue for at least another year and a half, is the way Oscar Eastman, purchasing agent for a Russian war supply company, summed up the situation in an interview with a Times representative Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Eastman landed in New York November 1 and has spent a quarter of a million dollars in the United States purchasing machinery for his firm in Petrograd, Russia. The purpose of his mission to Thief River Falls was to pay a visit to his sister, Mrs. A. E. Hedstrom, residing on the East Side.

This is Mr. Eastman's second trip to the United States. In 1914 he visited with his sister on the Pacific coast, and was called back to Russia in August when the terrible conflict broke out. When he is at Petrograd, Mr. Eastman is mechanical engineer of the war supply factory, for which firm he has spent a huge sum of money for machinery in the United States. The firm manufactures bullets, hand grenades and other engines of war. In the factory he is an expert in the setting of the fire range for guns used on the dreadnaughts in the Russian navy.

Tells of Voyage.

Mr. Eastman in telling of his voyage to America said all ships coming from Russia and other countries are forced to put in an appearance at Kirkwall, England, where they are coaled and inspected. Should a steamer break this rule it is promptly hauled in by British men-o'-war patroling the English waters. A German endeavoring to get across to America was taken off at Kirkwall and held prisoner. Mr. Eastman made the voyage to America on a Swedish steamship line, this being the safest route. He landed here November 1 and intends to return the same way, when he leaves New York December 2.

Russia Unprepared.

When asked how much longer the war in Europe would continue, Mr. Eastman replied: "They will keep fighting at least one year and a half more; it may be even longer, probably two or even three years. Russia will be the strongest power next year," he continued, "and they will start to fight next year." According to Mr. Eastman the main trouble experienced is in equipping the men for battle. They have an almost inexhaustible supply of men, but without equipment they are worthless.

"Who Will Win?"

Confronted with the question, "Who will win this war?" Mr. Eastman shrugged his shoulders, cast a smile, and said: "Germany will never win. Neither will the Allies. They will fight just so long and then come to peace terms. It seems that Germany wants peace. They are continually agitating peace through the Swedish press and I know that to be a fact."

Wheat Stays in Country.

Speaking of the gigantic wheat crop in Russia, Mr. Eastman said all the wheat raised in that country is not being shipped to England and France as heretofore. They are too busy transporting soldiers and war supplies. At Archangel, Russia, on the White Sea, thousands upon thousands of bushels of wheat are stored. For three days and three nights a person can ride through the wheat growing country on a fast express. This is in the vicinity of Omsk,

Cheap Railroad Rates.

Referring to the Russian railroads, travel on same is very cheap. Vladivostock to Petrograd is a distance of 6,000 miles, and a second class passenger is able to make this trip for $38. A passenger in the fourth class makes the trip for $8. An explanation for this, according to the man from Petrograd, is that the longer the trip the cheaper the rates. Mr. Eastman took this trip on the longest railway in the world when he returned to Russia in 1914. He left Seattle, crossed the Pacific and landed at Yokahoma, Japan, and then boarded the trans-Siberian railroad at Vladivostock, taking him to Petrograd.

Government Banks.

Co-operation between the farmers and the government is an outstanding feature in Rusisa. An organization called the "Semstvo" is a corporation formed of farmers and the government. This corporation assists the farmers in many ways. Hospitals, schools and other institutions are erected by the "Semtsvo" and the farmers are allowed the use of same at very reasonable rates. Each farmer donates $1 a year towards the hospital and should any member of his family or himself become ill it would cost him but $1 whether he or a family member stayed there a day or the whole year. The "Semtsvo" has an office in New York City, where they purchase farm machinery and ship it to Russia. Farmers are also given the use of farm machinery free of charge. When they have completed their work the machinery is returned.

Government Banks.

Banks in Russia are also conducted on a co-operative basis between the government, farmers and laborers. Money is loaned to farmers to the amount that their land is worth. Five per cent interest is charged in twenty-five years' time and in this way the interest pays for the capital.

Explosive Bullets.

Going back to the war again, Mr. Eastman said the Germans were not obeying international law in their campaign against their enemies. He charged them with using explosive bullets, an absolute violation of the law. He noted particularly an instance where one of his friends had been wounded by an explosive bullet, and said there were over forty distinct pieces of lead in one arm. Pictures of the wound were taken daily by army physicians.

Cut Prisoners' Ears Off.

"Petrograd, Russia, does not show much effect from the war," said Mr. Eastman. "Of course there are many articles that are scarce, such as sugar, etc." The horrors of war are brought to their doors, however, there being many hospitals for wounded located in the Russian city. There are no prisoners of war in Petrograd, according to Mr. Eastman, most of the prisoners being stationed at Moscow. In England most of the positions formerly filled by men are now being held by young women, but this is not the case in Russia.

Mr. Eastman related during the interview a horrible case, where a Russian had been taken prisoner by the Austrians. The Rusisan on being taken into the Austrian camp refused to divulge certain military secrets and positions of the army. The officers then clipped one ear off and the other followed when the prisoner refused to tell. Finally his tongue was cut half off. The prisoner was then freed and he arrived in Petrograd. Mr. Eastman was among the many thousands who had the opportunty to see the hero. Mr. Eastman stated that the man was decorated with many medals by the military authorities, and and that a large sum of money was presented to him for the upkeep of his family.

Left Tuesday Night.

Mr. Eastman took his departure Tuesday evening for Petrograd, Russia. He will sail from New York December 2. His trip this time will take him to Haparanda, Sweden, the northernmost city in that country, which is located in the North Pole circle. On the trip to the United States he went through the Baltic Sea, but this is now frozen over and the other route was necessary. From Haparanda he will board a train and thus reach his destination. Mr. Eastman came to Petrograd, Russia, when he was three years old. He was born in Finland. When leaving Tuesday evening on the Soo flyer Mr. Eastman stated that he would return to this country and city when the war had ended, but right now he was too busy buying up material for the Russian government to whip the Germans.

"J-H" DECLARATION DESCRIBES PEMBINA

Blazing of the Trail and Organization of "J-H" County Association.

The current number of the Jefferson Highway Declaration contains two stories from Thief River Falls, the first one telling of the wonderful Pembina Trail and of its excellent condition for travel after the most severe rains.

The second story tells of the blazing of the trail in September and of the organization of a Jefferson Highway county association.

In this connection the article deals also with the poor stretch of road near the Squaw Point bridge, which though not on the trail, is dangerous, and the agitation for good roads will lead the council to improve the same so as to avoid the payment of a claim for damages against the city from an accident.

In this connection the Secretary of the Commercial club will now be able to write the Highway association that the city has closed a contract for the improvement by gravelling the short piece of road.

FORD TURNS OVER ON ROAD TO BEJOU

John J. Vorachek of This City, Meets With Accident Sunday, Nov. 12, Escaping Serious Injury.

John J. Vorachek returned to this city last Friday evening from Mahnomen, where he had been confined since Sunday, November 12, as the result of having been injured in an auto accident. The following taken from the Pioneer gives the account of the affair:

"John J. Vorachek, of Thief River Falls, escaped serious injury Sunday when his Ford turned over on the road a few miles south of Bejou. Mr. Vorachek was coming to Mahnomen from his home. The day was cold and he was taking advantage of fine roads between here and Bejou, hurrying in where it was warm. This is the last he remembers until he came to himself in the Mahnomen House. Henry Harty and Frank Johnson were going to Bejou that afternoon. A few miles this side of Bejou they came upon the auto turned on its side with Mr. Vorachek walking around it in a dazed condition. He was rather incoherent at the time in his account of the accident and could tell them very little about it. They took him in and brought him to Mahnomen. Two hours later Mr. Vorachek could talk but remembered nothing about Messrs. Harty and Johnson bringing him to town. He was badly bruised and that he escaped serious injury or death is miraculous. The car was on its side, turned completely around, facing the north. The road was in perfect condition where the accident occurred. E. C. Peterson went up in the evening with some help to bring in the car. After righting it, it was found that the machine could be driven under its own power, which was done, but it was a sorry looking vehicle. The radiator was caved in, the top and windshield badly smashed, and the body stove in. Mrs. Vorachek was sent for and Dr. Carman, of Detroit, was called in consultation with Dr. Rumerich to look after Mr. Vorachek's injuries."

Virginia Brooks Washburn, the well-known Chicago social worker, says:

"This picture presents the problem of the girl adrift in a manner so striking and effective as to make it of inestimable value in the campaign for morality.

"Every father, every mother should see it in order that they may recognize the cunning pitfalls that are set for the feet of young girls in a great city. Only those of us who have been in the thick of the battle against the white slavers can appreciate how great a service has been rendered by the producers of this picture."

Could your daughter find eternal happiness and peace of soul, if she knew that she was doubted by others? "The Innocence of Ruth" embodies the experience of a beautiful young girl who is left alone in the world, and the same man who has ruined her father has determined to ruin her. How perilously near he comes to accomplishing it, is graphically brought out in the picture, which comes to a climax of unusual strength. It is essentially a story of Greater New York, possessing all the interesting side lights on the so-called "high life" in the Metropolis.

THE PRINCESS WHERE EVERYBODY GOES

THE FARMERS

OF PENNINGTON AND ADJOINING COUNTIES

By M. A MATTISON

Stock Tides Him Over.

A. C. Simonson, who lives on the northeast quarter of section 32, Excel township, says he does not mind the small yield of grain the past season as he has his farm well stocked with cattle, from which he is deriving a comfortable income. He had no trouble in raising plenty of feed so it will be easy for him to winter all the stock he has. At the present time he is milking twelve cows, and the cream separator is busy grinding out the dollars for him every morning and evening. The farmer who is situated this way need not fear the unfavorable season. Mr. Simonson is an old resident of Marshall county and has operated for four years the farm upon which he now resides.

Live stock Makes it Safe.

On a well improved farm, section 28, Excel township, Marshall county, resides August Koglin. Nineteen years ago Mr. Koglin came to the county from Polk county, this state. He believes there is only one safe way of playing the farming game in this community, and that is by keeping a good herd of cattle and by diversified farming and rotation of crops. Among the recent improvements on the Koglin farm is a fine new residence which is now in the hands of the plasterers and will be completed in a very short time. He says he is well satisfied with this part of the state and has made good in every sense of the word.

Glad to Get Back From Canada

Among those in this part of the country who have tried farming in Canada is N. E. Muzzy, who is moving onto his father's half section farm on the east side of the road just north of Steiner. He says that for general advantages this country is so far ahead of Canada that there is no comparison. Mr. Muzzy is the son of R. L. Muzzy and will work the farm and raise live stock in partnership with his father. The farm has belonged to Mr. Muzzy, sr.. for twelve years and is in a splendid state of cultivation, besides being exceptionally well equipped with farm buildings etc. This year they will direct considerable energy to stock raising and expect to be able to prove that this is the best method of making money on Marshall county farms.

Forty Acres of Rye.

Two years ago Samuel Hasby and family moved to this section from Norman county and took up their residence on a farm two miles north of Steiner. Although working under considerable difficulty, owing to lack of sufficient capital for a good start, Mr. Hasby has done quite well and is more than satisfied with the country. He has seeded forty acres of land to rye this fall and from present indications will have a good crop next year. Rye is not a new experiment in this section and there is no good reason why he should not get a good crop.

Another Old-Timer.

Another of the men who know much about the trials and tribulations of pioneer days in this section is Simon Warring, who resides on section 29, Excel township, on the same piece of land he homesteaded thirty-five years ago. He came here with his family from Wabasha county, this state, and although he has seen some pretty hard times in the years he has been here, he declares that he made the best move of his life when he drove overland from Crookston and became one of those who have made this section what it is. He says that although the country has made wonderful strides in the past, it has not awakened to its possibilities and looks for much more rapid development of its resources in the future. Mr. Warring is an advocate of mixed farming, and says that the time will soon be here when corn will be one of the staple crops. He keeps a nice bunch of cattle and raises clover, timothy and speltz for feed. His farm is practically all under cultivation. Although not as young as some farmers, Mr. Warring is still in good health and young in spirits and it is to be hoped that he will live to see the day when this section has reached the limit of its possibilities and thus realize the fulfillment of his hopes.

Younger, But Also a Booster.

Although he has been farming "on his own hook" for only three years, Harvey Copp, who owns and operates a farm on section 19 in the same township, is none the less a consistent booster and a valuable asset to his community. Mr. Copp is a bachelor at present, but that condition is not chronic with him and he may get over it. A wife is all he needs to complete one of the nicest farm homes in his neighborhood.

This is not an advertisement seeking a helpmate for Mr. Copp but is merely a plain statement of a lamentable condition which could be easily remedied. Mr. Copp is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Copp, who reside a few miles farther south on the "ridge," and came to this county from Lake City, this state, twenty-three years ago. A nice patch of fodder and a herd of choice cattle are evidence that this progressive young farmer is on the right track and is sure to make a success of his chosen vocation.

The older residents of the county will remember that Mr. Copp, when a young boy carried off many prizes at the Pennington county Fair.

Has Cast Anchor For Good.

After making several moves and trying it out in different sections of this state and other parts of the country, S. R. Rogers and family purchased, a few years ago, the place upon which they reside, just to the north of the Harvey Copp farm. Conditions here are entirely satisfactory and it it likely that many years will elapse before the family makes another "move." Mr. Rogers asserts that upon stock raising and dairying depends the future prosperity of Marshall county and that the sooner the farmers get started in this industry the better they are off. He now has a fine herd of cattle, besides eight head of god horses with which he does his farm work. There is considerable timber on the Rogers farm and for amusement and profit during the winter months large quantities of this are cut and hauled to town by the Rogers boys. The Rogers place is well improved and nearly all of the tillable land is under cultivation.

And Here is a Log Cabin.

Down the road a little farther, on section 30 in the same township, in striking contrast to the modern buildings and other improvements to be seen on every hand, is a real example of the log cabin of pioneer lays. This is the home of John N. Whitman, who came to the county thirty-two years ago from Ottertail county and has since resided on the same quarter section. Mrs. Whitman is a daughter of Simon Warring, mention of whom is made in another paragraph. But the fact that the Whitmans still live in the old log cabin is no sign that they have not prospered. On the contrary, the old log cabin forms only a part of a very comfortable dwelling, and the farm is exceptionally well provided with other good buildings. Among these may be mentioned a new barn which was recently completed at a cost of $1,500. Mr. Whitman is a thorough believer in mixed farming and will winter about twenty head of cattle. He says that in all the years he has lived here he has never had a touch of Canada or Western fever and has it figured out that he is much better off for it. He asserts that if it is in a man to make good anywhere he can do it right here and that if a man is destined to be a failure he might as well be one here as to go to some part of the country where conditions make it easier for him to fail. Mr. Whitman has also pronounced opinions on the land speculators and contends that they are doing more to retard the development of this country than any other thing. There is too much land held by moneyed men for no other purpose than to reap the benefits from the rise in value of the land, made possible by the labor of actual settlers who work hard to improve the country. And who can say that Mr. Whitman is not right?

More Actual Settlers Needed.

M. O. Saugen and family have a fine home on section 31, Excel township. Mr. Saugen came to this country twenty-one years ago from Norway, while Mrs. Saugen is a native of Iowa and for several years prior to her marriage taught in the schools of Marshall county. These people are enthusiastic boosters for this part of the state and they contend that all Northern Minnesota needs to bring it to the front rank is more actual settlers to develop farms and make improvements. There is plenty of room for all and every new settler should be regarded as a valuable asset to the community in which he locates, is the opinion of Mr. Saugen. Mr. and Mrs. Saugen have recently moved into a fine new home, built at a cost of $3,500. Two years ago they built a new barn which cost them $1,000, and they have a deep drilled well and windmill, with an abundant supply of excellent water. Now that he has plenty of room and everything convenient Mr. Saugen is going into the stock raising and dairying business on a more extensive scale and has a herd of twenty-five choice cattle as a starter.

Perserverance Well Rewarded

That perserverance in the farming industry as well as in other lines of endeavor is sure to win, is proven by the success which has attended the efforts of J. J. Berg, one of the very first settlers on "Park" ridge. Mr. Berg and family came in 1882 from Minneapolis and settled on section 31, Excel township. In those days the settlers were few and far between and the conveniences enjoyed by the people of that neighborhood today were unheard of. Forty miles to market— and a mighty poor market at that—the hardships incident to establishing a home in the wilderness and the total isolation from the outside world were a few of the things to contend with in the early days. But times have changed. Today Mr. Berg has 240 acres of well tilled land and the finest set of farm buildings in his part of the country, including a new barn recently completed at a cost of $1,500; he has only a few miles to good markets, and with the telephone and daily mail service he and his family are in a position to enjoy life every day of the year. Dairying is rapidly becoming the chief factor in Mr. Berg's farming operations and he is at present milking twenty cows and expects to increase this number materially before next season. To take care of this herd of cattle he raises all kinds of fodder successfully, including a patch of alfalfa from which he derived two heavy crops the past season. It is the opinion of Mr. Berg that corn will eventually become acclimated here and will be one of the chief crops. As soon as a variety of corn exactly suited to this section is developed this will rapidly become a corn country as the soil is ideal for it. Four husky sons, J. R., Emil, Christian and Harold, have aided Mr. and Mrs. Berg in bringing their farm to its present state of perfection.

"The Evergreen Farm."

Believing that a good farm is worthy of a distinctive name, P. B. Malberg, who resides on section 5, Excel township, has designated his place as "The Evergreen Farm." The farm gets its name from the large number of evergreen trees which have been planted and are growing luxuriously about the premises. In the older parts of the state the best farms all have names and there is every reason why the farms of this section should be similarly treated. The fact that a farm bears a name adds an individuality to it that can be gained in no other way and prevents confusion caused by the similarity of names among the land owners in every community. Mr. Malberg came to this section in 1881 from Goodhue county and homesteaded the place upon which he now resides. That he has been sucessful in his farming operations is indicated by the fact that he now owns 440 acres of land in his neighborhood and also has a 300-acre farm in Viking township. At the present time Mr. Malberg is building a cement block residence which, when completed, will be a model farm home in every sense of the term. The structure is two and a half stories high with a full basement and will have every possible convenience with the exception of electric lights. While there is a great deal of work to be done on the house Mr. Malberg hopes to have it completed by spring. It is estimated that the cost of the new dwelling will be between $3,000 and $3,500. To show that the pioneers did not lack patriotism it may be cited that on July 4, 1883, Mr. Malberg walked from his claim to St. Hilaire and took the train from there to Fargo to celebrate the Fourth of July. The past season Mr. Malberg had fifty acres of clover and timothy and expects to increase this acreage next season. He is wintering twenty head of cattle. A gas tractor is part of the equipment of the farm and much of the heavy work is done with it.

A Booster For the Creamery.

Peter Solem, section 6, Excel township, began farming on his present place in 1894. He and his family came to the county from Brainerd and have consistently been making headway year by year until they are now in very comfortable circumstances. Mr. Solem is devoting his energies almost entirely to dairying and stock raising and is wintering a nice herd of cattle. He contends that the creamery more than any other one thing has contributed to the welfare of the farmers of this section, and believes that for this reason the farmers should stand by it to a man. According to Mr. Solem this country is past the experimental stage and from now on will forge rapidily ahead. He thinks that corn can absolutely be depended upon only for fodder purposes, but that in this respect it is the most valuable crop that can be raised here. Mr. Solem has one of the nicest farms on the "ridge," and is further improving his place each year by the construction of new buildings, fences, etc.

A Recent Arrival.

Two years ago Hugh Best and family came from Monroe county, Iowa. and settled on the farm just south of the Solem place. From what Mr. Best has observed he is of the opinion that potatoes is one of the best crops that can be successfully raised in this country and accordingly will plant a considerable area to "spuds" next season. Although this section differs in many ways from the country in which Mr. Best formerly resided, he thinks there are many advantages here not to be overlooked. A bunch of cattle, in the opinion of Mr. Best. is a valuable asset to a farm in this community.

Valuable Crops of Clover and Flax

Nestled among the trees on the sunny side of Park ridge is the fine farm home of John Christensen. Mr. Christensen is a son of Carsten Christensen, who lives farther south on the same road, and came to this country with his parents seventeen years ago from O'Brien county, Iowa. During the six years he has been operating the present farm, Mr. Christensen has met with success and is enthusiastic in boosting for his neighborhood. He is keeping a nice herd of good cattle and finds that it pays him better than any other department on the farm. To show what can be done in this section Mr. Christensen informed the writer that he had raised flax that netted him $30 an acre and last year had a small patch of clover that yielded over 400 pounds of good seed. Next year he will plant a considerable acreage of Minnesota No. 23 corn (a variety that seems particularly suited to this country) and expects to be able to prove that this is really a corn country. He says it is not to be expected that seed corn imported from Iowa and Illinois will produce matured corn in this latitude, but a variety that has become acclimated should do well here.

Another Model Farm.

Twenty-two years ago John Kellberg came to this part of the state from St. Paul and purchased a 200 acre farm on section 7, Excel township, on Park ridge. Mr. Kellberg has a well improved farm and likes it so well here that he has never been tempted to move away. The farm is well stocked with cattle and mixed farming is carried on successfully. Although not one of the early pioneers, Mr. Kellberg has been here long enough to see this country make many radical changes for the better and thinks that the development of its resources has only begun. With good drainage and proper methods of farming he looks for it to make rapid strides in the future.

Splendid "Ridge" Farm.

Situated just south of the Kellberg place on Park ridge is the fine farm of Fred Copp. It is one of the best and most prosperous looking in the neighborhood and is making money for its owner. Mr. and Mrs. Copp came to the county from Lake City. this state, twenty-six years ago and have resided continuously on the same place ever since. Although they had many difficulties to contend with in the early days they have succeeded beyond their fondest hopes. The chief branches of Mr. Copp's farming operations are dairying and cattle raising, and he has a nice herd of choice cattle which he will winter. He has also been very successful in raising clover, timothy and corn for fodder.

Will Raise More Stock.

One of the later arrivals in the community is John Meier, who resides on the farm pust south of the Copp place. He has operated the farm for the past seven years and has met with success. He is beginning to realize the importance of stock raising and is getting into this industry as rapidly as possible for him to do so, thereby reducing his dependence on the raising of small grain. Mr. Meier believes that the climate in this part of the state is very healthful and cited several instances of men who had been in poor health before coming here and had been greatly benefitted by the bracing atmosphere of this locality. The place operated by Mr. Meier is on section 7, North township, Pennington county, and is well improved. Almost every acre on the farm is under cultivation.

Gravel Pit For Side Line.

A farmer who is indeed fortunately situated is Christ Engen, who owns and operates a quarter of section 7, North township. Besides having the usual number of acres of tillable soil, he is conducting a large gravel pit on his place. The Soo runs through his farm and has put a siding into the gravel pit so that cars may be loaded and shipped to all parts of the state. That this industry is assuming considerable proportions may be assumed from the fact that Mr. Engen has in the neighborhood of twenty men employed in the pit during the summer and his shipments so far this year amounted to 410 cars. He has a large number of orders booked at the present time but owing to the shortage of cars finds it very difficult to supply the demand. Mr. Engen has been in the county fourteen years and came here from Pope county, this state. He expresses himself as very well satisfied with conditions here and sees a bright future ahead for Pennington county. Among the substantial resources of the Engen farm may be mentioned twenty-five head of good cattle. The farm is exceptionally well equipped with buildings.

Believe in Corn Raising.

That corn will grow in this country was the contention of the late John Smith, who owned and operated the northwest quarter of section18, North township. The Smith boys have been experimenting for some years with Minnesota No. 23 corn and have had satisfactory results with it. It is their belief that if this corn is allowed a few years in which to become acclimated it will be as sure and profitable a crop as can be raised here. The boys showed the writer some samples of corn raised by them last year. Although the ears are not quite as large as those raised farther south the corn was well matured and of excellent quality. Corn from the same field took second prize at the High School corn show held in this city recently. Considerable seed has been chosen from this corn and many of the farmers in that locality will no doubt avail themselves of the opportunity to secure seed corn for next season. The Smith farm is well equipped with substantial buildings and is in a good state of cultivation. As a starter in the dairying business twenty-five head of cattle will be wintered. Mr. Smith and family came to this county thirty years ago from Ohio and have been important factors in the development of its resources.

THE FINAL WIND-UP OF OUR STOCK REDUCING SALE

Practically Every Item In Our Stock a Special Value!

Little did we realize twelve months ago the present development of market conditions. Representatives of all the wholesale houses and mills predicted high prices, and in many lines we purchased additional supplies on their recommendations. But we could not foresee the very general effect of the war on markets. Today there is scarcely an item in our stock which has not substantially increased in cost. Every day we receive a long list of price advances. Were we to follow the market closely, as many eastern firms are doing, our prices would be greatly changed, but we prefer to give our customers the best merchandise at the lowest prices. Therefor, we have not(except in a few instances) advanced with the market until forced to do so by purchases at higher prices. Our stock today, at the old price basis, offers genuine savings to you. There are hundreds of items not mentioned in this "ad" on which you can save from 10 to 35 per cent by purchasing now. Plan your winter purchases and take advantage of our "below market" prices.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE

By Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes

Copyright, 1916, by Adelaide M. Hughes

SYNOPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, with his daughter Gloria, is wintering at Palm Beach. Gloria is a vivacious but willful young lady who chafes under the restraining hand of a governess from whom she repeatedly escapes. Her childish capers cause young Doctor Royce to fall in love with her. Becoming lost in the everglades she falls into the hands of the Seminole Indians. Gloria falls in love with her rescuer, Freneau. Five years later she leaves school and meets Freneau at the theater; he has forgotten Gloria. Later Freneau persuades her to forgive him. Gloria's sister-in-law, Lois, becomes intensely jealous. Freneau goes sleighing with Gloria. It results in pneumonia for Gloria, whose family becomes incensed at Freneau. Royce is summoned. Freneau's finances being low, he approaches Pierpont Stafford. Lois threatens him with dire punishment. Her husband, Gloria's brother David, becomes suspicious. Freneau plans to have Mulry send Gloria a bunch of telegrams. Gloria sees from her window an attack made upon Freneau. Doctor Royce convinces her it is delirium. Later, a telegram, followed by a letter, comes from Freneau. She replies, but her telegrams are returned. She sees the supposed suicide of Freneau reported in the paper. Gloria swears to find the murderer of her lover. Royce tells what he knows of Freneau to Mr. Stafford. Together they seek to prevent scandal from enveloping Gloria. She accuses them in her mind of conspiracy against her. Gloria goes to David's country home. She meets Mulry, who flees at once. Gloria insists on going to Palm Beach. Again she sees Mulry there. He leaves for the North. She is recognized by her one-time captor, the young Indian chief. He tells her that Royce and not Freneau was her rescuer at that time. Gloria attends night court; she sees Mulry there, also the tramp who attacked Freneau. But Judge Freeman releases him. She follows the tramp when he leaves the court, and falls into the hands of holdup men.

THIRTEENTH EPISODE

The Midnight Riot.

To be miles from home without street car fare is a luxury for the daughters of millionaires. Gloria Stafford would have taken her first experience as a great joke if she had not been devoted to so important an errand. The footpad who stole her handbug stole also her transportation. She felt that she might as well have been lost in Florida everglades again.

Of course, she would have had protection by appealing to almost any of the wayfarers. But, after her encounter with the pickpurse, she looked on everybody with suspicion. She slipped through the crowded streets and flitted along the deserted byways on the hunt for the murderer of her lover. She was afraid of everybody and everything, but most afraid of losing that man.

At last she saw him again ahead of her. He was wandering rather aimlessly. He had apparently dropped in at one or more of the little swinging doors that flapped on every corner. Gloria hastened after him, but before she could quite catch up he clambered on a surface car. The conductor had to help him aboard. He was so busy at that task that he did not see Gloria's wildly waved hands or hear her command, "Stop that car!"

If Gloria had caught the car she could not have paid the fare, though she might have given the conductor a nickel's worth of flirtation. At any rate, she missed the car. Several other cars came near not missing her as she stood irresolute in the middle of the street.

Then a taxicab bustled along. Gloria felt more at home. She did not have to pay the taxicab till the end of the voyage. She could probably have the fare charged. From the look of the ramshackle thing she could buy the cab for nothing. She told the taxicab to follow the street car ahead and keep near it, without passing it. The taxi driver was greatly impressed.

"What's the game, miss. Are you a lady detackatuff?"

Gloria looked wise and said nothing.

As she hopped in, Doctor Royce caught sight of her from a distance. A taxicab was rather conspicuous down there. He wished for another, or a pair of wings.

Then a motor ambulance came along, banging its bell. Dr. Royce had a wide acquaintance in ambulances. He dared to stop this one and ask the interne for a ride.

And so they went—the taxicab pursuing the street car; the ambulance pursuing the taxicab. It was an appropriate place for an ambulance. It was quite likely to be needed. But the ambulance had to turn into a side street before it overtook Gloria, and Royce was compelled to drop off and pursue afoot.

Then the street car that carried Trask stopped so abruptly that Gloria's taxicab shot past it, almost annihilating Trask as it whizzed by.

Gloria caught a glimpse of Trask leaving the car, grazing the taxicab and reeling down a dark street. She pounded on the glass and put her head out to check the driver. She ordered him to back up. He backed into the very street car that Trask had just left. There was a crash, a tinkle of broken glass, and Gloria was evicted through the broken door.

The chauffeur got down and began the usual wrangle with the motorman and the conductor of the street car; the passengers piled out; a crowd gathered. Two policemen ran up and began to make notes. Gloria tugged at the coat of the chauffeur, but he was too busy to pay any attention and she had no money to pay him. So she left him and ran for Trask, not entirely sorry that she had saved her fare.

The delay had enabled Doctor Royce to gain some ground, but he lost it again trying to ask the excited chauffeur where his passenger was.

Gloria could see Trask's tall, grizzled head over the heads of the crowd, and she was nearly at his heels when a belated truck, bearing a long steel girder, drove across her path. It seemed to take forever to move by. When at last it cleared the way Trask was almost out of sight. He hesitated before two or three saloon doors and Gloria had retrieved most of her lost distance. Then, suddenly, he turned and dashed into a barroom.

Gloria was headstrong, and she startled herself with her own behavior, but instinct drew the line at entering such a place. Her eyes were attracted by the sign, "Ladies' entrance" over a side door. She did not know that it led to a large dance hall at the rear of the barroom. She ventured along the grimy corridor until she heard the music and the shuffling of feet.

Then she understood and would have retreated if a brace of typsy gunmen had not come lurching in from the street and cut off her escape. She backed away from them in terror and backed into the dance hall—a large, noisy, dirty room, filled with vicious and shabby characters. Couples were dancing in characteristic clinches or sprawling about the tables. Gloria was of such a different sort that her sudden appearance caused a silence. She turned and stared.

A burley ruffian called Choey, a waterfront beau, smoking a cigarette nub, saw her and, leaving his companion, went to Gloria with admiring enthusiasm and roared:

"Chee, kid, but you're chust my style, an' chust in time for a toin."

Gloria declined his invitation with terrified thanks and started for the door, but Choey seized her by the waist, whipped her into his arms and fox-trotted away with her. She was more disgusted than afraid. She resisted vainly, pushing against him and struggling. He laughed; the crowd laughed. She struck up at the villain's face, but he held his head too high for her to reach and, laughing, whirled her round and round through the crowd.

About this time Doctor Royce was in hot pursuit of Gloria. He had caught a glimpse of her hat, and he thought he saw it turn in at a door. He was almost more angry than anxious. He tried all the doors. At length he reached the dance hall. He glanced at the crowd and felt sure that Gloria could not be there. He was about to retreat when Choey's late companion, Moll, admired him and danced up to him, daring him to invite her to a spiel. And then he saw Gloria—a most astonishing Gloria. She had been so enraged by her captor's insistence that she seized him by the neck scarf and, leaping up, caught him by the hair and dragging his head down slapped his face.

Choey was a believer in the equality of women, and he made ready to return blow for blow. Royce made a wild rush and blocked the attack. He drew Gloria's arm through his and started out.

The crowd stopped dancing and watched. Choey was not in the habit of surrendering. He let out a yell and seized Gloria's other arm. Royce broke his grip by jiu jitsu and flung him off. He fell against a table, upsetting the occupants, who rose and struck at him, then at one another. Choey leaped at Royce. The zest of battle filled the air. Royce put Gloria back of him and met Choey half way. Royce was a college boxer and Choey had a schooling in the east side rings. It was a pretty exhibition of two schools of science. The spectators were of divided opinions and began to take sides.

Men and women quarreled and smote. The whole place fell into uproar. Royce was attacked on all sides. He seized a chair and cleared a space for Gloria. It was wrenched from him. Bottles were thrown. Royce went to his knees and rose with a gash on his head.

Gloria did her best to protect him till he got up, but she was a novice in such scenes. Through a terrific melee Royce slowly fought backward to the door. Even the musicians entered the fight. Gideon Trask, never dreaming that he was the cause of it all, watched the battle from the barroom door, through which the aproned barkeepers entered the fray.

Choey's neglected lady friend began to fear for him. She forgave him the slight he had put on her, and when she saw him slip on the wet floor and go skidding under the feet of the trampling herd she was alarmed for his manly beauty. She dashed from the woman's entrance and down the street to where two policemen stood. She ran up to them, yelling:

The policemen ran with her, rapping the pavement. One of them stopped to telephone the station for the patrol wagon. Two other policemen galloped in from side streets.

Royce and Gloria had struggled through to the door just as the policemen poured in at their backs. Royce being the first man they found, they seized him roughly. Gloria interceded with anger and was threatened with a back-handed blow. Policemen have to act quickly and vigorously in riots, and these officers were not accustomed to finding well-bred young women from good homes in that quarter.

All the gang, men and women, including Moll, pointed to Royce and to Gloria as the disturbers of a peaceful gathering. While they yelled and wrangled a patrol wagon rolled into the street and backed up to the curb. The reserves tumbled out. A second wagon was on the way up.

The police began to hustle everybody toward the wagons. Gloria was willing enough to leave the place, but the thought of taking a ride in the patrol wagon was absolutely intolerable. When an officer tried to shove her along she brushed his hand from her arm and snatched off his hat, crying: "Take off your hat when you speak to me."

The officer was enraged, then amazed. He picked up his hat, put it on, took it off, and then bowed to her in mock politeness. Then she went out very haughtily.

The whole crowd was rushed into the two patrol wagons except Trask, who had hidden back of the bar when the officers descended.

As Gloria sat in the wagon clinging to Royce's arm and shivering with shame, a blowzy female with a long feather in her hat leaned over and plucked her by the sleeve. Gloria winced. The crone laughed and said:

"Don't give your really truly name, dearie."

Gloria blushed a little deeper, but she was thankful for the hint, and said so. She advised Royce to do the same, and she sat about trying to imagine a good nom de patrol wagon.

It was wasted energy for, though she didn't know it, she was going right back to the night court she came from—going as a guest and not as a spectator. At that moment the police wires were notifying Judge Freeman that a raid had been made and a load of prisoners was coming. The courtroom was empty. The attendants were yawning. The judge was sentencing a young pickpocket. He dismissed court, rose and went to his retiring room. Gloria's father was there, impatiently looking at his watch and wondering where on earth his daughter was. He had searched for her in vain and returned to the place of her disappearance.

The judge was taking off his robe when the attendant called him to the telephone. He listened, nodded his head, put up the telephone and turned to Pierpont:

"We have to wait a little while. They have just raided an east side dance hall."

Pierpont looked at his watch for the unnumbered time and paced the floor, humming: "O, Where Is My Wandering Girl Tonight?"

The old crone had fallen asleep on Gloria's shoulder, her hat feather was tickling Gloria's nose. Gloria and Royce looked at each other. She snuggled close to him for shelter. He was very tender with her. She recoiled, remembering and said:

"O, I forgot I'm not speaking to you any more."

Royce tried to appease her. She turned her back on him. She hated him immensely, considering how much she liked him. Then the wagon backed up. The police yelled, "All out!" Gloria recognized where she was. She did not know whether to be glad or sad now that she was coming into Judge Freeman's power.

The prisoners were hustled down an alleyway and through an iron door and upstairs like frightened sheep. Then they were herded into a big room of evil odor and appearance. Gloria cowered before the disgrace of being one of the common victims of the law. The law looked different to her from here, and she felt almost a sympathy for the disreputable crowd that had been gathered in with her.

Then she saw Frank Mulry. She had forgotten his existence, to say nothing of the fact that she had abused justice and asked the judge to detain him. Mulry had not seen her when she whispered to the judge. The sight of her now as one of a huddle of such wretches made him question his eyes.

He had fled from the snows of Westchester to the palms of Florida to escape her, and back again, only to be caught in a cell as a fellow prisoner. But Gloria forgot her own dubious position in her triumph. She advanced on him and murmured: "And now, Mr. Mulry, I have got you at last. I want to have a few words with you."

"Sit down," he said, offering her a place on a bench.

"No, thanks," she answered. He rose, and she demanded:

"What do you know about poor Mr. Freneau's death that you are afraid to tell me?" Mulry could not escape. She would not relent. "Why did he deceive me as to where he was going? Where was he actually going?"

Then, in that strange place, inspiration came to Mulry, and he spoke the beautiful lie he had not been able to think of before. He said:

"Miss Stafford, poor Dick had nothing dishonorable to conceal from you. He was ill. His doctor told him he must have an operation for appendicitis. He would have to be in a hospital. He was afraid that if he told you that it would endanger your health. You were so ill then, and so frail. So he concocted that imaginary business trip, and wrote the letters, and as I was going on a journey to our branch offices, he had me mail them. I only learned of his death when I returned."

Gloria almost swooned with joy. The explanation was so like what the Dick she loved would have done that she could not doubt it. It was too beautiful not to be believed. It lighted the whole dingy cell with its radiance. Her love for Freneau came back in a blaze of splendor. She seized Mulry's hand and wrung it. She had much more to say to him, but the police began to yell to the prisoners to come along.

It was a cruel return to harsh fact, but she had once more her ideals and her mission, and she marched into the courtroom with the pride of a little empress going to her coronation. She was lost in the crowd, and the judge did not see her at first. Nor did her father, who sat at his side.

The police told thier story and thrust Doctor Royce forward as the chief offender. When the judge saw him he was astounded; and then Gloria emerged and the judge sprang up from his desk. Pierpont leaped from his chair. Of all the places in the world to find his exquisite child!

The judge asked Gloria to explain. She moved around behind the bench. The officer whose hat she had taken off tried to stop her and force her into the witness chair. She slapped at him. He backed away. The judge, smiling, permitted her to march through the clerk's gate and back to his own desk.

Pierpont confronted her, and she paused to straighten her hat and kiss him. Then she shook hands with the gasping judge, drew up a chair, and sat down to explain while the policeman and the prisoners gaped at her. Gloria told her story, rising now and then to point to Choey and the other thugs. The judge tried to keep his face straight as she denounced Choey and described his treatment of her and Doctor Royce.

Judge Freeman calmed Gloria and spoke:

"Miss Gloria, what does your honor wish to have done to this man?"

"I think Doctor Royce has done enough to him. Better let them all off."

This was an unexpectedly popular suggestion. The judge pondered. The prisoners pushed forward appealingly. The judge smiled and ordered everybody discharged. They broke into loud cheers. The judge banged his desk with the gavel. The officers cleared the court, pushing the whole crowd out by the spectators' gate.

Doctor Royce was called up to the bench. Pierpont shook his head over Gloria and was cold to Royce.

Gloria spoke: "Don't blame Doctor Royce. If it hadn't been for him heaven knows what would have become of me. It's all your fault, judge, for letting the murderer off. I nearly got him, and I'll get him yet. I've got new reasons to go after him."

Pierpont was too tired to say anything but "Let's go home," or to do anything else.

Storage Batteries

Will freeze unless they are charged during the winter and they do not remain charged when the car is out of service. If they are allowed to stand without being charged, the plates deteriorate.

We are equipped with the latest facilities to care for storage battery charging and winter storage, which keeps them in proper condition. Our prices are moderate.

Overhauling is a specialty at our shop and we guarantee the work to be satisfactory. Bring your car in during the winter months and have it ready for spring. There is not a better time to have them gone over than during the winter. We have a first-class paint shop in connection. If your car needs a new coat of paint or a little touching up, you have the opportunity of having it done at a resonable price. The mechanical part of the car should be attended to, however, before painting. We can do both. Give us a trial.

IN OUR great-great-grandfathers' time many New England families had a cask of rum in the cellar.

It was freely offered to guests (except children) and freely partaken of, even as coffee is today.

This old-time custom gradually passed out of existence, and our forefathers recognized it was harmful.

Another old-time custom—coffee drinking—is slowly passing in the same fashion and for the same reason.

The abandonment of coffee drinking is made easy nowadays by the use of Instant Postum, the pure cereal beverage with the coffee-like taste.

Unlike coffee, this purely American table drink contains no "caffeine" or other harmful substances.

Postum, is now used daily in tens of thousands of the best of American homes where reason rules and health is valued.

FAMOUS PIONEER ACCIDENT VICTIM

Joseph DuChamp, of Mavie, Instantly Killed When Auto Turns Turtle Yesterday Afternoon.

CHEST WAS CRUSHED IN

Alone At Time of Accident and Steering Gear Must Have Failed to Work—Was Widely Known Throughout This Section.

Joseph DuChamp, of Mavie, fifty-nine years of age and one of the best known men in this section of the state, was instantly killed when his automobile overturned on the grade of Ditch No. 18 Wednesday afternoon. The accident happened about one and a half miles from Mavie about 2:30 o'clock, Mr. DuCamp being on his way to visit his farm located about three miles from that station.

Was Alone in Car.

There was no person with the unfortunate man at the time of the accident and any account of how it happened is largely surmise. The auto driven by Mr. DuCamp was an old high-wheel model, dangerous at all times because of its liability to upset. It is thought that on attempting to make the turn from the main road onto the ditch grade he swung his steering gear around too far and that it became wedged, causing the machine to keep on turning until it went over the high embankment. This is borne out by the fact that the automobile had evidently turned over head first, landing bottom side up on the ice at the bottom of the ditch.

Left Side Crushed.

The body was discovered by Mr. Johnson, a farmer, who was going to Mavie on business. He hastened to the settlement and notified Thomas H. Smith, cashier of the Farmers State bank, who at once left for the scene in his auto. DuCamp was found under the overturned machine with the left side of his chest entirely crushed in, but with no other marks on his body. Mr. Smith brought the remains to Mavie and notified Dr. F. H. Gambell and Coroner H. R. Halverson, of this city. Examination showed that the injuries were of such nature that death must have been instantaneous.

Was Old Resident.

Joseph DuCamp was one of the best known of the old-timers in this part of the state. Born in France, he came to Illinois when about 13 years of age, moving later to Pembina county, North Dakota. About twenty-five years ago he came to this section of Minnesota and followed the life of a woodsman, cruiser and river driver. When the eleven townships of the Red Lake Indian reservation, which now comprise eastern Pennington county, were thrown open to settleemnt, Mr. DuCamp entered into a contract with the government to transfer the remains of the Indians buried at Squaw Point to the portion of the reservation allotted to them as a burying ground. This he did by moving the bones up the river on flat boats. His was a most eventful career and he numbered among his friends and fellow-workers all those who helped make history in this section in the early lumbering days.

Funeral Friday Afternoon.

The funeral will take place from the Presbyterian church in this city on Friday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. Dr. L. R. Barackman officiating. Interment will be made at Greenwood cemetery, the grave being besides that a deceased daughter, Marie, who died about six years ago.

Deceased is survived by a wife and five children, these being Fred, Lizzie, Nora, Leonard and Joseph, all but the first-named being residents of Pennington county.

MORE MONEY WILL BE SPENT ON ROAD

Arrangements Made For Improving Stretch on Jefferson Highway In Clearwater County.

$10,000 federal aid for good roads, to go with a like sum from the county board of Clearwater county, is not sufficient to improve the Jefferson highway between Bagley and Clearbrook so as to comply with all requirements of the United States department of agriculture, additional money will be forthcoming from both those sources. This is the result of a meeting held Saturday morning of a delegation from Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater counties, and the state highway commission in St. Paul.

As noted in The Times last week, $10,000 has been appropriated by the Clearwater county board for the improvement of this bad stretch in the Jefferson highway in that county. Mr. Mullen, representing the highway commission, stated that he was fearful that $20,000 would not be sufficient to properly meet federal requirements and suggested that from $5,000 to $10,000 more be used. On receipt of specifications from the engineer of Clearwater county the state highway commission will be able to determine more definitely just what is required and will notify the proper authorities.

It was also pointed out by Mr. Mullen that in order to secure this federal aid the small section which is under consideration will have to be a part of a continuous improved highway. The fact that the Jefferson road westward from Bemidji to the Clearwater county line has not been properly improved as yet was cited by Mr. Mullen, but he was informed that Beltrami county has authorized this improvement and that it will be made during the coming year. With these two pieces of the Jefferson highway completed, a perfect road from Thief River Falls to the Twin Cities will be established.

The delegation waiting upon the state highway commission was composd of Daniel Shaw and Scott Laird of Thief River Falls, Al Kaiser of Bagley, V. M. Higginbottom of Red Lake Falls, and J. H. Beek of St. Paul.

Director Greenfield has been putting his proteges through some snappy rehearsals during the past month and the boys have been practicing assiduously for the momentuous moment. Two concerts a month during the winter is the plan of the band officers and some rare treats are in store for lovers of good band music. SHAW IS CHOSEN ROAD DIRECTOR

Thief River Falls Man is Member of New State Jefferson Highway Association.

WILL GO TO NEW ORLEANS

Officials Start on Sociability Run to Southern Terminus of Highway—Clearwater County to Receive Further Assistance.

Daniel Shaw of this city, was elected one of the three state committeemen of the newly formed Minnesota Jefferson Highway Association at the meeting held in St. Paul last Friday. Pennington county was represented by Mr. Shaw and Secretary Laird of the Commercial club.

Last year the northern part of the state was not represented on the temporary organization. It was felt that with two representatives from the southern part of the state and two from the cities, the representation was not as it should be, over two-thirds of the mileage of the Jefferson highway in Minnesota being north of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

DANIEL SHAW.

Equalize Representation

Under these conditions those attending the meeting at St. Paul on Friday believed that the northern part of the state was entitled to two represenatives, and when the committee reported back to the delegates, this idea was carried out. The report of this committe was for the election of J. H. Beek, of St. Paul, as president of the newly-formed organization, together with Herman Roe of Northfield, for secretary-treasurer, and Daniel Shaw, of Thief River Falls, J. K. Martin of Little Falls, and Thomas Cashman of Owatonna, as state committeemen. Mr. Beek becomes vice president from Minnesota by virtue of the Constitution of the parent organization, and will be one of the executive board thereof.

Much Interest Shown.

The meeting was well attended by delegates from the various counties along the highway, only two not being represented, namely Dakota and Marshall. At the present time only four counties in the state are delinquent in the national assessment of $9 per mile, these being Hennepin, Dakota, Anoka and Marshall. The delegates from Kittson county presented their check of nearly $500 during the meeting.

Goes To New Orleans

At the close of the session Mr. Shaw announced that he would be glad to attend the annual meeting of the parent organization, which was held on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week at Muskogee, Okala. He suggested that if there were others who were inclined to go that they confer with him. H. H. Orme of the state automobile association, who last year was one of the committeemen from this state, announced that he would be glad to go. Thomas Cashman of Owatonna, and Herman Roe of Northfield, the other committeeman from this state, also said they would probably accompany Mr. Shaw, so that Minnesota was well represented.

Following the annual meeting a sociability run to New Orleans was started today, and it was the intention of the Minnesota representatives to make this run. Thus the most northern state through which the Jefferson highway passes will be well represented on their first trip to the far south.

TEACHERS WILL BE VISITORS IN 1917

This Was Decided Upon At Annual Convention Held in Crookston Last Week.

Thief River Falls will entertain the Northwestern Minnesota Educational Association at their annual convention next November. This was decided upon by the executive committee of the association at this meeting held last week in Crookston.

Thief River Falls and Crookston are the only two places in the Red River Valley that are capable of caring for the large crowds in attendance and the meet is given to each city alternately.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were:

Vice President—A. J. Jedlicka, city superintendent, Mahnomen.

Miss Synneva Grindeland, secretary and treasurer, principal of the Thief River Falls high school.

Executive committee—C. R. Mc Dowell, principal of the East Grand Forks schools and L. G. Maustain, Superintendent of Fosston Schools.

On last Friday evening the principal entertainment event of the convention took place when the Crookston Commercial club tendered a banquet to the pedagogues in the Crookston Armory. J. Frank Hanly, ex-governor of Indiana, was the principal speaker.

All the instructors in the local schools returned last Saturday morning from the meet.

SPECIAL SCHOOL ELECTION SOON

Proposition to Issue Bonds in Sum of $45,000 to be Decided by Voters on Dec. 19.

FOR NEW GRADE BUILDING

Bonds Will be Held by State of Minnesota at an Interest Rate of Four Per Cent and Mature in Fifteen Years.

The electors of independent school district No. 18 of Pennington county will on Tuesday, Dec. 19, vote upon the question of issuing bonds of the district in the sum of $45,000 for the purpose of erecting a graded school building on Block 3 of Oakland addition. The official call for this special election has been issued by Clerk C A. Pitkin of the school board, and will be found in another column of this issue.

To Draw Four Per Cent.

Should the bonds carry, the issue will be disposed of to the state of Minnesota at an interest rate of four per cent, with maturity at fifteen years.

Housing conditions for the school children of the city have for some time been realized as unsatisfactory by the board of education and the members are rushing matters to an early vote in order that all preliminaries may be gotten out of the way for the beginning of the work as soon as weather conditions make such a step possible in the spring.

Architects Selected.

The contract for the drawing of the plans and the supervision of consruction has been awarded to Sund & Dunham, architects, Minneapolis, and the work of preparing the blue prints is going rapidly forward. These will be sent to the proper state authorities as soon as completed and no delay is expected from this source.

The voting place will be in the Auditorium building and the polls will be open for two hours—from seven to nine o'clock p. m.

THROWN BY HORSE; SERIOUSLY INJURED

Lars Hyland Complicates Matters by Not Seeking Medical Aid For Entire Day.

Lars Hyland is at the Physician's hospital in a badly injured condition. His jaw is broken and one ear almost severed from the head.

Hyland was out riding horseback on Sunday afternoon when the animal became unmanageable and threw him to the ground. Hyland either struck in such a manner as to break his jaw or the horse kicked him after he had fallen.

Instead of at once seeking medical aid, the injured man postponed coming to town until fully 24 hours after the accident happened, and this delay has made more difficult the work of Dr. Gambell, who is attending him. The dirt from the road was found ground into the abrasions on his face and there is considerable danger from blood poisoning.

OUR HIGH SCHOOL TAKES HIGH RANK

The editor of school notes, appearing in The Times, has been making some comparisons and submits the following report on the standing of the Thief River Falls schools:

The following information relative to the high school enrollment in Minnesota during the last year and recently announced by the state department is as enlightening as it is interesting and possibly startling to home people. There are eleven high schools in the Twin Cities and Duluth. Among the remaining 219 in the state, Thief River Fall high school last year ranked seventh in point of size. Only one school north of the Twin Cities in Minnesota, Fergus Falls, surpassed the local school in size, and that by only four students. The seven leaders are Winona, 539; Mankato, 526; Austin, 468; Stillwater, 390; Fergus Falls, 355; Albert Lea, 353; Thief River Falls, 351. The home school enrolled 94 more than Crookston, 132 more than Bemidji, 130 more than Detroit, 61 more than Alexandria, 108 more than Eveleth, 38 more than Virginia, 79 more than St. Cloud, one-fifth as many as the city of Duluth, three times as many as Warren, over four times as many as Red Lake Falls, and approximately as many as East Grand Forks, Argyle, Stephen, Hallock and Roseau all enrolled into one school. There is abundant food for thought in the above statistics and also in the fact that Fergus Falls, the only school larger than Thief River Falls north of the Twin Cities, claims a population of over 8,000, not including their colleges and state hospital for the insane.

SHOT BY ACCIDENT DIES FROM WOUND

Herman Huerd, of Washington, Dies In Grygla Hospital—Funeral Held Here Yesterday.

Herman Huerd, age 21, of the state of Washington, who was visiting with his brother on a homestead near Grygla, and who was accidentally shot November 21, when a loaded revolver fell from the cabin wall to the floor, thereby discharging and sending a bullet into Herman's side, died at the Grygla hospital six days after the accident.

The deceased and his brother were engaged in making some repairs on the inside of the cabin when the accident took place, and in some manner the revolver, which was hanging on the wall was jarred loose and fell to the floor. The revolver on alighting struck a hammer, which caused it to discharge. The bullet entered the left side just below the third rib and took a diagonal course through his body and lodged just under the skin in the side of his neck. He was immediately rushed to the hospital for medical aid, but an infection set in, causing his death.

He was brought to Thief River Falls Tuesday morning and funeral services were held Wednesday morning from St. Bernard's Catholic church.

He is survived by his parents, who reside on the Pacific coast, and his brother Nels, with whom he was visiting at the time of the accident.

Just One Thing To Consider

The people of district No. 18 will soon be asked to authorize a bond issue for the purpose of erecting an additional school building in the city of Thief River Falls. When it comes to voting on this proposition there is but one thing to consider and that is the necessity of such a building. Every thing else is of but secondary importance.

Whether or not certain features connected with the actual work of construction have been entirely to your satisfaction does not particularly matter at this time. You know that the additional school room is needed, that the children of the city are not getting all that is guaranteed them and to which they are entitled under present conditions. You have not the right to attempt to withhold longer what is theirs by casting your vote against the bond issue.

A bond issue will be asked and the proposition should carry unanimously. The one outstanding fact in connection with the whole thing is: The city needs another school and needs it at once. The board has taken the first step necessary to provide it and the people will shortly be asked to ratify that step. To permit your judgment to be swayed by any consideration other than that of maintaining the standard of the schools at the highest possible level is wrong. In order to do this more space for the scholars must be provided.

The Dairymen's Convention

On December sixth and seventh the people of Thief River Falls will entertain the members of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association. This city has been selected as the place for holding many conventions heretofore, but in many respects the coming event is the most important of them all. Dairying is now one of the leading industries of this section and is destined within a very few years to be the pursuit most generally followed by our rural population.

Thief River Falls is situated in what is pre-eminently a butter and beef region. The climate conditions and fodder products are of a nature very desirable, if not absolutely necessary, for the successful raising of the best cattle. The progress made in this industry during the past few years is phenominal, and the immediate future promises an even greater advance.

The Thief River Falls Commercial club extends a cordial invitation to farmers from every section to attend this convention. Those not already engaged in the business of cattle raising should come and be convinced that they are overlooking the surest way of making their farming efforts net them a profit. Those who have found that the pursuit offers the surest and safest road to independence on the farm should attend for the purpose of finding means for improving the system of conducting their business.

Men of national prominence, who have made the profitable raising of cattle their particular study, will be present to deliver addresses and conduct tests and experiments. Different types of dairy cattle will be on exhibition. The claims to excellence possessed by each will be discussed and, as far as possible, determined. Samples of butter from the creameries within the territory covered by the association will be displayed and prizes awarded for the best specimens. A cattle judging contest will be staged and instruction given in the selection, care and feeding of milch cows.

To the farmer already engaged in this pursuit as well as the one contemplating a start, this convention will prove most interesting and profitable. The people of the city of Thief River Falls join with the Commercial club and the Dairymen's association in extending a cordial invitation to everyone to attend. Besides the regular convention sessions, there will be entertainments of a nature pleasing and appropriate. Everything possible is being done to make this, the thirteenth convention of the association, the most successful ever held.

Northwestern Minnesota is generally regarded as a "new" country, and for that reason it will be a surprise to many to find by perusing the column headed "Farmers of Pennington and Surrounding Counties," now running in The Times, that many of these have been at their preesnt location for thirty years or more. These articles are being read with much interest everywhere and will have the effect of calling attention to the remarkable advance made by the section in late years. The series will practically constitute a history of agriculture in this region.

The early conditions with which the early comers had to contend are interestingly set forth by the very people who faced them, and their gradual improvement noted. One of the most notable features of the interviews is the unanimty with which all farmers encountered seem to regard the absolute necessity of more live stock. Everywhere the effort is for more cows. Men who for a quarter of a century have been devoting their fields to the growing of grain crops seem to have reached an agreement to the effect that this system of farming will no longer bring them a suitable recompense and are gradually drifting into dairying and diversified agriculture. While it has been generally known that these lines were receiving a great deal of attention, the rapidity of the transformation is most surprising.

Take time to read the Farm Column. You will become well posted on the work being done by the most important part of the section's population. Merchants will do well to clip these articles and preserve them. It is the intention to cover every part of the trading area tributary to Thief River Falls and the articles will form a complete and reliable directory of the rural population.

The merchants of Thief River Falls have of late been hounded to death by parties proposing to increase their business through the employment of some fantastic advertising scheme. Most any kind of advertising is better than no advertising at all, but the people have learned to tell the difference between that which is spurious and the legitimate article. For this reason much that passes for advertising works to the detriment of the merchants employing it. People have gotten to where they look askance at any person employing freakish and unusual means for calling attention to their wares. They know that the one standard vehicle of publicity is the newspaper, and it is there that they look for their bargains. Any pamphlet-offer calculated to hold good for six months or a year is received with distrust as it is patent to the least informed reader that conditions must make some adjustment in price or quality necessary within that time. Read the advertisements in your home paper. You will find the offerings genuine.

Put a Red Cross stamp on the packages you mail as well as on those you hand out. By doing this you are aiding in one of the most important undertakings in the country at this time—the stamping out of tuberculosis. Local pride should also help influence you in seeing that no package leaves without this little stamp. Thief River Falls last year was among the Minnesota cities receiving high honors because of the number of stamps used by its people and the record should be even better this year.

Minnesota lost a really great citizen in the death of Chester A. Congdon of Duluth. Possessing one of the largest fortunes in the West, Mr. Congdon nevertheless continued to the very hour of his death to devote much of his time and energy to matters generally shunned by men circumstanced as he was. The fact that a man in his position permitted himself to become a candidate for the legislature when almost any other position in the gift of the people could as easily have been reached by him, speaks well for his devotion to duty, and the further fact that he was elected by a large majority in a city made up largely of laboring people proves that he was regarded in a different light from most millionaires. Congdon Park and the magnificent boulevard drive in Duluth bearing his name are only two of the many monuments to his memory. A reserved, even austere man, he was at the bottom most friendly and companionable. At the time of his death Mr. Congdon was the Republican National committeeman from Minnesota, accepting this position because he regarded it as a duty he owed to the party with which he had all his life been affiliated.

"Do your Christmas shopping early." It is just possible that you have run across this advice somewhere before, but it is good advice and repeating it will do no harm. If you only stopped to realize how much better it would be for everybody, yourself included, if you would only heed the admonition, it is certain you would pay more attention to it. That the early shopper gets the best service holds good in Chrismas shopping even to a greater degree than under ordinary conditions. Merchants buy for the holidays only such goods as they can reasonably hope to get rid of. Buyers waiting until the last minute before making their selections are very liable to get just what the others did not want. In the excitement of the last day or so they cannot possibly receive the attention from the sales force that would have been theirs had they arrived earlier. And give a thought to the sales people. During the holiday season the employees in stores are required to do double duty. There is no way of escaping this except by locking the doors, but you can make their lot a great deal easier by doing your shopping early.

WILL TAKE COURSE IN BUTTER-MAKING

Thief River Falls Young Man Takes Advantage of Special U. of M. Course Offer.

Einer Selstad of Thief River Falls, Minn., is one of the seventy-five practical buttermakers of Minnesota who are registered for a five week's course of instruction in buttermaking and dairying at the Minnesota college of agriculture. The session, for which he registered November 20, will close December 16.

Work in buttermaking, cheesemaking, milk testing and refrigeration make up the chief part of the dairy course which Mr. Selstad is taking. About sixty lectures on dairy and butter topics during the course will relieve the monotony of shop work, that fills the greater part of the day for the dairy students. Labratory work is done in churn rooms, cheese rooms and testing labratories under the supervision of instructors. Practical methods are emphasized and new ways of doing dairy work and reasons for them are given. Only men who have had at least a year's experience are admitted to the course.

Mr. Selstad has been employed by H. K. Strand in this city and is a graduate of the Thief River Falls schools. He expects to return after the course in better dairy work is finished.

CONCERN WANTS GAS FRANCHISE

Committee of Councilmen and Citizens Will Look Into Promoters' Proposition.

WELL SITE IS PURCHASED

Duluth Avenue Lot on Which Good Water Has Been Struck is Acquired by the City for Five Hundred Dollars.

A commercial gas plant is among the possibilities for the people of Thief River Falls in the near future. A representative of a Minneapolis concern at present engaged in placing its mains in the streets of Bemidji, on Tuesday evening submitted an ordinance similar to that under which a franchise was granted in the neighboring city.

Ask For Franchise.

Mr. Stinson, representing a company making a specialty of putting gas plants into cities the size of Thief River Falls, was present and made his proposition. The franchise his company would ask here is practically the same as that under which they are operating in Bemidji.

Councilman Bakken said he feared that such a plant in private hands might operate as a competitor of the municipal electric plant and was in favor of requesting the company to make some payment for the privilege of using the streets. He thought that something in the shape of a gross earnings tax could be made to work out satisfactorily.

Takes a Different View.

City Clerk A. H. Fasel, speaking as a private citizen, said that if a gas plant would make for cheaper fuel and power the people had a right to demand that one be given an opportunity to start in business. Permitting the city to monopolize the heating and lighting privilege, in order to make the municipal plant a dividend producer, did not strike him as being for the best interests of all concerned. Indications were plentiful that he voiced the sentiments of a majorit of those present.

Committee Appointed

It was finally decided to appoint a committee of six to look into the matter and report at the next meeting. This committee consists of three councilmen and three private citizens and is made up as follows: Ole Ihle, Tobias Reep, and M. N. Benson for the council and Math Barzen, Thomas A. Way and Harry Brumund as the citizen members.

Well Site is Purchased.

Charles Bengtsen presented a proposition to the council offering to sell the lot upon which water has been struck by the drillers for the city on Duluth avenue for the sum of $500. This brought on a rather heated discussion, it being maintained that the price was too high and that a small piece of the lot would be sufficient for the city's needs. Mr. Bengtsen was present and rather ably presented his view of the matter. After much discussion Councilman Bakken finally put the matter squarely before the council, making a motion that the lot be purchased at the price asked. This was seconded by Councilman Benson and carried unanimously.

Hospital Bill Laid Over

A bill presented by the physician's hospital for the care of a pauper who died at the institution early this spring, was turned down, it developing that the man was a citizen of the township of New Solum at the time of his death.

New School at Plummer.

At a special election held on Tuesday of last week the voters at Plummer decided to erect a new school house, costing approximately $14,000. The vote stood 63 to 1.

During the coming winter necessary steps will be taken in order that the work may be started when spring arrives, and in order that the structure may be ready for occupancy by fall.

A two-story building is planned and it will be sufficiently large to enable the installation of two years high school work. The building when completed will stand out as one of the most prominent in that section of the country.

SHEEP RAISING IS PAYING INDUSTRY

R. L. Muzzy Proves That There Are Big Returns in This Line of Business.

Sheep raising bids fair to become an important factor in Northwestern Minnesota development. Where the experiment has been intelligently followed the results have been very satisfactory and with the high price of wool and mutton a great field is opened in this little-tried pursuit.

Among those who have become convinced that the raising of sheep will form an important factor in the diversified farming operations of the near future, is R. L. Muzzy, manager of the Thief River Live Stock Shippers association. He has kept close track of the returns from his sheep during the past year and finds that the profits are not only highly satisfactory, but they are steadily growing. He places his investment at $800, of which 200 is a charge for the 26 head of sheep with which he started. Pasturage was also charged against the flock at the rate of $100 per acre, the allotment being six acres. The other debit items are as follows:

Hay	$ 25

CHRISTMAS SEALS ARE NOW ON SALE

Many energetic campaign managers began the sale of Seals on November the 27th. Michigan, Iowa and many other states started the sale about the middle of November. If the Minnesota managers conduct their campaign as enthusiastically as they did last year, the state will sell more Seals than any other in much less time. Over 250 campaign managers have volunteered from various towns of the state. A score of country organizations are going to supervise the campaign for entire counties. manager, Miss Effie Hamre.

It has been learned that all of the money received as a reward for high scores in the sale of stamps need not be expended for the purpose of securing a trained nurse. Among the other things on which the regulations permit the expenditure of this money is a rest room and the Thief River Falls Woman's club will make application to have certain portions of it so applied, should this city be one of the winners.

Mis Effie Hamre has been appointed in charge of the sale for this city and the seals will be obtainable from her at the register of deeds office.

Material for the construction of a pit for the installation of scales of a Soo yards has arrived. The scales are at present located near the depot and the removing of the same will avoid a great deal of work in the switching of cars. It is reported that the ice house will also be removed to the yards.

Rayson Returns.—Louis Rayson, chief clerk at Supt. Barnard's office, returned the first of the week from Wolverton, N. D., where he and his wife had enjoyed a visit with friends and relatives. R. T. Lindal, accountant at the Soo offices, relieved Mr. Rayson.

Douglass to Moorhead.— Ralph Douglass, traveling freight agent for the Great Northern, with headquarters at Moorhead, returned to resume his duties last Saturday afernoon. He was accompanied by his wife. COMMERCIAL CLUB NOTES

Years ago many companies and individuals were interested in public lands and in acquiring title thereto. For this purpose various classes of script were used, and in many cases, because of defects which might have been cured, these script applications were rejected and the script never returned. The secretary of the Commercial club has been asked to lend his assistance in securing as much of this script as possible and aiding the rightful owners. If any one in Thief River Falls or vicinity has any of this script they should take this matter up with Mr. Laird at once.

The committee having in charge the smoker for the delegates to the Dairymen's Convention and the public in general, have under consideration several "stunts" which they expect to pull off next Wednesday evening.

Secretary Laird is still desirous of getting in touch with any one who might be going to Baltimore on Dec. 7 to 9, at which time the second anual convention of the Safety First Federation of America will be held, as he would like to have this city represented at this important meeting.

The recent improvement of the billiard tables in the club rooms by having new bedcloths placed on each table, as well as a direct lighting system over the billiard table, has been well commended by the many patrons of the club.

Rehearsals for the Commercial club play to be given on Dec. 15 are being held daily and the cast, as far as secured, are rapidly being whipped into shape under the guidance of Mrs. C. A. Pitkin.

Startling, Vivid Facts Regarding Chicago's Underworld.

A Picture That Every Man and Woman Should See.

Episodes Are Thrilling

Ashton Stevens, dramatic critic of the Chicago Examiner, writes: "I am impressed with the art of this picture as well as with its lesson. This moving picture is able, where the stage has failed, to give us the drama without brutality and the moral warning without dulness. There is no lure to the light-minded in this story. The thrill of the episodes had its instant antidote in the flashing back to the vice sessions of the vice commission, with the subject of these sketches destitute of the rouge and gay raiment, telling their stories without music and scenery, of dissipation and adventure.

"The play is virile, interesting and convincing. Its truth has not been made an excuse for vulgarity, nor is there any wallowing in indecency in the tenderloin glimpses that are required to make the point of the argument that ignorance is the real culture in which the bacillus of vice thrives."

SCENE FROM "THE LITTLE GIRL NEXT DOOR" WESTCOTT FILM CORP.

The Power of Truth

The Rev. J. P. Brushingham, pastor of the South Park Methodist Episcopal church, says:

"The presentation of this picture will do more for the cause of morality than all the reports ever filed. It is hard to conceive of any man leading a girl into wrongdoing after watching the inexorable working out of the moral law as shown on the screen. It is impossible that any girl should open the door to destruction after having been shown so vividly what lies beyond. The picture has the fascination of a great play and the sledge hammer power of truth."

Carney-Barden.

The Sacred Heart Catholic church in the city of East Grand Forks was the scene of a marriage this morning at 7:30 o'clock, when Chester W. Barden, of this city, and Miss Laura Carney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Carney, 622 Allen street, East Grand Forks, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The bride is well known in Thief River Falls, having resided here almost continuously for the past four and one-half years. During her stay here she has been employed as stenographer at the Thief River Grocery company, and made a large circle of friends. The groom needs no introduction to Thief River Falls for he also has lived here for a long term of years. He is at present employed as brakeman by the Soo Line and is one of the most popular boys on the road.

After a honeymoon trip to Wasau, Wis., and other points, the newlyweds will return to this city to make their future home after January 1, 1917.

St. Olaf's. Alumni Banquet.

One of the interesting events at the teacher's convention held at Crookston last week was the annual banquet and get-to-gether of the district and visiting alumni of St. Olaf's college. The banquet was held at the Crookston hotel, on Wednesday evening, November 22. A five course dinner was served, while toasts, solos and an address by L. W. Boe formed the evening's program. The spirit of the gathering seemed to be "What can We do For Our College?" Miss Sophie Sivertson acted as toastmistress and called upon P. M. Ringdahl for a talk on the "Future of St. Olaf." O. H. Bridston spoke on 'Out of School," and A. I. Johnson talked on "Our New Gym." Miss Inga Taralseth and Ruth Storli gave an excellent piano and voice selection, respectively. The Firemen's Dance.

Another social event took place at the Auditorium last Friday evening when the local fire department gave their annual dance. The firemen had made splendid arrangements for the affair, although the attendance was not what it should have been. Morck's orchestra furnished the music.

Dance a Success.

The dance given by the Brotherhood of Railroad trainmen at the Auditorium was a success in every way, there being at least seventy-five couples present. Dancing began promptly at 9:30 p. m. and continued through to 2:30 a. m. Excellent music was furnished by Morck's augmented orcehestra.

Postpone Banquet.

Owing to an error in not securing the hall last Saturday evening, the Thief River Falls High School Alumni Football banquet and dance has been postponed until Saturday, Dec. 9. It will be held at the Masonic Temple.

STRIKING PICTURE TO BE PRESENTED AT LYCEUM

"War's Women," One of the Really Big Successes of the Year is Booked.

One of the most widely discussed photo plays appearing in the big cities during the past summer is "War's Women." The production is on a most elaborate scale and was written for the purpose not only of depicting the heroism with which the women of the nation at war face the conditions thrust upon them and for which they are in no wise to blame, but portrays realistically the temptations besetting their part at every turn during such times. The story is replete with scenes of gripping intensity, being exceded in this respect by no photo play thus far produced. Manager Brockway is to be commended for his enterprise in securing a production of this class for Thief River Falls theatre-goers.

LAWMAKER LAID UP WITH BROKEN LEG

Representative Stenvick Meets With Serious Accident While Returning From a Visit Here.

Representative Oscar T. Stenvick is laid up at the hospital with a fractured leg, sustained while he was in the act of getting off the train at Bagley last Thursday. Mr. Stenvick had been in attendance at the meeting of drainage advocates held in this city and was returning to his home when the accident happened.

According to advice received from Mrs. Stenvick by friends in this city, Mr. Stenvick was taken to the hospital at Bemidji at once. At the time the communication was written the exact nature of the injury had not been determined and the doctors were unable to form any opinion as to the length of time he was liable to be laid up.

FINDS IN THIS CITY HIS BEST MARKET

Farmer Near Holt Will Hereafter Bring All Produce To Thief River Falls.

One farmer in Marshall county has discovered that it will pay him to send his produce a few extra miles and dispose of them in Thief River Falls. Charles Schwartz, residing near Holt, was in the city the first of the week and stated that a day or two previously he had sold a case of eggs to a merchant at Holt, receiving 30 cents per dozen for them. Upon his arrival here he was informed that the wholesalers were paying 40 cents per dozen, or $3 more per case than he was receiving at his home town. While Mr. Schwartz might be willing to stand some little difference because of the added distance, ten cents per dozen on eggs was too much, and he will hereafter come to Thief River Falls first.

The fair price and generous treatment accorded the neighboring farmers by the merchants in this city is rapidly making Thief River Falls the trading center of a large section of country. The business men here realize that in treatonig the farmer right they are building up a dependable and steadily growing trade, and that it pays them in the end to make special efforts to secure this business even though they shade their selling prices a trifle and offer better figures on what the former has to dispose of.

FAMOUS CLOTHING STOCK SACRIFICED

L. Gill Making Some Startling Prices on Men's Goods During the Next Two Weeks.

One of the biggest sales of men's goods ever seen in this section will be inaugurated tomorrow morning when L. Gill begins the closing out of the Korstad Brothers' stock, recently purchased by him. The line carried for many years by the Korstads was famous throughout this section for its uniform excellence and many of the lines offered in this sale are seldom, if ever, found at reduced prices. As is generally the case when any store changes hands, the new proprietor wishes to make some changes in the business methods as well as in the lines of goods carried. In order to make room for lines handled by him for years, Mr. Gill has decided to close out the Korstad stock. He made a very advantgeous purchase at the time the store was turned over to him and is consequently able to make some rather startling reductions. The big double page advertisement in this issue of The Times gives detailed information concerning this money-saving opportunity.

NO DRUNKS DURING PAST THIRTY DAYS

November, 1916, Should be Decorated With White Ribbon Indicative of Purity.

The police of the city of Thief River Falls have not had a single arrest for drunkenness to their credit during the month just past. This is a condition that has not been noted for so long that the mind of man runneth not back that far. Judge N. W. Tarrant of the municapal court, says that a similar dearth of business of his office has not been experienced during all the years of his incumbency and his records fail to show a similar instance of this kind. The judge adds he is positive that this is the first thirty-day period during which some one has not been jailed on a charge of intoxication since the city was first organized as a village many years ago.

Judge Tarrant has been pretty badly bunged up with rheumatism during the past couple of weeks anyway, and it is perhaps just as well that no cringing culprit has been brought before him. Rheumatism is not particularly conducive to leniency and good natured advice.

The Old Reliable

Among the business concerns making a bid for your patronage in the columns of The Times this week is the Oen Mercantile compny. This old reliable concern is one of the best known in this section of the state and has built up a tremendous trade thru its fair dealing and superior merchandise.

Just now the Oen company is calling attention to an exceptionally fine line of men's clothing. The advertisement in another column will be worth perusing by anyone in the market for goods of this kind.

HUGHES OFFICIAL LEAD IN MINNESOTA IS 392

Charles E. Hughes' plurality in Minnesota at the recent presidential election was 392 votes, the state canvassing board determined today. Slight errors in two counties resulted in a net loss of four votes by Hughes, the final official count being: Hughes, 179,544; Wilson 179,152.

About 70 ballots were thrown out by the board because they had not been entered by the county canvassing boards. Among these were some guardsmen votes.

Mr. Ole Fladeland of Grygla, Minn., says that Dr. J. E. Doran of Minneapolis has entirely cured him of his troubles and that he will cheerfully give a testimonial to this effect to any one who will call for it. We take pleasure in announcing Dr. Doran's next visit to Thief River Falls, at the Evelyn hotel Friday, Dec. 15. Hours 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. N-23-30-D-7.

Among a squad of policemen who were being examined on their knowledge of ambulance work was a certain Irishman with whom the doctor had the following colloquy:

Doctor—What would you do to a man who had a cut on the forearm?

Doctor—And what is hard water?

Policeman—Ice, sorr.—Youth's Companion.

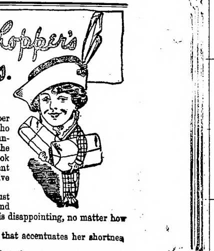
Mrs. Shrewd Shopper's Confessions.



No. 5.

IT is really painful to see the large number of women one meets on the street who are wearing hats that are entirely unbecoming to them. The hats are in the height of style, no doubt, and would look perfectly stunning on women of different types, but on the wearers they are positive "frights."

The style, shape and color of a hat must harmonize with the complexion, height and build of the wearer; otherwise the result is disappointing, no matter how fashionable the hat may be.

The short woman should avoid a hat that accentuates her shortness by its shape.

And here are a few pointers that should be memorized by every reader of these talks. It may save you the unpleasant experience of buying a hat that is highly unbecoming to you.

These facts were compiled by Chavreul, the greatest organic chemist of France in the nineteenth century, who made a special study of color schemes for women's hats in connection with their complexions. To quote the words of his book:

"THE BLACK HAT WITH WHITE, PINK OR RED FEATHERS OR FLOWERS SUITS FAIR WOMEN ADMIRABLY.

"Although it can be worn by brunettes, the effect is not so good. For these orange or yellow trimmings are best.

"THE WHITE HAT ONLY GOES WITH THE WHITE OR PINK COMPLEXION, WHILE THE DARK WOMAN WHO VENTURES TO WEAR A BLUE HAT MUST ABSOLUTELY TRIM IT IN ORANGE OR YELLOW.

"If a pink hat be worn it should be separated from the skin by the hair or by white or, even better, by green trimmings. A brown skin does not go well with a violet hat unless separated not only by the hair, but also by yellow trimmings."

No Coal Stove Can Economically Compete Against Unprotected Windows

You may have a splendid stove, one that gives out 80 to 90 per cent of the heat the coal produces, but if you make that stove work against the cold that gets past windows that are not covered with storm sash, you don't get the full comfort-making value of that heat.

Coal is too scarce this winter to be wasted that way unnecessarily and what's more, the price of coal may go so high that you could easily save this winter all and more than a full set of storm windows will cost you.

You need them anyway to keep comfortable at the lowest cost. Put them on all your windows. See us at once for a full set or such extras as you need.

"The Whole Town Was There," is the expression used by those who spent last Sunday afternoon skating on Red Lake and Thief rivers. The expression fits the case well as the crowd was the largest ever seen on the river. The splendid weather caused everyone, who had a pair of skates, to take them down from the shelf, and both young and old were seen mingling together.

Edmund Breese, the star in the five act Metro production, "The Spell of the Yukon," based on Robert W. Services's poem of the same name, is as well known on the speaking stage as he is on the screen. He will probably be best remembered for his work in "The Lion and the Mouse," in which he starred for several seasons, but in recent years New York has seldom had a season in which Edmund Breese has not been seen in a highly successful play.

Mr. Breese is known as one of the sterling actors of the present generation, one of those from whom a fine piece of work of character drawing may always be expected. For Metro, he has already appeared in two other important pictures, among them the "Shooting of Dan McGrew" and the "Song of the Wage Slave."

When "The Spell of the Yukon" is shown here for the first time on Sunday at the New Princess theatre, Christine Mayo, recently starred in several notable screen productions, will have the leading feminine role. Others in the cast are: Arthur Hoops, Billy Sherwood, Evelyn Brent, Frank BacArthur, Mary Reed and Baby Volare.

THE DRAMATIC, SMASHING, SENSATIONAL PICTURE OF THE HOUR

The Innocence of Ruth

Do you know that people will talk about your daughter if she does certain things, no matter how innocent she may be? Do you care? If you do, you will bring her to see this wonderful play.

At the New Princess, one day only, Friday, Dec. 8. Matinee at 2:30. Evening performance, 7:30 and 9:00.

Seats on sale at Lambert's Drug Store. All seats, 25c

Could your daughter find eternal happiness and peace of soul, if she knew that she was doubted by others? "The Innocence of Ruth" embodies the experience of a beautiful young girl who is left alone in the world, and the same man who has ruined her father has determined to ruin her. How perilously near he comes to accomplishing it, is graphically brought out in the picture, which comes to a climax of unusual strength. It is essentially a story of Greater New York, possessing all the interesting side lights on the so-called "high life" in the Metropolis.

SCHOOL NOTES

The following selection is taken from a letter received by the superintendent last week and it presents in most suggestive form a program which any boy might profitably follow: "Do you know a bright young man who does not use tobacco or liquor, has good habits, learns quickly, has a high school training and would like a position paying about $75 a month?"

All the teachers, except one who was ill, attended the Northwestern Teachers' Association at Crookston last week. The meeting of 1917 will be held at Thief River Falls.

There will be no school Thursday or Friday of this week. School was held on general election day in order that the teachers might have Friday of this week as a holiday.

The high school course in English is prepared by the state and must be followed implicitly. Beginning this year, annual state examinations for each of the four year classes will be held.

A mystery, not yet revealed, exists in the deep well at the Knox. During the mild or settled weather, the water is relatively clear, but, upon the approach of, or during a disturbed condition of the atmosphere, the water assumes a much darker hue and aparently carries some foreign matter in suspension.

The prevailing mild weather is conducive to an excellent attendance. The only absences are the result of mumps and those created by that small group of boys whose parents fail to insist on regular attendance.

Basketball is now the center of athletic interest, some sixty girls have signified their intention of practicing the game.

GOOD BOOK WEEK AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

Uunusual Display of Appropriate Volumes Will be Continued For One Week.

"What Books Shall I Give as Presents This Year?" is the question that many are asking themselves, and the local Carnegie library will be in shape to help solve the problem.

December 4 to 9 is "Good Book Week," and during this time there will be on display at the library volumes suitable as gifts for persons of all ages. There will be an excellent assortment of the books that boys like best. The selections were made by the library commission of the Boy Scouts of America and only such works as the judgment of this commission approves are offered. The market is flooded with trashy and worthless so-called "boys books," most of which are disapproved of by the commission. Lists of the books considered desirable may be had by applying to Miss Backe, librarian.

For adults there are cheerful books, action books and splendid biographical works. There is also a large assortment of children's books costing all the way from 15 cents to $2.50, many attractive volumes being offered as low as 25 cents.

This feature promises to be a very interesting one. Representative men from various parts of the valley will speak on methods of financing purchases of live stock. Considerable work has been done in various communities along this line. It will be worth while for all to know how each community has worked out the problem, as securing more live stock for our valley farms is our greatest need.

At a meeting of the various local committees held at the Commercial club rooms in connection with the convention held yesterday afternoon, everything is in readiness. The banquet committee reported that tickets are being sold and that women are not barred from the banquet. It is hoped that quite a number of the farmers in this locality, as well as business men will attend.

Delegates arriving in the city will be escorted to the convention headquarters in the auditorium where hotel accomodations will be arranged for.

THRILLER PROMISED THEATRE PATRONS

"Little Girl Next Door," Coming to the Princess, is Something Altogether Different.

(Chicago Examiner.)

Commercialized vice in all its brazen iniquity will flaunt its impudence once again in the face of Chicagoans. This time, however, it will be done in the movies—eight big reels.

With the O'Hara vice commission report as a basis, Mayor Thompson, Corporation Counsel Ettelson, Chief of Police Healey and Health Commissioner Robertson posed for the camera, rehearsing a conference relative to the suppresion of vice. Vice President Marshall and Congressman Mann already have posed for the picture and President Wilson may also lend his presence. The state Senate also will pose.

The scenes will be laid in all parts of the country. Conditions that existed in the old Twenty-second street district will be re-enacted on lines told by girl witnesses to the vice commission. White slavery episodes revealed by girls on the stand will be portrayed and the picture promises to be as lurid as the most melodramatic film ever shorn by the movie censors.

SCENE FROM
"THE LITTLE GIRL NEXT DOOR"
WESTCOTT FILM CORP.

The State Senate investigating body suggested that its report would be read only by physicians and sociologists, and recommended that it be put in pictures to the public could get it. Work on the thriller will be completed as rapidly as possible.

This film will be shown at the Princess December 6 and 7.

ASK STATE FOR DRAINAGE HELP

WANT COSTS DETERMINED

Resolution Passed at Recent Reclamation Meeting—Sets Forth Sound and Substantial Reasons Why State Should Act

Active work in carrying out the proposed drainage project as outlined at the reclamation hearing held at the Commercial club rooms in this city last Thursday, is under way. Secretary Laird of the Commercial club has sent to each member of a committee named at that time to carry on the work, a copy of the following resolution, which was made by Senator D. P. O'Neill and unanimously carried:

"That the chair be authorized to appoint a committee of eight, one being from each of the seven counties most deeply interested, and one from the state of North Dakota, to carry on the drainage project as outlined and to bring the matter before such legislative body as to best secure definite and favorable action.

Each one of the members of the committee has been asked to circulate a petition and to return same to Secretary Laird with as many signatures as are obtainable and at the earliest available date. This petition is very broad and comprehensive and should be favorably received throughout this entire section of the state. The petition follows:

"Whereas, there has been constructed and proposed to be construced about five hundred miles of state and county ditches emptying into the Red Lakes; and

"Whereas, state ditches have aided in carrying off flood waters more quickly, thereby raising the Red Lakes about three feet above their normal level, and in that way hampering the outflow of the ditches emptying into the lake as well as flooding the lands for miles adjacent, and on both sides of the Red Lake river from the outlet westward for about thirty miles, to a point at or near Highlanding, in Pennington county, Minnesota; and

"Whereas, on account of the high state of the Red Lakes and of the Red Lake river above Highlanding, and of the latter the last two years having in several places overflowed its banks and in that way sent large amounts of water into the Clearwater basin, thus flooding the lands and homes of several hundred settlers around and adjacent to the Red Lakes as well in part of the Clearwater basin, and the Red Lake river valley east of Highlanding, rendering their farms unfit for cultivation as well as endangering the health of their families; and

"Whereas, the State has, and now does own, large tracts of land lying in Koochiching and Beltrami counties in the watershed of the Red Lakes that all needs drainage;

"Therefore we, the undersigned citizens and taxpayers of Koochiching, Beltrami, Pennington, Red Lake, Clearwater, Marshall and Polk counties do hereby petition your honorable board to proceed under Chapter 470 of the General Laws of 1907, or any other legal enactments which appear to apply to the situation, and provide for the carrying out of the necessary work in straightening, deepening and widening the Red Lake river from the outlet of the Red Lakes to a point at or about Highlanding, lowering the lakes to give the needed relief to protect the homes and health of the settlers in the affected district; and to make report to the incoming legislature as to the cost of such work.

PROSPECTIVE BOOKINGS FOR CITY---ALL ARE A1

Auditorium Manager Anderson Endeavoring to Arrange For Several Good Shows.

Several first class attractions in the show line will be seen at the Auditorium during the winter months, providing Manager Anderson is successful in booking some of the excellent companies which he has heard from. Numerous letters are also on file in his office from other companies but the manager has decided that he will book nothing but the best.

This week a communication was received from the Gus Hill company, New York, asking for open dates at the Auditorium during December and January. Among some of the attractions listed ready for booking were: "Follies of 1917." This is a musical comedy, a kind of amusement that has always been popular with local theatre goers, and takes in 50 people for the cast. "Mutt and Jeff's Weddin," "Father in Politics," "The Midnight Maidens," "My Aunt from Utah," and "Stop, Look, Listen," Irving Belin's greatest success. The laughing show of years is also for booking in "Hans und Fritz," by R. B. Kirks, originator of the Katzenjammer Kids.

The above attractions are all A1 and nothing on the "tank town" order is connected with them. Among the headliners is "Stop, Look, Listen." by Irving Berlin, the great song writer. This is a musical comedy and takes in all the late songs. An augmented orchestra is carried. This number played both New York and Boston for a one year's stand.

Manager Anderson has gotten busy and is now in communication with the managers, endeavoring to secure the best of the lot.

The manager is also in receipt of a letter from those in charge of "Civilization," Thomas Ince's $1,000,000 cinema moving picture spectacle. The picture is now showing in different towns in Minnesota and will be in this section of the state shortly. "Civilization" is declared to be the greatest picture on the screen today and deals with the horrors of war. The great guns of modern warfare are shown in action and also the U. S. fleet is seen. Submarines sinking, great armies in action, cities destroyed by gun fire and all the other ravages wrought by war are vividily brought forth, which makes this picture stand supreme.

Getting Road Ideas.

Dr. Manley, of Ontario, arrived in the city last Thursday evening and remained over until Friday morning. Dr. Manley passed through as a representative of the Ontario Motor Club, and came to this city by the way of Duluth and Bemidji. His purpose in making the trip was to cover a few of the northern states to get an idea as to the roads and conditions. Dr. Manley stated that the trip so far had been splendid and intended to return in the spring. He left Thief River Falls in the afternoon on his way to Ontario. Several articles will appear in some of the Canadian Motor magazines on the doctor's trip through the northern states, and Thief River Falls will come in for some notoriety according to Dr. Manley.

TELEPHONE TOLLS WILL BE REDUCED

New Rate Provides For Twenty-Five Per Cent Cut in Short Haul Messages.

Thousands of telephone patrons in Minnesota will obtain substantial benifit through the new rate schedules of the two big telephone companies in the state—The Northwestern Telephone Exchange and the Tri-State Telephone & Telegraph company—as these schedules make reductions in approximately 4,000 rates and affect all tolls for distances up to and including 12 miles. The new rates become effective December 1, 1916. These reductions are the direct result of an investigation by the Minnesota Warehouse Commission of the toll business of the Northwestern company in Minnesota, which led the commissioners to believe that the minimum charge of 20 cents is excessive for short haul messages. Upon the commission's insistance that the short haul rates be modified the Northwestern company reduced their rates to 15 cents for all distances up to and including 12 miles.

The former standard minimum rate was 20 cents for distances from 0 to 17 miles. Under the new schedule, a 15 cent rate is established for distances up to 12 miles, the old 20 cent rate remaining in effect on hauls between 12 and 17 miles. Of the Northwestern rates, 2,826 are effected by this reduction, and of the Tri-State, 1,077. Every exchange and every town in Minnesota directly connected with either county is affected and consequently all of their patrons are benefited.

CANDIDATES FILE REPORT OF COSTS

Aspirants For County Commissioner Jobs Invest Only To Extent of Filing Fees.

According to the reports of the different county candidates at the late election, the winners are not always those spending the largest amount of money. The figures would indicate that the position of county commissioner is not particularly coveted, none of the candidates having spent more than ten dollars necessary in order to get their name on the ballot. Ira C. Richardson, who fell just short of being elected judge of probate, incurred the greatest outlay, his statement showing that he spent $332.94. His successful opponent, Wilhelm Michelet, got by with an expense of $220.50.

In the race for the clerk of court's office the defeated candidate also spent more than his successful opponent, the statement of Harry E. Ives showing that it cost him $186.76, while Adolph Eklund, who will be clerk of court after Jan. 1, distributed $122.09.

The candidates for state, judicial and congressional offices file their statements with the state auditor.

NEW GENTILLY BANK PURCHASES FIXTURES

Local Manufacturing Company Now Busy Erecting Fine New Set.

A fine new set of banking fixtures are now being installed in the Farmers State bank at Gentilly by the Thief River Falls Manufacturing company. The bank will be open for business about the first of next month with Messrs. Kiewel and McGregor at the head.

The order for the manufacturing of the fixtures has been finished in a first class manner by the local company and the product turned out is among the finest to be found in the smaller banks in Northwestern Minnesota.

On Friday of last week another order was completed, when the truck of M. Anderson & Sons was loaded down with a set of fixtures for the Ada bank. The shipment was of marble.

At Roseau another crew is busy installing banking furniture and fixtures at the Citizens State institution. A job for the Mahnomen bank is now in the course of construction at the factory.

THE FARMERS

OF PENNINGTON AND ADJOINING COUNTIES

By M. A MATTISON

$100 From One Acre

On section 13, Norden township, lives Carsten Christensen, who came here with his family seventeen years ago from Iowa. Mr. Christensen has added to his original land holdings until now he owns a considerable tract in the neighborhood, the home place consisting of 280 acres. The farm is well improved, having a good set of buildings and is practically all under cultivation. Mr. Christensen is among those who believe that corn can be raised in Northwestern Minnesota and has been experimenting with it for several years. He is growing the Minnesota No. 23 and has had good success with it. Recently he won first prize at the High School show held in this city. He has selected several bushels of seed corn and expects to plant about twenty acres next season. It is his opinion that when this corn is once acclimated it will become one of the staple crops of this section. Mr. Christensen also states that there is good money to be made in stock and advises anyone coming here to start with cattle and not depend upon grain farming alone. To show what dairying is doing for him, Mr Christensen informed the writer that from nine cows he had realized $94 for cream in one month last season. That the soil here is productive may be assumed from the fact that thirty-two bushels of No. 1 wheat and eighty-five bushels of oats have been raised per acre on the Christensen farm and flax has netted as high as $37.75 per acre. But for large returns from one acre of ground, potatoes must be given credit. One acre of "spuds" netted an even $100—which isn't half bad. Mr. Christensen is firm in the belief that if there was some way to compel non-resident land owners and speculators to improve their farms and assist in local development it would mean hundreds of thousands of dollars to this section of the state.

Money in Poultry.

Three years ago J. D. Turnwall moved to his present home, section 18, North township. He is no stranger to these parts, however, having been a resident of the county for thirty-three years. Prior to that time he resided in Illinois. Mr. Turnwall has a well improved and well tilled farm and is making money. He has specialized to some extent in poultry and finds it a profitable undertaking. From a flock of 100 hens he has during the past ten months realized through the sale of eggs alone the nice little sum of $190. Next year Mr. Turnwall will have a still larger flock. He has proven beyond a doubt that poultry is a profitable side line for farmers of this section, and more of them should look into its possibilities.

Another New Residence.

On section 19 in the same township lives August Soderberg, who came here thirty-four years ago from Michigan and homesteaded the place upon which he now resides. Although progress in the early days was necessarily slow, Mr. Soderberg has been gradually forging to the front and today is the possessor of a good farm, well cutivated and well improved. He is at present constructing a fine new residence, all that was lacking to make the place complete. He has had faith in this country through all the years he has lived here and is now one of its most consistent boosters. The farm is well stocked with cattle, and considerable fodder corn and other feeds are raised.

Successful Young Farmer

On section 19, North township, lives Waldie Christensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carsten Christensen, mention of whom is made in a previous paragraph. This energetic young farmer has operated the place for six years and has done exceptionally well. Chief among Mr. Christensen's resources may be mentioned forty head of cattle. Corn and other feeds are raised in abundance so that the vagaries of the weather man have little effect upon the prosperity of the proprietor. A fine dwelling house is among the recent improvements on the Christensen place.

This Man is Satisfied.

Just over the second "ridge" to the west, on section 24, Norden township, resides one of the pioneers of his locality—Ben Anderson. Mr. Anderson came here thirty-five years ago from Joliet, Ill., and homesteaded the place upon which he now lives. He has a well improved farm and engages to a considerable extent in stock raising, which is giving good returns. Mr. Anderson has learned that mixed farming is the thing in this country. When asked how he liked this part of the state, Mr. Anderson replied: "Well, I have liked it well enough to stay here for thirty-five years. And I want to say that I like it well enough to remain here until I die. After that I will still be here for I will be buried in the little cemetery you see on the hill yonder."

"Batched It" For 35 Years

Away back in 1881 Ole Rogney homesteaded the place upon which he now resides, section 24, Norden township. Ever since then he has made it his home and has "batched it" during the whole time. His brother, Thomas Rogney, has been for some years associated with him in farming and also in the culinary department. The Rogney brothers came from Fargo, N. D. For many years Thomas and his brother conducted a store at a point in the northern part of Holt township, Marshall county, before the railroad went through that district, and freighted all merchandise from this city. The store was struck by lightning, burned to the ground and was never rebuilt. The Rogney farm is composed of 320 acres and about half the acreage is under cultivation. The remainder is either prairie or timber. It is the opinion of the Rogney brothers that had it not been for the fact that the early settlers here were generally without means, this section would have developed much more rapidly than it did. For the most part the settlers did not have a dollar to their names and had to go to the harvest fields of North Dakota and other places to earn enough money in the fall to keep them from starving to death during the winter months. This lack of means necessarily made the breaking of land and the erection of suitable farm buildings a very slow process. Near the Rogney place is a fine country school house, built of cement blocks. From twenty to thirty pupils attend this school for eight months each year.

"Greasers" Tried to Get This Man.

The experiences of Edward Simmons, who last August purchased and moved onto a 360 acre farm just north of the Rogney place, have, to say the least, been just a little out of the ordinary. This man was raised in Iowa, moved from there to Arkansas, from Arkansas to California, from California to New Mexico—and, at last found right here in Northwestern Minnesota just the home he had been looking for. Mr. Simmons and family lived just one mile from Columbus, New Mexico, at the time of the raid by the Mexican bandits, and he decided right there and then that it was no place for a white man to stay. After looking this locality over he purchased land and decided to become one of us. In the opinion of Mr. Simmons this is an ideal potato country as the soil is a sandy loam with no clay or gumbo. While this was as a general thing a very poor year for wheat, one field on the Simmons place yielded 30 bushels to the acre. A large number of improvements are planned for this farm in the near future.

Too Much Speculation on Land

Holding land for the purpose of deriving benefit from the rise in value and doing nothing to improve it is, in the opinion of August Johnson, who lives on section 14, Norden township, one of the principal drawbacks to the rapid development of this country. Mr. Johnson purchased and moved onto this farm nineteen years ago and has made consistent progress each year. A good set of farm buildings have been provided and the place is in a high state of cultivation. Before coming to this country Mr. Johnson resided at Crookston, where he was engaged in the blacksmithing trade. A herd of twenty good cattle are kept on the farm and have proven a very reliable source of income. Diversified farming is followed by Mr. Johnson and he is certain that this is the best method for this section of the state.

Irrigation Didn't Suit This Man

After trying out for a number of years the irrigated district in Wyoming, C. Slater, who lives on section 24, Norden township, finally decided that he would take a chance in a country where it rains occasionally, and so came to Pennington county last February. While he has farmed here only one year he is enthusiastic in his praise of this section. He says he has tried farming in various places but that this is the best he has struck yet. Mixed farming and stock raising is, according to Mr. Slater, the best way to succeed at the farming game, and as far as he has been able to learn, Northwestern Minnesota is exactly suited to this method of farming.

Knows Value of His Township

A man who has had a good chance to keep tab on the value of the township in which he resides is Gilbert Haavi, who lives on section 30, North township. Mr. Haavi has been assessor of North township for the past twenty-seven years and indications are that he may have the job for the rest of his life if he wishes it. Mr. Haavi came here thirty-five years ago from Manitowoc, Wis., and has lived on his present farm for twenty-four years. He has engaged in mixed farming and is firm in the belief that this is the only way to play the farming game and be safe. The farm is well provided with buildings and is an ideal home in every respect.

Believer in Mixed Farming

Sixteen years ago Ole Borgen came with his family from Clay county. Four years ago he purchased and moved onto a farm on section 15, Norden township. The place is well provided with buildings and is in a good state of cultivation. Mr. Borgen is a thorough believer in mixed farming and is getting a good start in the dairying business. He thinks that corn is an important crop and that it can be raised successfully in this locality if the farmers are careful in selecting seed that has been grown in a northern latitude.

Back From North Dakota.

Ole O. Steen, who owns a farm on section 14, Norden township, will farm the place himself next season, after a year or two spent in North Dakota. Mr. Steen has rented his farm for several seasons, but is now engaged in making needed repairs to the buildings and will establish a "bachelor's hall," having been too busy all these years to provide himself with a better half. Mr. Steen is not new to this country, having come here twenty-five years ago. He has faith in the future of this section and considers his farm such a good investment that he has never for a moment considered selling it. His place is one of the best in the neighborhood and has been producing bumper crops each year.

Pioneers Lacked Funds.

According to G. J. Nordhaugen, who owns and operates a good farm on section 16, Norden township, one of the chief reasons for the slow development of this country in the early days was the lack of means which the pioneers had to contend with. Two empty hands and a large supply of ambition constituted the sole resurces of most of them and for this reason it took them a long time to get buildings erected, land broken up and other necessary improvements made. But they stuck to it and have made it win. Mr. Nordhaugen came to this section thirty-three years ago and has experienced all of the hardships of pioneer days, but is now in a position to enjoy the fruits of his labor. He has a well cultivated farm and good farm buildings, and is well supplied with horses and cattle. In Mr. Nordhaugen's opinion, drainage is adding thousands of dollars to the value of the farms in Pennington county every year.

Clover, Cows, Cream and Cash.

This is the theory upon which John F. Carlson, section 15, Norden township, is working. Mr. Carlson came to this country thirty years ago from Michigan and has been making rapid progress from year to year. He has a fine 200 acre farm equipped with a good set of buildings and the land is in a high state of cultivation. A nice herd of cows, a portion of his farm devoted to raising clover and other feed, together with a cream separator, are the most dependable sources of income on the Carlson farm, and the proprietor is firm in the belief that this is the best way to make money in this section of the state. In the opinion of Mr. Carlson this country has just begun to come into its own and he considers that from this time on farming will cease to be an experiment and will become instead the one absolutely reliable and dependable vocation.

Another Advocate of Mixed Farming.

Just across the road to the west of the Carlson place is the farm of Ole Lappegaard. Although he cannot be considered one of the pioneers of his neighborhood, having resided on the place only twelve years, Mr. Lappegaard has been in the county for thirty-five years and has had sufficient time to satisfy himself as to its merits. The Lappegaard farm is rapidly being improved and is taking its place among the best in the community. Through experience gained in his farming operations, Mr. Lappegaard has reached the conclusion that mixed farming is the best for this section, and he is adding to his herd of cattle as rapidily as it is possible for him to do so. Fodder corn, timothy and clover grow abundantly here and there is no trouble in producing sufficient feed for a large herd of live stock. Mr. Lappegaard is a native of Norway and came to this vicinity directly from the old country.

Will Build New Barn.

John Blom, who owns and operates a good farm on section 10, Norden township, is planning a new barn which he will erect next summer. When completed it will be one of the very best in the neighborhood and will augment the improvements on the farm in a very substantial manner. Mr. Blom came direct from Sweden twenty-five years ago and has resided on the same place continuously since that time. While his progress in the early days was naturally handicapped by the usual hardships of pioneer days, he has forged steadily ahead, and is now in very comfortable circumstances. He has unbounded faith in the future of this country and considers a farm in Pennington county a very valuable piece of property. A nice herd of cattle may be given a good measure of credit for the present healthy condition of Mr. Blom's bank account.

Natural Stock Raising Country.

That Marshall county is a natural stock raising country and that eventually this will become the chief branch of farming, is the opinion of A. Opseth, who has resided on a farm just south of Rosewood for thirty-three years. Mr. Opseth is ably assisted in his farm work by his son, Ole, who has for some years been in active charge of the place. The elder Mr. Opseth considers that he is entitled to a little ease in the declining years of his life. To show that he is practicing what he preaches in regard to mixed farming, Mr. Opseth is milking quite a number of cows, has a cream separator, and is raising an abundant supply of clover and other feeds each year. The farm is well equipped with buildings and is very conveniently located as to a market. Drainage has done much to enhance the value of farms in this country, according to Mr. Opseth, and has made possible the much more rapid development of the country and its resources. Before coming to this section Mr. Opseth resided at Fargo, N. D.

Stock is Best For Country.

Carl Mellem has a fine 240-acre farm on section 3, New Solum township. Mr. Mellem came to this locality from Fargo, N. D., thirty-two years ago and has been here long enough to see this country grow from practically nothing to its present prosperous condition. He is a firm believer in mixed farming and says that stock raising is the best thing that can be done for this country. With the splendid markets for dairy products and the ease with which an abundance of feed stuffs can be raised there is little difficulty in realizing a handsome profit from a herd of cows, according to the way Mr. Mellem has it figured out.

Gloria's Romance

by MR. and MRS. RUPERT HUGHES

Novelized From the Motion Picture Play of the Same Name by George Kleine

Copyright, 1916, by Adelaide M. Hughes

SYNOPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, with his daughter Gloria, winters at Palm Beach. Gloria is a vivacious but willful young lady. Her childish capers cause young Doctor Royce to fall in love with her. Lost in the everglades she is captured by the Seminole Indians. Gloria falls in love with her rescuer, Freneau. Five years later she leaves school and meets Freneau at the theater; he has forgotten Gloria. Later Freneau persuades her to forgive him. Gloria's sister-in-law, Lois, becomes intensely jealous. Freneau goes sleighing with Gloria. It results in pneumonia for Gloria. Doctor Royce is summoned. Freneau's finances being low, he approaches Pierpont Stafford. Lois threatens him with dire punishment. Her husband, Gloria's brother David, becomes suspicious. Freneau plans to have Mulry send Gloria a bunch of telegrams. Gloria sees from her window an attack made upon Freneau. Doctor Royce convinces her it is delirium. Later, a telegram, followed by a letter, comes from Freneau. She replies, but her telegrams are returned. She sees the supposed suicide of Freneau reported in the paper. Gloria swears to find the murderer of her lover. Royce tells what he knows of Freneau to Mr. Stafford. Together they seek to prevent scandal from enveloping Gloria. She accuses them in her mind of conspiracy against her. Gloria goes to David's country home. She meets Mulry, who flees at once. Gloria insists on going to Palm Beach. Again she sees Mulry there. He leaves for the North. She is recognized by her one-time captor, the young Indian chief. He tells her that Royce and not Freneau was her rescuer. Gloria attends night court; she sees Mulry there, also the tramp who attacked Freneau. But Judge Freeman releases him. She follows the tramp when he leaves the court, and falls into the hands of holdup men. She finds herself in a low saloon dance hall, and is selected by one of the patrons as his partner. Doctor Royce, however, follows her and when he attempts a rescue calls down a riot on their heads. The hall is raided and the crowd, including Gloria and Royce, is arrested and taken before Judge Freeman.

FOURTEENTH EPISODE

The Floating Trap

"Thank heaven, nobody knows of your escapade," Pierpont Stafford was just saying to his daughter Gloria. She had declined to be frightened by his scowl and had almost won him to a smile across his breakfast coffee cup when his eyes fell on the headlines of the morning paper. He nearly went over backward. The butler, who was stealing a glimpse of the headlines over his master's shoulder, nearly went over forward.

Pierpont threw the paper down in a rage. Gloria picked it up, and what she read eased her mischievous smile with one whisk. This is what she read:

POLICE NET GLORIA STAFFORD.

Dr. Stephen Royce Battered in Brawl.

Gloria was stupefied. She sat in a daze while her father went through the other papers. Equally hateful headlines or worse were in all of them. He pushed them before her. She pushed them to the floor. Then brother David came in, his hat and overcoat still on. He carried a bundle of papers, too. He was furious. Gloria meekly waived him and his papers away.

The miserable silence was invaded by the second man who appeared and reported:

"If you please, sir, there's an army of reporters at the door."

Gloria threw up her hands in surrender. David sprang to his feet. Pierpont pushed him back and stalked out in a towering fury. He ordered the newspaper raiders off. They bombarded him with questions. He had to take refuge in the house. He returned to the dining room livid with wrath. He ordered the servants out. He thundered at Gloria.

"Now you see what would have happened if you had told the police about your delirium!"

He stormed on, Gloria trying vainly to break in. At last he was exhausted and she spoke:

"But, daddy, it was no delirium. I saw poor Dick murdered. Last night proved it, for I saw the man who killed him. Why did the judge let him go. Why don't you want him captured?"

Pierpont stared at her, then took her to the window and pointed to the crowd of reporters. He shook the newspapers under her eyes, saying: "My one and only reason for silence is this publicity! It is horrible!"

To one of Gloria's training and position the reporters were almost more perilous than the police.

Suddenly she stared and pointed out of the window at two forlorn, ragged figures strolling up the drive as if they had wandered from the slums and were lost. They were the waiter, Casimir, and his little boy, Stas, whom Gloria had befriended at the night court. She had forgotten them and now they arrived at the most inopportune moment. Casimir had Gloria's card in his hand. He saw the reporters and grew uneasy. He pushed through and rang the doorbell. Gloria insisted on their admission and greeted them warmly.

Pierpont stared at the shabby waiter in disgust. He looked at his watch. He started to go. Gloria nabbed him. She told him that she had promised the waiter a job. Pierpont said he had no jobs for waiters. Then he ordered Gloria to lunch with him at the Bankers' club.

"The very idea," she exclaimed. "Get Casimir a job there."

"In those clothes?" Pierpont exclaimed.

"Buy him a new outfit," was Gloria's solution.

Pierpont was enraged, but she had her way as usual, and he motioned the waiter to come with him. Casimir kissed Gloria's hand. The boy tried to follow him and clung to him in terror. Gloria knelt down and called the boy. Stas ran to her and let Casimir go with Pierpont.

The boy Stas looked about the room as if he were in heaven and Gloria the winged angel that flew there with him. He threw his arms around her again lest he fall back to earth. The butler in horror took the boy's dirty hand from Gloria's shoulder and tried to cleanse it on a napkin. It blackened the napkin, but the hand was not visibly bleached.

Gloria laughed, put the boy in a chair at the table, and called for finger bowls. The butler brought two. Gloria called for soap and a towel. This was appalling. The butler almost mutinied. Then she washed the child's hands with soap in the finger bowls. They turned out to be surprisingly white.

She drew a wet towel down his cheek and it left a white canal. She laughed again, but more soberly. She pondered a minute, then made up her mind and motioned to the butler; "Griggs, what he needs is a bath. You may give him one."

Old Griggs muttered and shook his head. Gloria gave him one of the looks she ruled her father with, "Run along now, while I telephone for a complete trousseau for him."

Griggs groaned. Stas did not want to leave Gloria, but she kissed him, carefully selecting the clean streak on his face, and assured him that Griggs was a nice man. She watched while Griggs led the boy by one clean finger to the servants' wing and one of its bathtubs. Then she ran into her own room. She called up her father's tailor, only to learn that it would take three weeks to make the boy's clothes. He could not possibly wait! She banged the receiver on the hook and ran through the telephone book till she found the number of a large men's furnishing establishment. A dainty gentleman answered the telephone.

"Send me several of everything a boy has to have," Gloria demanded. When the clerk ventured to ask what his measurements were Gloria answered, "Measurements? How do I know? Do you have to have them?"

When he said that he did, Gloria called for her maid, a pencil, a tape measure, a piece of paper, and ran to the servants' quarters. She was about to enter one of the doors when she caught a glimpse that made her retreat.

Old Griggs, with coat off, sleeves rolled up, and a towel for apron, was just lowering the boy into the steaming water. He dropped the boy with a splash and, whirling, flung himself against the door. He spoke through it in a shocked manner, motioning the boy to hide in the suds. Gloria explained, Griggs opened the door a little and clutched the tape measure. He took the boy's dimensions and called them out to Gloria, who repeated them to her secretary-maid. Griggs had to thrust his arms into the water two or three times to reach the boy's knees and heels. He was most gloriously unhappy.

Gloria ran back to the telephone and resumed negotiations with the clerk. When he had transcribed the numbers, he promised to deliver the goods in a jiffy. A jiffy is a long time to a boy just out of a tub, and when Griggs explained to Gloria that Stas' entire wardrobe consisted of one Turkish towel and two safety pins, she had more thinking to do. She solved the problem by sending her maid to fetch a pair of her silk pajamas.

By and by there was a knock at the door, and Griggs carried in Master Stas. The pajamas were worlds too big for him, but he was almost unrecognizably improved—white and pink with curls of gold and the eyes of a cherub. The laundries do not always send things back better than they went, but Stas had gone out a grimy pauper and he came back a prince. Gloria embraced him, called to the maid for a pair of her satin mules for his bare feet, and took him in her lap and combed his curls. He was her new doll, and she wept a little into those curls to think that she would never have a child of her own.

She remembered her own childhood and the nursery where she and her brother had been indulged in every toy that money could buy or ingenuity invent.

She hastened up to the great room which she had not visited for years. Poor Stas had never had any nursery besides the streets or any toy except some pitiful makeshift. He did not really know how to play. Gloria had to teach him. He was an apt pupil with the horn and drum. He pounded and blew till Gloria covered her ears. He tried to climb the hobby horse with the drum still on. He got off head first on the other side, but he soon mastered the fierce steed.

His attention was attracted by a picture of Indians on the walls. They were doing a scalp-tango about a white captive. Stas wanted to know all about it. He had thought Gloria an angel before, but she grew still more wonderful when she told him that she herself had been an Indian captive. He seemed to be a trifle disappointed when he learned that she had never been honored by being tied to a stake. She saved herself a little by explaining: "I might have been worse than tied to a stake if I hadn't been rescued by Mr. Fre—I mean, Doctor Royce."

Then she fell into such a deep meditation that Stas could hardly recall her to finish the story. It was not yet ended when the butler and the second man marched in with two towers of pasteboard boxes—Stas' trousseau had arrived.

Now there was excitement, indeed, and Gloria and Stas forgot the mere Indians in the thrill of dressing and being dressed. Gloria began to fear that she had adopted a hopeless fop when she saw how Stas strutted in his finery. In his knickers and frilled shirt, his starched collar, silk tie, patent leather shoes, and derby hat, he looked like a pocket Beau Brummel. And then her rapture turned to alarm. The boy began to cough, to turn red and purple in the face, and to shake with paroxysms.

"O, dear! O, dear!" Gloria moaned; "he's had a bath, and it's given him pneumonia. The doctor! Quick, I must get him to the doctor!"

Dr. Stephen Royce was trying to practice the proverb, "Physician, heal thyself." He was dressing the wounds of battle he had received the night before in Gloria's defense. He was plastering his fist and approving it for its good work when a caller was announced. It was Lois Stafford. She had repented of her affair with the dead Freneau and was trying to live it down. Idleness was both temptation and distress. She wanted to know if there was not some work she could do. Royce told her that there were always poor people in plenty and lonely sick. He gave her the address of some of his patients who would never pay, but whom he treated with none the less care.

As she was leaving she met Gloria coming in with the boy. Royce was disgusted because Gloria looked angry. He should have been delighted at the hint of possible jealousy. Gloria coldly informed him of the boy's bath and its terrible consequences. She made the boy cough for the doctor. Royce did not seem to be as much impressed as Gloria had been. He set the boy to laughing and got him to put out his tongue by making faces at him which the boy mocked. Then he said:

"I guess so," Stas confessed. "I am tickled all over."

He gave the boy a lozenge for medicine and turned to Gloria. She asked him again why he had tried to deceive her about the delirium.

"Why don't you tell me the truth now? What is Lois to you?"

Royce protested that Lois was nothing to him and that a doctor has his secrets—like a priest. Gloria was furious. She gathered up the child and was about to storm out, but she paused, meditated, whirled, and went to him impulsively.

"Forgive me. You saved my life twice. You fought for me then, why against me now?"

He answered sadly, "I am not fighting against you, Gloria. Some day you will know it, but not from me."

Gloria went out sadly and Royce indulged in a little delirium of his own, cursing his luck in managing always to have his devotion misunderstood. He was glad that Lois repented her liaison with Freneau, but he wished that she had chosen some other person for father confessor or some other time to call.

In the majestic blue dining room of the Bankers' club, Gloria found Casimir already installed. Pierpont's influence had secured the engagement for him and money had provided the neat costume that changed Casimir almost as much as Stas had been changed. The captain waiter placed a cushion on a chair for Stas and motioned Casimir to lift him into it. Casimir had not yet recognized his own boy, disguised as he was with a bath and rich men's clothes. But Stas recognized his father and hugged him with vigor to the amazement of Aunt Hortensia, who had been invited to the luncheon so that she and Pierpont might agree on some new interest for Gloria. They agreed to postpone the task till after luncheon. By that time Gloria had flown.

As the luncheon neared its last course Casimir was beckoned out by an anxious-looking waiter. When he returned he was evidently suffering a great emotional strain. He made blunders and was so excited that when Pierpont rebuked him Gloria took pity on him and asked him what the trouble was. The captain was aghast. For a waiter to have personal troubles during a meal was as bad as for a soldier to stop a battle to write a letter home. But Gloria was "she who must be obeyed."

Casimir told her that he had just received word that his wife had been sent back from the hospital. He broke down and clung to the weeping Stas.

Gloria could not understand. She said, "But I should think you would be glad to have your wife sent back."

"No, no," Casimir sobbed. "Poor people who are going to die are sent away from the hospital so they will not die there."

Gloria was furious. She proposed to investigate the hospitals and turn out the fiends in charge. Meanwhile she insisted on going to Casimir's home and taking Casimir with her. She paused only to telephone Doctor Royce to meet her there. He was difficult to understand as a man, but as a doctor he was ideal. So Gloria dashed away with Casimir and Stas, while Hortensia and Pierpont held up their hands in despair of her.

When Gloria's chauffeur and footman heard the address she gave them they thought they had misunderstood. She repeated it in most positive tones. They raised their eyebrows in a way that insinuated, "What next?"

Coincidences do happen now and then in real life—not quite so often or so gracefully as in fiction, and yet once in a while. In fact, coincidences make life what it is. And so it chanced that the murderer of Dick Freneau whom Gloria had followed from the night court had found a hiding place in the same block where Casimir lived.

Gloria recognized the region as soon as her limousine turned into it. She recognized the saloon and dance hall where she had found and lost her man. But she did not recognize the murderer's daughter in the crowd that gathered about the unusual limousine when it drew up along the garbage cans.

Nell Trask was looking for her father, and she paused to see the fine lady descending from the palace car. In Nell's arms was the child of Richard Freneau, a beautiful creature like its father. Gloria, hurrying through the crowd, could not help pausing to admire the baby and to tweak the little finger it held up. There for a moment the two women paused with Dick Freneau's child between them; and neither dreamed that the other had ever heard of him. Gloria passed on into the tenement and Nell went to seek her father.

When Gloria was led up and up a gloomy staircase to the one dismal, barren room which Casimir and his wife and their child had had to call home, she felt that she had no right to complain of any woes that had befallen her.

The sick mother was outstretched on an old bed by a dark window. A neighbor's wife, who introduced herself as "Mrs. Slattery, thank you kindly," was sitting by her. Casimir ran to his wife, and gasping with terror at her appearance, dropped on his knees. She embraced him with long white arms so gaunt that they frightened Gloria. Stas ran to the other side of the bed and clambered up. His mother turned, stared at him, and only realized after a long look that he was hers. Then she gathered him to her poor bosom with a sob of pitiful rapture.

Mrs. Slattery rubbed off a chair with her apron and invited Gloria to rest herself, but Gloria went to Casimir's wife. The wretched woman clutched her hands and held them to her cheek, while Stas and Casimir both explained to her who Gloria was. They told her what miracles Gloria had performed and they plainly hoped for another, but Gloria was filled with a dread that money would be useless here. She promised glibly, but her heart felt helpless.

Doctor Royce came at last and she had some hope that he might redeem the life of the victim of life. He made his examination and spoke cheerfully enough, but Gloria was sure from his tone that he was lying, too. She led him out into the hall to question him. He shook his head gloomily. Gloria protested.

"But surely there must be some way to help her!"

"Not in this cavern," Doctor Royce insisted. "Of course if she were in the country somewhere—in the air under the sky—but what chance has she of that?"

That was so easy that Gloria laughed aloud. "Oh, if that is all, I'll furnish the air and the sky. I'll take them all up to our country place at once. You get them ready. I'll go tell my father that we are expecting guests."

"But what will he say to—"

"What does it matter what he says?" said Gloria as she ran back into the dingy hall to scatter good news like flowers. She ordered Royce to attend to the details of transportation and hurried away to inform her father that she had invited three strangers to his country estate. Gloria's feet skipped down the stairway and she was humming as she stepped into the limousine and told the footman, "The office!"

The car started and was checked almost at once by a tangle of trucks. Gloria, looking about impatiently, caught sight of Nell Trask and her father just leaving the opposite tenement. She recognized the old man. She was dumfounded. As she gazed, they were lost in the crowd. She saw that the car could not be turned around. Every moment was precious. Impulse told her not to lose this precious chance. She obeyed impulse.

Without pausing to inform the chauffeur, Gloria opened the door, dropped out, and ran after the Trasks. She picked them up again after a while. She saw a policeman. She resolved to order him to arrest the criminal. As she hesitated, she saw Trask stop and tenderly relieve the weary Nell of her baby's weight. He fondled and nuzzled the child and laughed with a grandfatherly foolishness. Gloria turned away from the policeman.

She followed at a little distance, wondering what to do. The best thing would be, she felt, to find out where he lived. She followed for blocks. The Trasks climbed the stairs of the elevated. Gloria went up after them. She took the next car on the same train. It seemed that they would ride on forever. Far uptown they got out. Gloria got out. She trailed them at a greater distance now because the streets were sparsely populated. The street sloped sharply down to the river. Moored to the wharves where a number of huge, cumbrous barges. To one of these the Trasks clambered. They went down into it through a cabin door.

Gloria was in a plight. She had traced her fugitive to his home. But his home was about to move. A tough-looking tugboat with a tough-looking crew was already fastening a towline to the barge. There was no policeman in sight anywhere. The men loitering about the barges did not appeal to Gloria as desirable Samaritans to ask for help.

Another of Gloria's impulses stirred her feet almost against her will. She ran along the wharf, crossed a plank to the Trask barge, and went to the cabin hatchway. She heard voices of anger coming up. The girl was upbraiding her father for deserting her and accusing him of a further crime. She was crying hysterically.

"You killed him. He is dead and you killed him."

The old man denied the charge with frenzy. He laughed at it, swore that he was innocent. The girl was already persuaded and this so enraged Gloria that she darted down the steps and cried out at Trask:

"You did kill him. I saw you."

Which Do You Prefer?

Pullman or Freight?

No one would think of riding in a freight car if he could enjoy the comfort of a big, comfortable easy riding Pullman parlor car.

So with automobiles. Most of the popular priced cars ride like freight cars. This is due to the old fashioned type of spring.

Many manufacturers still continue to use them.

The Overland does not. The 75 B Overland has the latest type of cantilever shock absorbing springs. As a result it is one of the easiest riding cars in the world. One demonstration will prove this.

ROSEWOOD

Ninth Meeting of Rosewood Farmers Club.

The ninth meeting of the Rosewood Farmers' club held at the Rosebank school house last Friday evening was well attended, over eighty being present. The meeting was called to order by Vice President Vorseth, he taking the president's place who was absent.

The roll was first called and the minutes read, after which member O. J. Dahl introduced the subject, "Which Kind of Stock is Best Suitable for this particular community?" The Short Horns and Holsteins received the most favorable comment. Next the question arose, "What kind will Stand this Cold Climate the Best?" Several of the members still favored the Short Horns, while others seemed to favor the Aberdeen Angus. Which is more profitable, "Dairying or Beef Raising?" was discussed and different opinions expressed.

Song—"Flow Gently Sweet Afton."

RED RIVER LIVE STOCK MEN MEET

Dairymen From Every Section of the State Gather For Thirteenth Annual Convention.

BANQUET WAS BIG SUCCESS

Men Who Have Made a Success of Dairying in This Section Tell Something of the System Followed.

The thirteenth annual convention of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association which began its sessions here yesterday morning and is continuing through today, is being attended by live stock men from every section of the state. Particularly are the different communities of the Red River valley represented, there being but few of these that have not one or more delegates present. Every train yesterday added to the number taking part in the meetings and indications are for a record attendance before adjournment this evening.

The Banquet.

The banquet given to the visiting dairymen by the various breeders associations of the county at the Brumund hotel on Tuesday evening was a great success. The crowd was so large that not near all those wishing admission could be accommodated. Short addresses were made by the following: Peter Engelstad, one of the best-known dairy farmers of Pennington county; Henry Pope, farmer; Henry Hanson, secretary of the Thief River Creamery association and presiednt of the Pennington County Live Stock Breeders association; Albert Johnson, Guernsey breeder; Hans Anton, Holstein breeder; Mrs. Henry Werner, Shorthorn fancier; George G. Johnson, president of Commercial club and banker; Supt. C. G. Sevig of the Crookston School of Agriculture; Al Kaiser, Bagley, banker; E. A. Greenwood, dairy commissioner of North Dakota; Prof. O. A. Storvick, of the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture; Senator Potter of Springfield, president of the Minnesota State Live Stock Breeders association; T. A. Hoverstad, agricultural expert of the Soo railway, and others.

Knows Whereof He Speaks.

Mr. Engelstad was the first speaker, and as he is regarded as one of the foremost authorities on dairying in this section, his words were listened to with much interest. Mr. Engelstad stated that he had been a resident of Pennington county for the past 33 years but that only during the past twelve had he been able to make any positive success of dairying. Today he has four silos on his farm and modern barns containing 55 head of pure bred Guernseys. He has been able to increase his average yield per cow per acre from 100 to 300 pounds. Some of his land, which a few years ago was worthless, is now producing twelve tons of corn fodder, six tons of alfalfa and 100 bushels of oats to the acre. This increase he attributes almost entirely to the fertilization made possible through his cattle.

This Lady an Enthusiast.

Mrs. Henry Werner, wife of the agricultural instructor in the Thief River Falls schools, proved herself to be one of the best posted speakers of the evening. The lady is a Shorthorn fancier and gave some excellent reasons for her preference. Her remarks were listened to with much interest as she had evidently made a thorough study of her subject.

All Are Agreed.

There was no division of opinion among the speakers as to the advisability of a farmer getting into the cattle business as quickly as possible. All were agreed that never in the history of this country had this industry held out such unmistakable promises as at present. The opinion was also unanimous that Northwestern Minnesota offered the best field for persons who wished to make an intelligent effort to get ahead in this line.

The Champion Buttermakers.

There was a large amount of butter sent to the city for entry in the buttermaker's contest. The scoring was very close, but half a point separating the second highest from the first-prize winner, while a like fraction divided the second and third. C. L. Holte of the Fertile creamery won first prize, this being a gold watch. The second prize, a leather traveling case, was won by A. Rasmussen of the Ottertail creamery. Seymour Morterud of Pelican Rapids was the winner of the five dollar gold piece offered as the third prize. The scores were 95, 94½ and 94 points respectively.

The Stock Show Winners.

The team composed of the farmer-dairymen won against the buttermakers in the stock judging contest by a score of 398 to 342. The winning team was made up as follows: Ben Rosendahl, F. C. Johnson, Hans Anton, Stuart McLeod and Harry Woolson. The buttermakers were represented by the following: Messrs. Linberg, Davidson, Danielson, Ramstad and Sorenson.

In the buttermakers scoring contest the following were the high men: O. O. Hegeness, first; Walter Peterson, second; A. Rasmussen, third.

The butter contest resulted as follows: First—M. Sorenson, Pelican Rapids; second—Carl Johnson, Bagley; third—A. Rasmussen, Otter Tail; fourth—A. T. Davidson, Shelley; fifth—Ben Krogstad, Olga.

The buttermakers scoring contest resulted as follows: First—H. O. Holte, Shelley; second—Johnson & Knutson, Pelican Rapids; third—C. Thingesdahl, Hendrum; fourth — August Hagen, Gully; fifth—John H. Olson, Pelican Rapids; sixth—J. J. Fosse, Fertile; seventh—Reuben Redland, Shelley; eighth—Fred Copp, Thief River Falls.

The prizes for the largest number of silos built were awarded to the following creameries: First—Otter Tail; second—Pelican Rapids; third—Ringdahl.

The prizes for the largest acreage of clover went to Pelican Rapids and Underwood.

Everyone Was Pleased.

The smoker given for the visiting delegates last evening at the Commercial club rooms was one of the delightful features of the meeting. Cigars were provided all around and a lunch was served. Everybody talked about everything—principally about cows and the revolution the live stock industry is working in northwestern Minnesota. It was a very pleasant wind-up to a busy day and one that was much appreciated by the visitors. These all expressed themselves as well satisfied with the meeting, pleased with their reception, and very glad that they came. Secretary Laird of the club was referred to by many as the man who, next to Secretary Houske of the association, was entitled to the greatest credit for the success of the gathering. A number of short addresses were made, all having as their burden the same theme: "Thief River Falls is a good town; we are glad we came—and we must have more cows in this section."

The first snow storm of the season began getting in its work early in the day, and as many of the delegates had arrived by automobile, they were afraid of being snowed in if they did not get started back at once. Others came by train to take the place of those departing, however, and the gneral average of attendance was kept up pretty well throughout.

Picture Show For Charity.

On Monday, Dec. 18, "God's Country and the Woman" will be shown at the Lyceum theatre under the auspices of the Cheerful Charity Circle. This is one of the very best plays to be seen here this season and would prove a big drawing card on its own merits. When to this is added the fact that a part of the proceeds will be devoted to charity, the play should be greeted by the largest crowd ever seen in a motion picture house in this city.

MUCH DEPENDS ON THE SALE OF SEALS

Local Committee Anxious That City Shall Do Its Share in Fight on Tuebrculosis.

The Public Health association, assisted by the Woman's club, has been active the past week plannings its Red Cross Christmas Seal campaign.

Most people do not know that over $3,000,000 has been raised from the seals since 1907 and few persons realize what this money has accomplished in securing hospitals, dispensaries, visiting nurses and open air schools, and the care of many thousands of needy persons sick with tuberculosis.

The Red Cross Seal campaign is also an educational movement. Practical instruction on the prevention of tuberculosis and its care has been brought literally to millions of people in our country.

The educational work has been effected not only through the money raised from the Christmas Seals but directly from the Seal campaign itself. It has been advocated by educators as invaluable even though the receipts from sales should no more than pay costs. Consequently every volunteer who works to sell Red Cross Seals and every person who buys them has the satisfaction of doing good in a vital way. Ninety per cent of the proceeds from the sale of seals stays in the state where they are sold, for anti-tuberculosis work in that state.

Next Saturday evening at the Auditorium Dr. Gordon Berry will give a free stereoptican lecture on the prevention of blindness in infants.

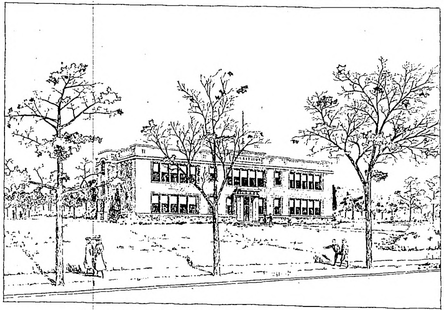
Friday will be Children's Health Crusade day, devoted to interesting children in schools in matters of public health in the sale of Red Cross Seals.

Sunday, December 10, is set aside as Tuebrculosis Sunday and all the churches and religious bodies have been asked to put special emphasis on public health work. This is an interdenominational and not sectarian movement and has received the endorsement of leading church dignitaries of almost every creed and denomination.

Miss Effie Hamry is acting manager of the local campaign.

Saturday, December 16, has been chosen as Tag Day, with Mrs. Pratt in charge. Mrs. M. C. Cutter heads the committee on motion pictures; Mrs. Charles Pitkin has charge of the school sale and the publicity; Mr. Laird will look after the sale in the Commercial club.

One member of each church in the city has been appointed to sell Seals at church fairs, suppers and social gatherings.



PROPOSED NEW SCHOOL BUILDING AT THIEF RIVER FALLS

TO GIVE STATES DRAINAGE RIGHT

Congressmen Steenerson and Volstead Introduce Relief Measures as Soon as Session Opens.

A SURVEY IS AUTHORIZED

If Plan Is Approved by Secretary of War He Is Instructed to Report on Feasibility and Estimated Cost.

That the congressmen from the districts affected by the overflowing of the Red Lake river and the Red River of the North are awake to the importance of doing something to bring the surplus waters under control is evidenced by the fact that one of the first measures introduced in the house after the opening on Monday was a bill by Congressmen Halvor A. Steenerson and A. J. Volstead dealing with the subjeect.

Want Consent of Congress.

The bill gives "the consent of congress to the states of Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota to enter into an agreemnt with each other to aid in navigation and prevent and control floods on the boundary waters of said states and the waters connected with and tributary thereto."

The secretary of war is authorized to make a survey and furnish a report dealing with the feasibility and cost of any proposition submitted by the states, if the plan submitted is approved. This official shall also estimate the proportion of the expense to be borne by the different states and local interests, or by the national government.

Ten thousand dollars is appropriated by the provisions of the bills to enable the secretary of war to make the necessary survey and estimate.

STORES DISPLAYING CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Show Windows Are Filled With Enticing Display of Goods Pertaining to Season.

The store windows of Thief River Falls bear eloquent testimony to the fact that the holiday season is at hand. Shops of all descriptions are displaying their offerings by every device known to the window trimmer's art. The stores dealing in women's goods are particularly to be noticed. The very latest and most beautiful things for wear or adornment are to be found in profusion and, in spite of the high prices prevailing on goods of nearly every other class, seem to be priced at a very reasonable figure. There is not another city in northern Minnesota containing stores that can in any manner compare with those in Thief River Falls—and this applies to the things to be had over their counters as well as to their appearance from the outside.

The clothing emporiums are also in holiday attire. While the forthcoming season may not mean so much to the mere man as it does to the woman, yet he sub-consciously or otherwise seems to consider it a time for sprucing up. The grocery stores, too, although the stocks of these are more staple, find it advisable to lay in an extra supply of goodies for Christmas. It is a glad time of year and the idea that it is a time for feasting is rooted deep in most of us. Hence the interest in what the grocer and butcher have to offer.

And remember that, no matter what you want, some merchant in Thief River Falls can supply you. Do not make the mistake of sending away for what you need, only to find when it arrives that it is not what you ordered and that you have no chance to exchange it. Read the ads in The Times. The merchants using these columns tell the truth about the goods they offer and their prices will be found as low as those of any reliable concern any. place in America.

Short Term Course.

The school board at the meeting on Monday night decided to conduct a short course in the practical branches during the months of January, February and March. This course of instruction is particularly suited to those whwo were compelled to leave school before completing theri studies and will consist of instruction in the industrial and common branches. A special teacher will be employed during this period and the regular instructors will lend their aid. This course proved a very successful feature of last year's school work and it is thought that it will be of even greater value at this time.

RAILWAY WILL NOT FACE INJUNCTION

Will be Allowed to Construct Water Tank Where Started, Though Out of Place.

The city of Thief River Falls on Saturday served an injunction on the Great Northern Railway company officers in this city, demanding that the company cease work on the new water tank on Knight avenue south as this was not being erected in compliance with the ordinance. A recently enacted regulation compels railroads to remove their water tanks to a distance of at least 125 feet from any street crossing. The old tank of the Great Northern came within this limit and another was being put up farther to the west. Supt. C. P. Degman arrived in the city shortly after being notified of the process and at once called upon the city authorities. He explained that the tank was now half way completed and that it would be unjust to force the company to make the change at this late date as nothing had been said about the matter before.

After consulting with City Attorney Theodore Quale and explaining the situation he was permitted to order the work taken up again. The tank will not interfere with traffic in any way and the company has pledged itself to arrange troughs in such manner that all overflow will be led away from the sidewalk.

CLOSE BOOK WITH SIX YEARS' RECORD

There Have Been a Total of 638 Mariages in County During Its Organization.

Clerk of Court H. E. Ives has just closed the first book of records of marriage licenses issued in the county, this containing the names of those who have been granted these permits since the county was first organized.

The book shows that there have been a total of 638 marriages since the first was issued to Ole Brooten and Clara Rustabakke in 1910. The last names on its pages are those of Lawrence Victor Coleson of Jefferson county, Iowa, and Clara Neline Sanden of Pennington county.

National Agent Here.

Dr. Gordon L. Berry, national secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Blindness in Children, will deliver a free lecture at the Auditorium on Saturday evening under the auspices of the Woman's club. Dr. Berry's subject is one that is attracting a great deal of attention at the presen time and the members of the Woman's club are very anxious that a good turn-out greet the speaker, who is making a tour of all the cities of this section in the interest of the work.

"My Friend From India," a comedy in three acts, to be presented by the Thief River Falls Commercial club at the Auditorium on Friday evening, December 15, is a clever comedy skit. The plot revolves around a retired Kansas City pork packer and his two daughters, Bernice and Gertie, who are trying to break into New York society. In this ambition they are assisted by Marian Hayste, a "leader" of the Four Hundred, with whom Charlie Underholt, the son of the pork-packing household, is in love when he is not too busy attending to his highball and white light interests.

The play opens on the morning after one of Charlie's nights out, when he discovers that he brought home with him a stranger, Augustus Keene Shaver by name and none too reputable in appearance. How to get rid of his acquisition is something of a problem. In reading over a newspaper he discovers that one Rev. James Tweedle, a theosophist or some such thing, is in the city on a visit and he conceives the idea of pawning his new-found friend off on his dad as the reincarnated gink. This would give the family a celebrity to flash on the four hundred and bring the all swelldom to their doors. Shaver likes this none too well, but is forced to carry the idea out. Old man Underholt gives him a retainer of $1,000 to insure his being on the job and taking his place as the "lion" at a big reception to be given later. Tillie, the maid, is entrusted with the mailing of the invitations and forgets all about them until it is too late.

Mrs. Arabella Beekman Streete, a widow, concludes that it might be well to make the false Rev. Tweedle her third, and a lot of good comedy work is made possible by the situations. Tillie is everywhere present, particularly when she is not wanted, and helps the fun along with her dialect and clumsiness.

Tom Valentine is after one of the Underholt daughters but the old man has no earthly use for him, taking particular pains to explain this feeling to the young man. In fact, the father of this interesting family may be excused for thinking that everything is combining to make life miserable for him.

Of course everything comes out all right in the end. Everybody marries the party of his or her choice and live happy ever after.

It is a good play and Mrs. C. A. Pitkin, who has charge of the work of drilling the cast, is getting her proteges into excellent shape. They are already playing their parts with confidence and appreciation and by the evening of the performance any little irregularities will have been smoothened out.

TO BECOME NEW RAIL TERMINUS

WOULD TAP RICH REGION

Extension of Line Already Built Between Loman and Baudette and Would Run Through Malcolm and Germantown.

If the present intentions of the Backus interests are carried out Thief River Falls will be the western terminus of the railway controlled by that company, the other end of which is at International Falls. This road now runs from the alst named city westward through Loman to Baudette and an extension to the west and south has for some time been contemplated. According to reliable information a right-of-way has already been sought through the state lands in the counties to be traversed.

Section Has No Railroad.

Although the exact intention of the Backus Railway company has not yet been made known, it is understood that the following route has been chosen: From Baudette in a southwesterly direction through Malcolm and Carmel in northwestern Beltrami county, traversing southwestern Marshall county by way of Esplee and Germantown and then westward to Thief River Falls. These points have now no railroad connection nearer than the western terminus of the Backus line at Baudette, while on the east the nearest railway point is Goodridge on the Minnesota Northwestern. This would run the road through what is without question the best undeveloped section in the United States and one that has been steadily growing in population in spite of lack of proper transportation facilities.

Will Begin Building at Once.

It has long been known that the Backus people had some such step in view and the project will have every encouragement from the people of Northwestern Minnesota, and particularly of Thief River Falls. The road will open up some excellent territory along its entire course and would make important trading centers of many of the little inland towns touched. Particularly would the terminal points—International Falls and Thief River Falls—be vastly benefited by the building of this line, while Loman, Baudette and Germantown would at once assume an importance that they could never hope to gain in any other way.

Should the contemplated extension of the Minnesota Northwestern electric line to Grygla also become an established fact during the coming summer, and if, by any possible chance, the Opsahl project for a road around the southern end of the Red Lakes should take the form of an actuality, the next few years will see the greatest railway development and consequent agricultural progress in the history of northwestern Minnesota. Thief River Falls will form the hub of the greater part of these activities as well as become the greatest beneficiary of the enterprises when the roads are completed. Anything that our business men can do to aid matters should be undertaken with a vim. The success of the projects will justify almost any expenditure of time, money and effort.

POLICE GET TIP-OFF AND MAKE SEARCH

Two Rooms Over Jurgenson's Soft Drink Parlor Raided Wednesday by Police.

Chief of Police Berge, armed with a search warrant, yesterday morning raided two rooms over the S. Jurgenson soft drink parlor. The rooms were occupied by Adolph Kjoshem, an employe at the soft drink parlor, and Torger Olson, a young lad residing near Brunkeberg.

Police were given a "tip-off" Tuesday, which caused the investigation. C. Schulstad, a farmer residing east of this city, was found in a state of drunkenness on Tuesday at 5:30 p. m. in a room upstairs, and the officers then decided to look into the affair. In the raid two empty pint whisky bottles and one empty quart bottle were found.

The above mentioned men were called into police headquarters yesterday afternoon for a conference with County Attorney Kjomme, but nothing was revealed wherein the county option law had been violated. The empty bottles were the remains of a friendly party and no action was taken.

Boy Injured.

The twelve year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Phelps, 604 St. Paul avenue south, was run down by a car on the driving bridge Monday afternoon about five o'clock. The driver of the car was a stranger and his name was not learned. The boy was returning home after a skate up the Red Lake river. He was knocked down and sustained a broken rib on his right side. The boy is improving nicely.

PRESIDENT WILSON IN HIS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS ASKS FOR MORE CONTROL OVER THE RAILROADS

Declares That Their Operation Should Not Be Stopped or Interrupted by the Concerted Action of Organized Bodies of Men Until a Public Investigation Shall Have Been Instituted.

Urges the Passage of the Corrupt Practices Act Regulating the Expenditure of Money In Elections and Favors More Freedom of Combination to Those Engaged In Foreign Commerce.

IN one of the shortest messages ever sent to congress President Wilson urges that early action be taken to complete his program of "settlement and regulation" recommended at the last session. The message in full is as follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress:

In fulfilling at this time the duty laid upon me by the constitution of communicating to you from time to time information of the state of the Union and recommending to your consideration such legislative measures as may be judged necessary and expedient I shall continue the practice, which I hope has been acceptable to you, of leaving to the reports of the several heads of the executive departments the elaboration of the detailed needs of the public service and confine myself to those matters of more general public policy with which it seems necessary and feasible to deal at the present session of the congress.

I realize the limitations of time under which you will necessarily act at this session and shall make my suggestions as few as possible. But there were some things left undone at the last session which there will now be time to complete and which it seems necessary in the interest of the public to do at once.

The Railroad Problem.

In the first place, it seems to me imperatively necessary that the earliest possible consideration and action should be accorded the remaining measures of the program of settlement and regulation which I had occasion to recommend to you at the close of your last session in view of the public dangers disclosed by the unaccommodated difficulties which then existed and which still unhappily continue to exist between the railroads of the country and their locomotive engineers, conductors and trainmen.

I then recommended:

First, immediate provision for the enlargement and administrative reorganization of the interstate commerce commission along the lines embodied in the bill recently passed by the house of representatives and now awaiting action by the senate in order that the commission may be enabled to deal with the many great and various duties now devolving upon it with a promptness and thoroughness which are, with its present constitution and means of action, practically impossible.

Second, the establishment of an eight hour day as the legal basis alike of work and of wages in the employment of all railway employees who are actually engaged in the work of operating trains in interstate transportation.

Third, the authorization of the appointment by the president of a small body of men to observe the actual results in experience of the adoption of the eight hour day in railway transportation alike for the men and for the railroads.

Fourth, explicit approval by the congress of the consideration by the interstate commerce commission of an increase of freight rates to meet such additional expenditures by the railroads as may have been rendered necessary by the adoption of the eight hour day and which have not been offset by administrative readjustments and economies, should the facts disclosed justify the increase.

Fifth, an amendment of the existing federal statute which provides for the mediation, conciliation and arbitration of such controversies as the present by adding to it a provision that, in case the methods of accommodation now provided for should fail, a full public investigation of the merits of every such dispute shall be instituted and completed before a strike or lockout may lawfully be attempted.

Control by the Executive.

And, sixth, the lodgment in the hands of the executive of the power, in case of military necessity, to take control of such portions and such rolling stock of the railways of the country as may be required for military use and to operate them for military purposes, with authority to draft into the military service of the United States such train crews and administrative officials as the circumstances require for their safe and efficient use.

The second and third of these recommendations the congress immediately acted on: It established the eight hour day as the legal basis of work and wages in train service and it authorized the appointment of a commission to observe and report upon the practical results, deeming these the measures most immediately needed, but it postponed action upon the other suggestions until an opportunity should be offered for a more deliberate consideration of them.

OPERATION OF RAILWAYS SHALL NOT BE STOPPED

To pass a law which forbade or prevented the individual workman to leave his work before receiving the approval of society in doing so would be to adopt a new principle into our jurisprudence which I take it for granted we are not prepared to introduce. But the proposal that the operation of the railways of the country shall not be stopped or interrupted by the concerted action of organized bodies of men until a public investigation shall have been instituted which shall make the whole question at issue plain for the judgment of the opinion of the nation is not to propose any such principle. It is based upon the very different principle that the concerted action of powerful bodies of men shall not be permitted to stop the industrial processes of the nation.

The fourth recommendation I do not deem it necessary to renew. The power of the interstate commerce commission to grant an increase of rates on the ground referred to is indisputably clear, and a recommendation by the congress with regard to such a matter might seem to draw in question the scope of the commission's authority or its inclination to do justice when there is no reason to doubt either.

The other suggestions—the increase in the interstate commerce commission's membership and in its facilities for performing its manifold duties, the provision for full public investigation and assessment of industrial disputes, and the grant to the executive of the power to control and operate the railways when necessary in time of war or other like public necessity—I now very earnestly renew.

New Legislation Necessary.

The necessity for such legislation is manifest and pressing. Those who have intrusted us with the responsibility and duty of serving and safeguarding them in such matters would find it hard, I believe, to excuse a failure to act upon these grave matters or any unnecessary postponement of action.

Not only does the interstate commerce commission now find it practically impossible, with its present membership and organization, to perform its great functions promptly and thoroughly, but it is not unlikely that it may presently be found advisable to add to its duties still others equally heavy and exacting. It must first be perfected as an administrative instrument.

The country cannot and should not consent to remain any longer exposed to profound industrial disturbances for lack of additional means of arbitration and conciliation which the congress can easily and promptly supply. And all will agree that there must be no doubt as to the power of the executive to make immediate and uninterrupted use of the railroads for the concentration of the military forces of the nation wherever they are needed and whenever they are needed.

This is a program of regulation, prevention and administrative efficiency which argues its own case in the mere statement of it. With regard to one of its items, the increase in the efficiency of the interstate commerce commission, the house of representatives has already acted. Its action needs only the concurrence of the senate.

To Safeguard Industrial Processes.

I would hesitate to recommend, and I dare say the congress would hesitate to act upon the suggestion should I make it, that any man in any occupation should be obliged by law to continue in an employment which he desired to leave.

To pass a law which forbade or prevented the individual workman to leave his work before receiving the approval of society in doing so would be to adopt a new principle into our jurisprudence which I take it for granted we are not prepared to introduce. But the proposal that the operation of the railways of the country shall not be stopped or interrupted by the concerted action of organized bodies of men until a public investigation shall have been instituted which shall make the whole question at issue plain for the judgment of the opinion of the nation is not to propose any such principle.

It is based upon the very different principle that the concerted action of powerful bodies of men shall not be permitted to stop the industrial processes of the nation, at any rate before the nation shall have had an opportunity to acquaint itself with the merits of the case as between employee and employer, time to form its opinion upon an impartial statement of the merits, and opportunity to consider all practicable means of conciliation or arbitration.

I can see nothing in that proposition but the justifiable safeguarding by society of the necessary processes of its very life. There is nothing arbitrary or unjust in it unless it be arbitrarily and unjustly done. It can and should be done with a full and scrupulous regard for the interests and liberties of all concerned as well as for the permanent interests of society itself.

Three matters of capital importance await the action of the senate which have already been acted upon by the house of representatives—the bill which seeks to extend greater freedom of combination to those engaged in promoting the foreign commerce of the country than is now thought by some to be legal under the terms of the laws against monopoly, the bill amending the present organic law of Porto Rico and the bill proposing a more thorough and systematic regulation of the expenditure of money in elections, commonly called the corrupt practices act. I need not labor my advice that these measures be enacted into law. Their urgency lies in the manifest circumstances which render their adoption at this time not only opportune but necessary. Even delay would seriously jeopard the interests of the country and of the government.

Immediate passage of the bill to regulate the expenditure of money in elections may seem to be less necessary than the immediate enactment of the other measures to which I refer, because at least two years will elapse before another election in which federal offices are to be filled, but it would greatly relieve the public mind if this important matter were dealt with while the circumstances and the dangers to the public morals of the present method of obtaining and spending campaign funds stand clear under recent observation and the methods of expenditure can be frankly studied in the light of present experience. And a delay would have the further serious disadvantage of postponing action until another election was at hand and some special object connected with it might be thought to be in the mind of those who urged it. Action can be taken now with facts for guidance and without suspicion of partisan purpose.

Enlarging Our Export Trade.

I shall not argue at length the desirability of giving a freer hand in the matter of combined and concerted effort to those who shall undertake the essential enterprise of building up our export trade. That enterprise will presently, will immediately assume, has indeed already assumed, a magnitude unprecedented in our experience. We have not the necessary instrumentalities for its prosecution. It is deemed to be doubtful whether they could be created upon an adequate scale under our present laws. We should clear away all legal obstacles and create a basis of undoubted law for it which will give freedom without permitting unregulated license. The thing must be done now, because the opportunity is here and may escape us if we hesitate or delay.

REGULATE EXPENDITURE OF ELECTION MONEY

Immediate passage of the bill to regulate the expenditure of money in elections may seem to be less necessary than the immediate enactment of the other measures to which I refer, because at least two years will elapse before another election in which federal offices are to be filled, but it would greatly relieve the public mind if this important matter were dealt with while the circumstances and the dangers to the public morals of the present method of obtaining and spending campaign funds stand clear under recent observation and the methods of expenditure can be frankly studied in the light of present experience.

The argument for the proposed amendments of the organic law of Porto Rico is brief and conclusive. The present laws governing the island and regulating the rights and privileges of its people are not just. We have created expectations of extended privilege which we have not satisfied. There is uneasiness among the people of the island and even a suspicious doubt with regard to our intentions concerning them which the adoption of the pending measure would happily remove. We do not doubt what we wish to do in any essential particular. We ought to do it at once.

Legislative Annals Enriched.

There are other matters already advanced to the stage of conference between the two houses of which it is not necessary that I should speak. Some practicable basis of agreement concerning them will no doubt be found and action taken upon them.

Inasmuch as this is, gentlemen, probably the last occasion I shall have to address the Sixty-fourth congress, I hope that you will permit me to say with what genuine pleasure and satisfaction I have co-operated with you in the many measures of constructive policy with which you have enriched the legislative annals of the country. It has been a privilege to labor in such company. I take the liberty of congratulating you upon the completion of a record of rare serviceableness and distinction.

AWARD LETTER TO THIEF RIVER BOY

Perry Johnson Was Going Good When Injuries Put Him Out of the Game For Season

Perry Johnson of Thief River Falls, a senior in the college of agriculture of the university of Minnesota, was one of the members of the Minnesota football team which has just ended the season with a record of the heaviest scores in the northwest. Mr. Johnson played in only a few games, injuries received in practice the earlier part of the season keeping him out of most of the games. This is the second year that he has had a place on the regular team.

The footbal season at the university of Minnesota, though not ending with the championship of the northwest, gave Minnesota victories over almost every strong team in the section. One game to Illinois was the only game lost and the scores in most other games were larger than those made by any other team in the northwest.

Seven men from the college of agriculture were members of the team which is allowed to wear the university letter after this year. Three of these were members of last year's team too.

Rural Carrier Examination.

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination for the county of Pennington, Minnesota, to be held at Thief River Falls at 10 a. m., on January 13, 1917, to fill the position of rural carrier at St. Hilaire. and vacancies that may later occur on rural routes from other post offices in the above mentioned county. The examination will be open only to male citizens who are actually domiciled in the territory of a post office in the county and who meet the other requirements set forth in Form No. 1977. This form and application blanks may be obtained from the offices mentioned above or from the United States Civil Service Commission at Washington, D. C. Applications should be forwarded to the Commission at Washington at the earliest practiceable date.

Oklee's Creamery Record.

The rapid strides that are being made in this part of the state in the dairying business are more than evidenced by the remarkable report just issued by the Oklee creamery. Butter fat more than trebled in value in October over a year ago, increasing from $935 to $3,323, which latter figure is even larger than the three months of September, October and November a year ago, when the total was $2,771. The amount of butter that was made also showed a remarkable increase, there being 4,132 pounds a year ago, while this year there were 10,867 pounds. Butter fat a year ago brought 29 cents per pound, while this year it brought 39 cents, or an increase of one-third.

A Tribute To Joe DuCamp

Editor of The Times:—I was very much grieved to find in the last issue of your paper a notice of the death of Joe DuCamp. He and I were warm friends—about the year 1900 or 1901. He was the first man to take me out to attend a meeting to be held at Tweet. Afer the meeting he took me to his home and kept me over Sunday, taking me to Thief River Falls the next day. There were no roads—only swamps—and I believe we traveled in through water over two-thirds of the way. He was one of the first men to work for the dairy business near your town. He was instrumental in starting the Germantown dairy plant, also the one at Kratka and other points. I remember his wife and children and it certainly grieved me to hear of his death because I expected to meet him in your city on Dec. 6 and 7 at the dairymen's convention which I will attend.

RECOGNIZED AS MARKET CENTER

Thief River Falls One of Cities Asked to Furnish Data by Advertising Clubs of World.

WORK OF NATIONAL SCOPE

Six Principal Retail Lines Are Covered by Questions and Conditions Throughout Country Are Thus Closely Kept Track of.

Chairman McMartin, of the Minnesota branch of the Advertising Clubs of the World, has urged Secretary Laird of the Commercial club of this city to secure for this organization some data from the merchants of Thief River Falls, relative to merchandising in this city and vicinity.

Here is a chance for Thief River Falls to get publicity throughout the entire country and Canada, as well as such reports as will eventually go to Europe. The parent organization is but three years old yet today is regarded as one of the strongest in the whole world. Its reports are unbiased and for that reason bear greater weight than would otherwise be the case.

For Reliable Data.

When the European war broke out this country was facing a peculiar situation as to business conditions. There was no data available on which to base conclusions or on which to work out any scheme for the extension of trade. Advertising men in the big cities got together and evolved a set of questions which were sent to various advertising clubs throughout the country, taking in only the largest cities that year.

Secured Valuable Information.

The information gleaned from their reports was so extraordinarily valuable, yet simple, that last year over a thousand cities in the United States and Canada were asked these same questions—five in number. This year over two thousand cities are asked to give this information, and among the number is Thief River Falls. There are no secrets of any line of business given away as all figures asked for are on the percentage basis. And not one of the thousands of people who will gather this information will receive a cent for their work.

Retail Lines Covered.

As in the two previous years, the investigation for 1916 will cover the six principle retail lines, namely: department stores, hardware stores, clothing stores, jewelry stores and drug stores. The five questions which are asked are all easy ones:

1. Sales. "What is the percent of increase or decrease in your total volume of sales for November, 1916, as compared with November, 1915?
2. The same question relating to advertising expenditures.
3. The same question relating to volume of stock on hand.
4. The same question relating to net profit.
5. What percent of all money in accounts on your books October 31, 1916, was collected during November?

Improves Standing.

The answers are carefully tabulated and the information gleaned is as reliable as that sent out by the best commercial agencies. It gives the merchants and the cities in which their business is situated a standing among the big manufacturers of the country. The reports are read by financiers and merchants all over the United States and Canada, and the work of the advertising clubs has the endorsement of President Wilson and Premier Borden.

Will Reciprocate.

The Bagley Independent of last week, in speaking of the recent meeting of the Jefferson Highway association at St. Paul and of the visit of representatives from Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater counties upon the State Highway commission in behalf of the latter county in its effort to get a portion of the federal good roads appropriation, has this to say:

"The fact that the counties of Red Lake, Pennington and Beltrami all joined and urged the commission to lend its assistance to Clearwater county, had great weight with the commission and should anyone of these counties in the future need any assistance from Clearwater county to help boost any project for their benefit, Clearwater county should stand ready to do its share."

TEAM WORK TELLS IN ROAD BUILDING

Action of Nearby Counties in Aiding Clearwater Gives Impetus to Work Everywhere.

The recent action taken by the Jefferson Highway association in the Commercial club rooms relative to securing federal aid for the highway in Clearwater county, has had its effect in Wadena county, where the commissioners have just authorized an expenditure of $25,000 with the expectation that the State Highway commission will give them an equal amount.

Those who have driven over the highway from the Twin Cities know that the road is in excellent shape now from that point to Bemidji, with the exception of a few places that have not been quite up to standard. It is to remedy these smaller defects that Wadena county is now bending its energies.

Everybody Getting Busy.

Beltrami county has announced that it will do its share of improvement this coming season between Bemidji and the Clearwater county line. Clearwater is now preparing data and has already made a start to improve the highway with the aid of federal funds. Red Lake county has its piece of the highway in excellent shape, and Pennington county will grade and gravel several miles west of Thief River Falls as far as the Pembina trail. There is not much to be done in Marshall county outside of the construction of two or three bridges, while in Kittson county considerable work has already been accomplished.

Altogether the northern end of the Jefferson Highway in this state will be about as good as can be found anywhere in the country and tourists will cover this country in ever increasing numbers as the ease of travel becomes more generally known.

CLOSES SEVENTH SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Business of Thief River Grocery Company Indicates Development of Territory Covered.

NO-VARY LINES FEATURED

Have Been Found Most Dependable under All Circumstances—Wholesalers Everywhere Are Facing Shortage in Many Lines

On December 31 the Thief River Grocery comany, one of the most important and widely known business houses in this section of the state, will close its seventh season. In spite of the unusual conditions confronting merchandising houses of all kinds and sizes during the past twelve months, the business of the Thief River Falls concern has been steadily extended until now it covers the territory along the line of the Soo railroad from Detroit to the Canadian boundary and from Bemidji to Overly, North Dakota. On the lines of the Great Northern Railway goods are shipped to practically every station between Red Lake Falls and Warroad From the last-named town the territory westward to Baudette is covered over the Canadian Northern.

Had Small Beginning.

When the company was organized seven years ago, F. H. Herrick was chosen president, and J. H. McKinney secretary-treasurer, which respective positions these gentlemen still hold. Both are men of much experience in this line of business and the success enjoyed by the enterprise from the start is almost entirely due to their capable management and sound business policy.

At the time of the opening of the house in this city Mr. Herrick and Mr. McKinney constituted the entire office crew. Now the clerical force numbers eight people, while six men are steadily employed in the different departments of the warehouse proper. Some idea of the amount of goods handled may be gained from the fact that two drays are kept busy practically the entire time in hauling goods from the warehouse for transshipment to the smaller towns in the company's selling territory. The traveling sales force force is about the same as at the time the house was opened, four "drummers" and a city man being kept busy the year around. The sales have doubled since the concern opened in 1909, a fact which in it self bears striking testimony to the rapid development of the section.

Acquired Superior Line.

Four years ago the Thief River Grocery company became the district distributor for the "No-Vary Products," at the same time adding to the business a department for the handling of green fruits. The No-Vary line of can and box goods is regarded as the best to be found in the country. The heads of the parent concern wished to put on the market a line of goods in which absolute dependance could be placed. They therefore secured the entire crops of such products as they handled from sections where the best of these were known to grow, thereafter supervising the handling of the output until it was finally stored in the can or other receptacle ready for shipment. Getting these products from the same sources year after year has made for stability in quality while the care bestowed upon the canning and packing has resulted in bringing the brand up to a standard reached by but few.

Protect Their Trade.

As an example of the care taken by the management in order to protect customers, their action at the time of the threatened railroad strike might be cited. Realizing that the tieing up of trains for even a short time would mean a severe inroad on the stock on hand without any possible chance of replenishing it, supplies were rushed in from all sources until the big building was filled from cellar to garret. This would have supplied the local trade for some time and would also have taken care of the business of most of the merchants of nearby sections who can reach this city by team. The precaution proved unnecessary, but might easily have been the principal factor in preventing much inconvenience, if not actual suffering.

Fruits Are Important.

As an indication of the importance attained by the business of handling fresh fruits, Mr. Herrick states that during the past season four carloads of strawberries were distributed from the company's warehouse here. In previous years shipments of one carload were always divided between Crookston and Thief River Falls. Twenty-five carloads of apples have been handled every fall for some years, and more could have been disposed of this year if the fruit could have been secured. The sugar sales average one carload every week.

Unusual Conditions.

"The present conditions are different from any I have ever seen during my 25 years in this business," said Mr. Herrick. "Prices are high—outrageously high—and the wholesaler comes in for his share of the blame for this condition. As a matter of fact the middlemen are the ones being punished by the present situation. The manufacturer or packer gets the full benefit of any raise in prices, and the wholesaler must pay what is asked. Lately commodities have gone up to such an extent that the wholesaler has found it impossible to pass the entire burden on to the retailer. He has shaved his percentage to the lowest possible price in order to keep the ultimate selling cost at a figure that would make the moving of goods possible. The retailer is very much in the same boat. He looks at the cost figures and makes up his mind that it will be impossible to add his usual percentage of profit, and he cuts things down as closely as he dares. The ultimate consumer pays a big price for what he uses and blames it to the man nearest to him. This is only natural, but is a little severe on the other fellow, who is hit just as hard."

Can't See End

Mr. Herrick is unable to see the end of high prices and is afraid that the apex has not yet been reached. The stocks bought while prices were much lower than at present have in many cases not been entirely sold out and the people are getting the benefit of this fact. When more goods must be purchased it will be found that another raise has been sprung, and there is no way of telling where it will stop. Shippers will quote no prices for future delivery. They will sell goods only subject to the price at the time shipment is made—and many articles have been taken off the market altogether. Among these are such well known staple articles as Campbells soups and Carnation milk. Concerns like the Diamond match company will not advance shipments a single day where contracts were made for future delivery. No-Vary Norewgian sardines cannot be had. This is a particularly fine article in which the company had worked up a good business. Now England takes the entire Norwegian output of fish.

Car Shortage Blamed

"A shortage of cars is responsible for much of the trouble, although just why this should be the case I do not know," said Mr. Herrick. "We had 16 carloads of apples coming from the west about the middle of October and they are not all here yet. In order to secure any of this fruit we had to have it shipped in common box cars and take all the risk of frost. We had the cars lined with paper, a stove put in and placed a man in charge of the shipment during the entire trip. It's the same with California fruits, which are bought generally about a year ahead. This past week the shippers have sent out a letter to all customers notifying them that it is impossible to get refrigerator cars and the goods must be shipped in common box cars at the buyers' risk. All these cause a large extra expense."

May Force Embargo

Mr. Herrick fears that conditions may come to such a pass that an embargo on exports will be the only way in which prices can be kept at anything like a reasonable level. He hopes that no such step will be found necessary, an embargo being in some respects unfair to a very large portion of our population. The officers of the company realize fully the conditions under which the people are living, and hope that an improvement will soon be noted. The consumer has the satisfaction of knowing that the merchandiser is being hit just as hard—anxious that a change will soon be noted.

VERSATILE CROOK GRABS EVERYTHING

Steals Horses, Cattle, Grain and Money From the Farmers of Red Lake County.

The most energetic and versatile thief visiting this section for many years is being sought by the authorities of Red Lake and Polk counties. Although operating very near the border of Pennington county, farmers seem to have escaped his attention. In some respects the fellow is unusual as he does not seem to confine his activities to any particular line but appropriates anything he thinks he can use. The Red Lake Falls Gazette gives the following account of his activities to date:

"One C. Burkhart is wanted by the authorities of Red Lake and Polk counties for the most daring series of depredations ever pulled off in the locality for some years. Mr. Burkhart came to Louisville town some two weeks ago and in the short time that he resided there, just one week, he stole 100 bushels of oats from Odelon Provost and Henry Cassavant, Louisville, one cow from Mr. Provost, one cow from Rudolph Duchrme of Lake Pleasant, three calves from Jule Lizotte of Louisville and four horses from a Mr. Forsythe of Dugdale. He then borrowed $100 from a local bank giving a chattel mortgage on all "his" property. And all this occurred in a week's time.

Disguised the Cow.

"He was first arrested last week by Sheriff Chas. Fellman on the charge of stealing the oats. When Sheriff Fellman and Chas. Boughton went out to arrest him they unearthed the fact that Mr. Provost of that vicinity had missed his cow and upon investigation the officers found her in Burkhardt's yard with one horn sawed off and her tail clipped. With such crude methods Burkhardt had attempted to disguise her and had the nerve to tie her in his yard, not two miles from the place where the rightful owner lived.

Borrowed from the Bank

"Burkhart claimed he had bought the animal but his wife and son told that it had strayed to their place. Burkhart was arrested on the charge of stealing Provost's cow, also for stealing three calves owned by Jule Lizotte and for stealing a cow from Rudolph Ducharme of Lake Pleasant. Burkhart pleaded not guilty and was released on $100 bail which he supplied. It was then discovered that he had obtained the $100 from a local bank by giving a chattel mortgage on the stolen property which he, of course, had represented as his.

Skipped with Stolen Horses

"It was further discovered when the officers went out to arrest him on the charge of jumping bail that he had fled the country, taking with him four horses owned by a Mr. Fosyth of Dugdale. The police and sheriffs for miles around have been notified to keep a look-out for this daring thief and if apprehended he will have some spare time behind the bars to ponder the question "Does it Pay?"

"With the exception of his oldest son, the family is still on the farm in Louisville, and are said to be in straightened circumstances. Burkhart could probably be arrested on a charge of deserting his family."

A Mail Order Man's Tax Dodging.

A great deal has been said about the distant mail order merchant who gets our cash without contributing to the upkeep of our community. It had been supposed, however, that he had paid his share toward the carrying on of government where he had his home.

It seems that he does not—always. The head of a great Chicago mail order concern passed away some time ago, and now it is known that he avoided as successfully the responsibilities of citizenship in his home town as he escaped whatever claims may have been set up to his civic duty toward distant regions that contributed to his wealth. He was taxation exempt in his far away trade territory, and he dodged his just taxes in the place of his residence. A million and a half dollars was the amount of money due his own community which he withheld from its coffers.

The patrons of the man deprived their own town of the benefits that it would have reaped from their trading at home. They gave him the financial strength to resist the laws bidding him deal fairly with the city in which he dwelt. Here were two wrongs growing out of one situation. The distant customers had no power by which to compel the mail order merchant to be honest with his own townsmen, but those customers could have reduced the bad condition one-half by being loyal to their own community.—St. Joseph Gazette.

THE FARMERS

OF PENNINGTON AND ADJOINING COUNTIES

By M. A MATTISON

Successful Truck Farmer.

Situated just south of Rosewood is the home of Erick Johnson, who came to Marshall county twelve years ago from Sweden and has lived in his present home for the past three years. Mr. Johnson cultivates only a few acres but makes every inch of ground count. He is raising garden truck, potatoes etc., in great quantities and finds a ready market for all he can produce. He is well satisfied with this part of the state and says that as far as he is concerned he does not know where he could better himself. A cozy, well furnished home gives Mr. Johnson and his family a chance to enjoy life every day in the year.

Another Farm With a Name

"The Green Grove Farm" is the manner in which John E. Hellquist, who resides on section 4, just north of Rosewood, designates his place. It is unusually well provided with good buildings, including a fine new residence, is in a good state of cultivation and is making money for its owner. Heading his fine herd of twenty-five cattle, Mr. Hellquist has a thoroughbred Holstein sire which he purchased at Northfield, this state, and for which he paid a fancy price. The introduction of better stock in this section is of vital importance and Mr. Hellquist is to be commended for his enterprise in this direction. In order to provide good feed for his herd of cattle this progressive farmer is successfully raising large quantities of timothy, clover and fodder corn. The sooner the farmers of Marshall county go in for more and better live stock and mixed farming the better they will be off, is the opinion of Mr. Hellquist. He also contends that the tax laws of this state should be changed so that a man who makes improvements on his place will not have to pay a fine for so doing. The man who lets his land lay practically idle and refuses to improve it with suitable buildings, holding it for no other purpose than to profit by the industry of his neighbors, should be forced to pay dearly for the privilege, according to the way Mr. Hellquist looks at it. It is thirty-three years since the Hellquist family came from Ispheming, Mich., to this section and they have aided materially in bringing it to its present state of excellence.

Raises Pure Bred Poultry

Just a little farther north on the "ridge" road lives A. T. Thorson. Mr. Thorson formerly resided in Polk county but four years ago purchased the farm which is now his home. It is a good farm and is well provided with buildings. Mixed farming is the motto of Mr. Thorson and he is making a success of it. In addition to a nice herd of cattle, an important part in keeping the wolf from the door is taken by a fine flock of pure bred White Leghorn chickens. It is as fine a flock of this popular breed of poultry as it has been the privilege of the writer to see for some time, and Mr. Thorson is justified in showing with pride these busy little producers of the almighty dollar. More live stock and more actual settlers is the crying need of this country at the present time in the opinion of Mr. Thorson. Land is advancing very rapidly in price as it is, but he contends that the rise would be even more pronounced if there were more farmers, each farming fewer acres, and each farm taking care of a larger quota of dairy and beef cattle.

Raising Sheep Successfully

On section 34, New Solum township, is the fine farm owned by Mrs. Johanna Styrlund. The farm is operated jointly by Mrs. Styrlund's two sons, Thure and David, and they are farmers in every sense of the term. The family originally came from Ishpheming, Mich., in 1886, and the present farm is the old homestead. Mr. Styrlund, Sr., died a number of years ago. A commodious cement block residence gives the family a comfortable home, while ample outbuildings are provided to care for the live stock. The Styrlund boys have a flock of sheep and find them to be a paying proposition. It is the intention to increase the herd materially next year and sheep will have a prominent place on this farm in the future. The farm is practically all under cultivation and in addition to the regular crops of wheat, oats, etc., an abundance of fodder corn, clover and timothy are raised each season. Especially good results have been attained with clover and this fall some of it was saved for seed. That the Styrlund boys have the right idea in regard to fertilizing the soil is indicated by the fact that they own a manure spreader and have been busy for some time cleaning up all manure piles, straw stack bottoms, etc., and covering the fields with it.

Raising Corn Not Difficult.

Raising corn in this part of the state has long since ceased to be an experiment, acording to Sven Haugen, who owns and operates a farm on section 35, New Solum township. He has been raising corn for years and has had success with it every year that farmers farther south have been able to produce corn. Mr. Haugen and family came from Blooming Prairie, this state, twenty-two years ago, and have since lived on the farm which is now their home. That their efforts have not all been in vain is indicated by the fact that they own 300 acres of as good land as ever laid out of doors and have provided a fine set of farm buildings. The land is all under cultivation with the exception of a few acres of timber and some pasture and hay meadow. Just a few rods from the Haugen home is the school house for district 41. It is a good country school and is attended by upwards of thirty pupils. Miss Lillie Gunstad is the teacher and has been very successful in her work. The school building is constructed from cement blocks, is large enough to give ample room and is fully equipped with the most up-to-date school books maps, etc.

Will Take It A Little Easier.

Just north of the Sven Haugen place lives Iver M. Westby. Mr. Westby has been farming on a large scale for many years but has decided that he is entitled to a little respite and accordingly will work only forty acres in the future. He moved to his present place twenty years ago, but ten years later went to the neighborhood of Goodridge, where he owns a large farm, and operated it until this season. Last August he and his family returned from Goodridge and will make their home in New Solum township in the future. A fine residence and other buildings have been provided so that they will have ample opportunity to enjoy life to the fullest extent. A few head of cattle and taking care of the forty acres of land will serve to keep Mr. Westby occupied when time threatens to hang heavy on his hands. Before coming to this country Mr. Westby resided at Fargo. N. D.

This Man Also "Resting"

Following many years of hard work, S. Swenson has decided that the best place to enjoy the pleasures of life is on the farm and accordingly he has purchased and moved onto a farm on section 35, New Solum township. He has rented the land to a neighbor and will have nothing to do but the "chores" about the place and the remainder of the time he can employ as he sees fit. Mr. Swenson has been in this section of the state since 1884, and in the early days conducted a general store at Newfolden. This was before the railroad passed through that section and all of the merchandise for the store had to be freighted by team from St. Hilaire, a distance of twenty-four miles. Oxen were used for this purpose and when the going was bad a trip sometimes consumed a whole week. In 1891 Mr. Swenson disposed of his business at Newfolden and came to Thief River Falls, where he entered the same line of business and remained for twenty years. One year ago he moved to his present home. It is Mr. Swenson's opinion that stock raising will benefit this country greatly and that it should be engaged in on a more extensive scale by the farmers. He thinks there is no doubt of the future prosperity of the country and cites as proof of his contention the fact that nearly all the farmers in the vicinity of Rosewood are very well fixed financially, and conditions in the future will be such that it will be much easier for them to succeed.

Knows the Country.

Another man who has been here long enough to know the country thoroughly is John Sor, who lives on the farm adjoining Rosewood on the north. Mr. Sor and family came to this locality from Michigan thirty-three years ago and homesteaded the place upon which they now reside. They built a comfortable log cabin in the early days and still reside in it. A good herd of cattle and plenty of feed are Mr. Sor's chief sources of income and they never fail him no matter what kind of a season may hit this country. Mr. Sor is ably assisted in his farm work by Joel Sjoberg, his grandson, an energetic young man who has made his home with the old folks for some time. In connection with his work on the farm, Mr. Sjoberg finds time to gather and write news of Rosewood and vicinity each week for publication in The Times.

More Cattle and More Settlers

More cattle and more settlers are needed very badly to bring this territory to the state of perfection where it belongs—and bring it there quickly,—is the way Emil Blomberg, who lives on section 25, New Solum township, has it doped out. Mr. Blomberg bought this farm and moved onto it four years ago, but is not new to this territory, having resided in Marshall and Pennington counties all his life. He has a nice start in the cattle and dairying industry and will keep adding to his herd as rapidly as possible. He has a nice set of farm buildings and everything about the place is conveniently arranged. While he has raised considerable grain in the past he will devote more of his land to various kinds of fodder crops in the future.

Abolish Middlemen in Land Sales

When a man comes into this vicinity from a distant point in search of a farm he should go out into the country, talk with the farmers, inform himself on land values and should try, if possible, to deal directly with the man who owns the farm he desires to purchase. This, in substance, is a statement made by Axel Axelson, who owns and operates a farm on section 2 of the "strip," New Solum township. Mr. Axelson thinks that the "middleman's" profit in land transactions should be divided between the buyer and seller. Whether or not this method of procedure is practical in a general way is left for the reader to decide. Eighteen years ago Mr. Axelson came from Warren, where he had resided for six years previously, and purchased the farm upon which he has since made his home. He has been making consistent progress every year and his farm is now in fine condition, fully equipped with buildings, fences and other improvements. A registered Red Polled sire heads his herd of twenty-five cattle, and he has a nice bunch of pure bred Duroc-Jersey hogs. Last year he had fifty-five acres of rye and raised a splendid crop. Two acres planted to potatoes the past season yielded 450 bushels of fine tubers. When asked what he though of this country, Mr. Axelson replied: "When I don't like a place, I move. Form your own conclusions."

Diversified Farming Necessary

On section 2 of the "strip." New Solum, lives Even Anderson, who came to the county thirty-three years ago from Fargo, N. D., and twenty-four years ago moved onto the farm where he has since made his home. Mr. Anderson has done exceedingly well and now has one of the best farms and the nicest set of farm buildings in his neighborhood. Among other indications of prosperity it may be noted that an automobile forms a part of the "rolling stock" of the place. Mr. Anderson is wintering twenty head of cattle and is milking several cows. He says that the land here is especially adapted to raising all kinds of fodder and feed grains and for this reason there is no difficulty in providing suitable feed for a large number of cattle. It has been proven that no land in the world will stand continued wheat raising and this also makes it necessary to turn to diversified farming in order to succeed. Mr. Anderson is an enthusiastic supporter of the co-operative creamery and is one of its best boosters.

Cows Contribute Cash.

Sievert Rafteseth, who lives on section 34, New Solum, is not a recent arrival in the neighborhood, having resided continuously on the same place since he came from Norway twenty-eight years ago. He has a good farm nearly all under cultivation and his improvements consist of a large and modern dwelling, besides barns, granaries etc. Next summer a new barn of the latest type will be built, much of the material being already on the ground. Mr. Rafteseth has retired from the active management of the farm, which is now in charge of his son, Sigurd. He continues to make it his home, however, and is enjoying in full measure the fruits of his many hard years of labor, The method of farming is being changed as rapidly as possible from grain production to stock raising and dairying, as experience has proven this to be by far the best way of making the place pay dividends. A nice herd of cattle, among which are twelve milch cows, will be wintered. Mr. Rafteseth's monthly checks from the creamery run close to $50, which easily proves that "the meek and lowly kine" are doing their share in keeping the farm ledger from showing a balance in the wrong column.

Fine Home Just Completed.

Another man who has been in this country long enough to know all about it is John Haider, who lives on section 26, New Solum township. Mr. Haider came to Marshall county thirty-five years ago from Stearns county, and nine years later purchased and moved onto the place where he now resides. A new dwelling house of ample proportions and modern in every respect has recently been completed on the Haider farm. Much of the dimension stuff and rough lumber used in the construction of this building was sawed from timber cut on the place so that the cost of putting up the house was materially reduced. Mixed farming is, in the opinion of Mr. Haider, the best way of making a success of the business in this section, and he is accordingly going more and more into dairying and stock raising. He devotes a large part of his farm to the raising of clover, timothy and other feed, and finds that through crop rotation he is also keeping his land in better condition than by the continuous raising of small grains. "Ready cash" is a luxury unheard of in the past, but now enjoyed by the farmers every month in the year. This is due, in Mr. Haider's opinion, to the establishment of the creameries in this section and the increasing dairy herds to be found on the farms.

Corn and Hogs Do Well.

Paul Schenke, who owns and operates 320 acres on section 18, Excel township, has been experimenting to a considerable extent with corn and hogs. He has proven that this branch of farming can be carried on successfully here and expects to keep right on raising corn and producing "porkers." Northwestern Dent is a sure crop in this country according to Mr. Schenke, and he thinks the time is not far distant when a large part of the land in this part of Minnesota will be devoted to the raising of this and other varieties of early-maturing corn. In addition to his hogs Mr. Schenke is keeping a considerable herd of cattle and is milking ten cows. He is also a strong advocate of mixed farming and crop rotation. A large barn, modern in all its appointments, has recently been completed on the place, providing ample room for all the live stock that the owner may desire to winter. Mr. Schenke came to this section from Crookston in 1883 with his father, Carl Schenke, who homesteaded a place on section 18 in the same township. Mr. Schenke, Sr., died ten years ago.

VALUABLE COURSE AT FARM COLLEGE

Success of Last Year' Course Warrants Expectation of Greater Interest This Year.

More than 1,200 farmers and home-makers were at the College of Agriculture, University Farm, Midway between St. Paul and Minneapolis, last year, participating in Farmers and Home-Makers week. Enthusiastic over the class work, demonstrations, conferences, club meetings, association meetings, and evening programs, they asked to be notified of the next meeting so they could come again and bring their friends and neighbors. So the next Farmers' and Home-Makers Week will be January 1 to 6, 1917.

The farm subjects to be handled include crops, farm management, soils, dairy and animal husbandry, horticulture, botany and entomology, agricultural engineering, poultry and bees, veteriniary science and rural cridit. The home-makers program will be made up of the following subjects: Principles of nutrition, problems in food preparation, textiles, problems in clothing construction, taste in dress and house-furnishing, child welfare, cost of food and the family budget, and home care of the sick.

CLOVER SEED BECOMING IMPORTANT VALLEY CROP

First Full Carload Shipped From Fosston Last Week—Value $10,000 to $12,000.

A new record for the Red River Valley was made this week when the first full carload of clover seed was shipped from Fosston out of the valley to other parts. And it was also a most valuable shipment at that, for it was believed to be worth in the neighborhood of $10,000 to $12,000.

A seed company from Iowa had heard of the wonderful production of clover seed in this part of the state and spent a few days rounding up the valuable shipment.

Clover has of late years been recognized as one of the leading products of the soil in northwestern Minnesota, and right here around Thief River Falls some excellent yields have been harvested. With the rapid advent of dairying the growing of clover will become still more prevalent and worth while.

FEDERAL HIGHWAY OFFICIAL PRESENT

The part of the federal government has assumed in the development of good roads in the United States will be explained to the Northern Minnesota Development association at its meeting at Bemidji, December 7th and 8th by Mr. E. O. Hathaway of the office of public roads at Washington.

John Wilson, assistant director of the office of public roads, with whom the officers of the development association have been in communiaction, has definitely announced that Mr. Hathaway, who will be the engineer in charge of the federal district in which Minnesota is included, will attend the meeting at Bemidji.

The relation of the Shackleford-Bankhead bill appropriating federal funds for aid in building highways as to road development in Minnesota is a matter of great current interest. Mr. Hathaway is expected to go into that subject and also to set out the standards of road building which are to be required of states seeking federal aid.

Road Authorities Present.

The interest being taken in the coming meeting of the Development association indicates that an unusually large attendance will mark this gathering. The definite announcement that Amendment No. 1 has carried, means that the discussion of legislation to be framed under the amendment will be one of the important subjects to come before the meeting. Senator R. C. Dunn of Princeton and Senator J. H. Baldwin of Frazee, are on the program for addresses on the good road question, and other speakers will be John Owens of Cook, M. F. Jamar Jr., of Duluth, and Richard R. Price of the university of Minnesota.

The potato exhibit to be held in connection with the meeting will draw exhibits from all parts of Northern Minnesota and will be of great interest to those who attend the meeting.

MILE OF SAMPLE ROAD PROPOSED

Jefferson Highway Commissioners Will Hard-Surface Such Stretch in All Counties.

KITTSON SENDS BIG CHECK

Daniel Shaw, on Recent Trip to South, Finds Great Enthusiasm Everywhere—has Affected Good Road Construction

"This Jefferson Highway agitation will prove the greatest stimulus to good road construction of any thing that has taken place in this country since trunk highways were first considered a possibility," said Daniel Shaw of this city upon his return from a trip to the south. "People everywhere are talking good roads, and where they already have this kind of highway they want them still better. In Minnesota, for instance, the establishment of the Jefferson road has had the result of making the Scenic highway an assured fact. So far from regarding this last enterprise as in any manner interfering with the plans of the people having the Jefferson road in charge, the meeting at St. Paul last week passed resolutions commending the spirit back of the Minnesota Scenic highway.

Minnesota is Top Notcher

Mr. Shaw states that while the meeting at St. Paul was in progress a check arrived from the Jefferson boosters of Kittson county inclosing their share of the general assessment, amounting to $250. This is the largest sum paid in by any Minnesota county and leaves but three yet to hear from. One of these is Hennepin and there is no doubt but that it's quota will be forthcoming when needed.

Will Feature Check.

The check sent in by Kittson county will be lithographed and used as an example by the commission. The most nothern county through which the road passes will by this means get a great deal of very valuable advertising.

Will Build Sample Mile.

Mr. Shaw states that it is the intention of the association to build one sample mile in every county along the line of the highway. This means that one section of this length—preferrably a bad one—will be hard surfaced and put in shape for all-year traffic. This piece will serve the purpose of an example and will relieve the county or community from just that much road construction. The latest machinery will be employed in this work and the people will themselves thus have an opportunity to see just how cheaply and well a road can be built when the proper outfit is at hand.

Much Work Accomplished.

"The Jefferson Highway is now the largest road undertaking in the United States," says Mr. Shaw, "being only exceeded in this respect by the Lincoln, which runs across the entire country from east to west. The last named road will cross the Jefferson highway at DesMoines, thus giving the tourist an ample choice of routes in any direction."

The South Enthusiastic.

It was the intention of the Minnesota delegation to make a trip to the southern treminus of the highway at New Orleans, but the roads southward from Muskogee, Okla., were found to be in such condition that this idea was abandoned. Just to prove what is being done to boost the highway in that section Mr. Shaw was informed that those in charge of the undertaking had raised $125,000 in half an hour for the purpose of building a concrete bridge across the Canadian river.

There will be about 200 miles of the highway in the state of Texas, 160 miles of which is already hard-surfaced.

Everywhere the party went they were enthusiastically greeted and assured that there would be no lagging in the work as far as the south is concerned. Everyone is convinced that the construction of the highway will make for a better understanding and a closer relationship between the North and South as well as provide the people of both sections with a means for the most pleasant and healthful recreation. Although the inability of the delegates to reach New Orleans on this trip was a source of much disappointment, nevertheless the journey was much enjoyed and served to impress all with the magnitude and value of the undertaking as well as with the enthusiasm with which it is being received everywhere.

COMMERCIAL CLUB NOTES

That the Dairymen's convention which has been held in this city this week has been a big advertisement to the city is well evidenced by the generous space that it has received in the large number of papers throughout the Red River Valley. The secretary of the Commercial club has been receiving copies of the papers containing mention of the convention and is more than gratified, for the club was very active last year in securing this convention for the city.

Club dues have been coming in quite promptly for the past month, but there are several who have so far failed to respond and it is hoped that the coming week will see them all paid up.

Tickets for the club play are now on sale and the excellent cast that will be presented should insure a full house. Announcement of the cast and other particulars will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Surprised at Interest Shown.

W. D. Mannen, of Mt. Sterling, Ill., who recently acquired 400 acres of land in the neighborhood of Goodridge for the purpose of converting it into a farm for the breeding of high grade live stock, arrived in the city yesterday just in time to take part in the proceedings of the dairymen's convention. Mr. Mannen stated that he was surprised at the number of delegates present as well as with the amount of interest shown.

"I have seen old dairy sections," said Mr. Mannen, "where it would be impossible to get up the amount of interest and enthusiasm evinced here by the farmers of the Red River valley. They are evidently sincere in their desire to secure the best results and know they can do this only by learning from one another.

"I consider the cattle shown as being particularly good, especially the grade stock. The butter was as fine as any I have seen anywhere and deserved the high score it attained. If I ever permitted myself to entertain a doubt as to the adabtability of this section to the breeding of good cattle, the conversations I have had with the delegates to this convention have effectually dispelled them."

Mr. Mannen says he regrets not getting the deal for his land fixed up sooner as he would very much have liked to winter a herd through in this neighborhood at once. He may conclude to do this even yet, bringing up a carload for the purpose in January. He does not want to put any milch cattle into the barns on the place this winter, but thinks it would have been a good idea to ship in sufficient alfalfa and other feed for fattening purposes. However, before another winter he will have his new buildings up and be ready for business.

Quality and Workmanship Speak For Themselves.

JONES sometimes wakes up feeling cross and in consequence the family know it without his telling them in so many words.

Mrs. Jones attributes it to biliousness and if it doesn't wear off during the day she gives him a dose of liver medicine at night. The next morning he feels better and she gives him coffee for breakfast,—and the next morning,—and the next morning. And in a few days Jones has another spell.

Dear Mrs. Jones means all right, but she doesn't seem to realize that if she didn't give Jones his morning coffee she wouldn't have to give him the liver medicine and Jones would feel all right without both.

Housewives everywhere have found out that Instant Postum takes the place of breakfast coffee perfectly. And that is only one of the reasons why Instant Postum has wholly supplanted the use of coffee on thousands upon thousands of American breakfast tables.

MUNICIPAL TREE WILL BE ALIGHT

Commercial and Woman's Clubs Will Provide Appropriate Entertainment During Holidays.

EXERCISES CHRISTMAS DAY

Church Chorus and City Band Will Furnish Music for Occasion—General Program Followed Last Year Will be Featured.

The children of Thief River Falls will have provided for them one of the largest Christmas trees that the Commercial club is able to procur. The balance of the peraphernalia and adjuncts necessary to the proper observance of the joyous holiday season will be furnished by the Woman's club. The committee in charge of the arrangements are hard at work and promise that the municipal Christmas tree festival at Thief River Falls will this year outshine anything in the same line attempted by cities for miles around.

This committee is made up as follows: Woman's club—Mrs. T. L. Melgaard, general chairman; Mrs. R. H. Ross, Mrs. H. W. Protzeller, Mrs. H. A. Brumund, Mrs. J. E. Douglass. From the Commercial club—E. M. Korstad, Roy Lambert and Scott Laird.

Exercises on Monday.

The tree will be set up on the corner of LaBree avenue and third street, this being about the most convenient location in the city. Electric lights will be strung through the branches in profusion and other ornamentation may be employed. Last year the wind played havoc with the trimmings and it is likely that these will be omitted in the present instance. The city council has promised to do the wiring and furnish the illumination free of charge and the band boys will be asked to volunteer their services during the opening exercises on Christmas afternoon. The choir from one of the local churches will sing the Christmas songs for the occasion. Candies and pop corn bags will be distributed to the children from decorated sleighs under the personal supervision of Santa Claus himself.

All the children in the city are invited to this Christmas festival. Everything will be free and the youngsters should at least show their appreciation of the work that has been done for them by putting in an appearance and helping to make the occasion the most joyous in the history of the city.

To Remain For Entire Week.

The Christmas tree will be allowed to remain in place until New Years day, being illuminated in the evening throughout the week. It is fitting and appropriate manner of celebrating the holiday season and this municipal tree idea is one that is being followed by most of the enterprising communities of the country. The two civic clubs having the affair in charge will spare no pains to make it a success and the people, and particularly the children, are expected to show some appreciation of the fact by lending their presence.

COST OF ONE VOTE IS FIFTEEN CENTS

Total of Expense For Late Election Foots Up $332.66, According to the Records.

The cost to the people of Pennington county of holding the late election was a trifle over fifteen cents for each vote cast, or a total of $332.66, according to the report submitted to the county commissioners at the meeting held last wee.

The heaviest item of expense was for general election supplies such as talley sheets, heavy return envelopes, clerks' and judges' certificates of election, these footing up a total of $114.75. The cost of getting the blank ballots to the different precincts and returning them again to the office of the auditor was $76.65. Printing the ballots and publication of the same came to $71.75, and the cost of canvassing by the county board was $18.61.

An itemized account of all the expenses incurred will be found in the proceedings of the county board published in this issue of The Times.

ASKS FARMERS TO GRANT EASEMENTS

Senator O'Neill Asks Guarantee That No Damage Proceedings Will Follow River Improvement

If the state of Minnesota is to take any part in the improvement of the Red Lake river, farmers along the stream will be required to sign relinquishments of any rights to damages because of the dirt removed by the dredges being dumped on their land. Senator D. P. O'Neil has this week requested all the newspapers in the county to call attention to this fact in order that the farmers affected will understand the situation when asked to sign such relinquishments. The state must be assured that no future expense will be entailed before there is any possibility of its going ahead with the work.

The state finds this precaution necessary because previous experience has proven that it is unsafe to go ahead without these easements. It is only a short time ago that trouble was experienced because of this oversight. Certain farmers in Kittson county caused considerable expense by claiming damages because of the dirt dumped onto their land through the digging of a ditch, and the state was put to much extra expense.

It is for the purpose of avoiding trouble of this kind that these relinquishments are requested.

Masons Elect Officers.

Northern Lodge No. 236, A. F. & A. M., on Monday held the annual election of officers, the following being chosen: G. L. Sterns, W. M.; H. R. Prichard, S. W.; T. L. Melgaard, treasurer; F. A. Gobler, secretary; Ole H. Ihle, trustee for three years. The date of the installation has not been definitely decided upon but it will probably take place just before the first of the year. The refurnishing of the enlarged quarters of the lodge has been about completed but there are still some minor additions to be made and the members hope to have these in place before the date of the installation.

CONVENIENCE FOR WOMEN VISITORS

Rest Room Provided in Scandia Block Will Prove of Particular Value to Strangers.

The Woman's club has made arrangements whereby the basement of the Scandia block will be used as a rest room for visiting women. The place is conveniently located in the center of the city's shopping district and will be equipped with any conveniences it may now lack for the proper accommodation of visitors. The members of the club will furnish the place with the necessary tables, chairs, books and magazines and will place an experienced caretaker in charge. The city council at the meeting on Monday night voted to donate the necessary light to the new enterprise and citizens generally will be asked to aid in its maintenance.

The room will be open all day, but for the present will close at five o'clock in the evening. All visiting women and girls are invited to make the fullest possible use of the accommodations.

WORK IS BEGUN ON A MUNICIPAL RINK

Committee in Charge Expects to Have Things in Running Order by Christmas.

The committee of the Commercial club having in charge the securing of funds for a municipal skating rink have enough pledges of support to warrant going ahead with the enterprise, and work was commenced Tuesday. There are 70 signers down for five dollars each and a number for smaller amounts.

The rink will be located on Third street one block west of Ramstad's livery barn. The inclosure will be 200x125 feet and is erected mainly with the idea of giving the school children a place for outdoor enjoyment during the winter months. These will be admitted free in the afternoon and parties in authority will be on hand to look after them. In the evening the rink will be open to everyone and an admission fee will be charged for the purpose of upkeep and maintenance. It will be necessary to have some sort of police surveilance, provided for the sweeping and flooding of the ice at regular intervals and the expense of general supervision.

The committee has not yet completed its labors and will continue its solicitations until the required sum has been obtained. It is made up as follows: John Bratrud, Fred Haug, Dr. C. R. Crandall, G. Huseby and J. C. Lutz.

BEST MONEY-MAKER ON THE ENTIRE SOO SYSTEM

Sixteen Miles Between Thief River Falls and Plummer Most Profitable Stretch.

This section has achieved another mark of excellence. According to Prof. T. A. Hoverstad, agricultural expert of the Soo railroad, the sixteen miles of road between Thief River Falls and Plummer is regarded at headquarters as 100 per cent perfect as a revenue producer. This means that the traffic over this particular piece of the Soo line is the standard of comparison when the revenue of any other part of the system is under consideration. Whenever new lines are projected the possible revenue to be derived is figured with the Thief River Falls-Plummer report as the unit of highest excellence.

TO BRIDGE RIVER AT HIGHLANDING

County Commissioners Ask State Highway Commission for Plans and Specifications.

ANOTHER PETITION IS OUT

Residents of Township of Kratka Also Ask Support in Their Efforts to Secure Bridge in Township 153, Range 41.

The board of county commissioners at their meeting last week passed a resolution requesting the Minnesota Highway commission to furnish plans and specifications for a bridge across the Red Lake river in Highlanding township. The motion was made by Commissioner Peterson, seconded by Commissioner McGinn, and unanimously passed.

The location of the proposed bridge will be as follows: Between section 28 and 29 of township 153 north of Range 40. In this motion was also included the stipulation that the plans of the commission be at once forwarded to the war department at Washington for approval.

Has Been Long Needed.

A bridge across the Red Lake river at or near Highlanding has long been needed in order to enable the people of the towns of Kratka, Highlanding, Mayfield and Deer Park to reach the county seat. An ordinary bridge would undoubtedly long since have spanned the river at this point were it not for the fact that the stream is down on the war department records as "navigable," requiring therefore that bridges be built with a 14-foot clearance. As there is in all likelihood no way of getting around this provision it is probable that the state commission will base its estimates on a structure of that kind.

Another Petition Out.

H. O. Holdahl of the township of Kratka, was in the city the first of the week seeking the sanction of the Commercial club in the circulation of a petition across the Red Lake river between sections 20 and 21 in township 153. The people of that neighborhood want a bridge and hope to secure aid from businessmen, farmers, the township and the county in getting it. This bridge would be located six miles straight south of Mavie and the same distance west of the proposed Highlanding bridge referred to above. Mr. Hofdal said that there would be a considerable sum raised among the farmers of the neighborhood for such a bridge and that he had hopes of interesting the merchants of the city in the project. The town of Kratka may also be expected to lend some aid to the undertaking. When all the money it is possible to secure through these sources has been guaranteed the county will be asked for the balance necessary.

Are Encouraged Here.

Both these bridge projects meet with the hearty approval of the people of Thief River Falls. For a long time it has been realized that communication with the southeast has been greatly hampered because of the impossibility of crossing the river without making a long detour. Both the proposed bridges are needed and would be improvements of the highest value to the entire county, but it is doubtful if more than that at Highlanding will be undertaken this year. That the Kratka township bridge will also have to be built in the near future is likely, however. With the government bridge contemplated at the outlet this will provide three crossings on the upper river—which is certainly none too many.

BUSY COLLECTING HISTORICAL DATA

Upper Grade High School Students Engage in Occupation of Much Practical Value.

Students representing the Thief River Falls high school have started out on a systematic search for historical facts pertaining to the development of every industry and enterprise in Pennington county. Every feature connected with the establishment and development of the different pursuits now interesting the people will be looked up and an authentic record made of the details. As a beginning the reporters will interview 40 of the oldest settlers with a view to securing the personal accounts of those who were on the ground and personally identified with the incidents of which a record is sought. All old records available will be diligently studied in order that nothing of value may escape. It is an ambitious undertaking and, if as thorough as the projectors hope to make it, will be of great value.

The primary object of the work will be to furnish a subject of study for the upper grade pupils of the high school, but the result of the investigations made will in themselves prove of much interest.

G. A. Aubol, of Crookston, was a visitor here Monday on business.

CROWDS COMING TO SEE BIG PLAY

NEED ORIENTAL TRAPPINGS

Yellow Silk Bedspread and Hindoo Bowl Are Among Accessories, Now Most Urgently Needed For Production.

In case you happen to have as an heirloom or a wedding present a Chinese silk bedspread or a yellow Hindoo bowl you can get a reserved seat up in front when the Commercial club presents "My Friend From India" at the Auditorium on Friday night. And a free admission may prove of more value than you think at present. If the indications are any criterion the house will be sold out long before the curtain goes up, and the "standing room only" sign is being dug out of the store-room by the janitor. It will probably be needed.

The bedspread and bowl are absolutely necessary to the successful presentation of this comedy. None of the members of the cast happen to have articles of this description and the time is too short to permit of sending to China and India for them. Therefore the request is made that anyone having either one or the other to loan out will notify the management at once. The properties will be guaranteed against damage.

Is Well Advertised.

Secretary Scott Laird, who is the publicity man in charge of the advertising, has this week received assurances that there will be a crowd of people in from nearby towns to witness the performance. Notices of the event have been sent to Grygla, Hazel, Highlanding, Middle River, Goodridge, Holt, Newfolden, St. Hilaire, Plummer, Brooks, Viking and Rosewood, all of which places are expected to send their quota of pleasure lovers to witness this great scenic production.

Dress Rehearsal Tonight.

The costumes for the piece arrived this morning and a dress rehearsal will be put on tonight. The performers have their lines down perfectly and it only needs that they become accustomed to the stage properties in order to be declared perfect. Mrs. C. A. Pitkin, under whose guidance the rehearsing has gone forward, is well pleased with the manner in which her pupils have taken to the work and has no hesitancy in saying that she believes this will be the most successful local talent play ever attempted here.

Tickets Going Fast.

Secretary Laird of the Commercial club has found it necessary to have repeat orders of tickets printed. They are selling fast and those having them should lose no time in securing their reservations at Lambert's drug store.

A Community Event.

This commercial club play is as much a community event as are market days and celebrations. Everyone should be interested in seeing that it is a success. The way to do this is by being present at the performance.

ROAD MAINTENANCE COSTS $4,300 IN 1916

County Highways Kept in Good Condition Throughout Year at Small Expenditure.

It cost the county of Pennington a total of $4,297.33 for the upkeep and maintenance of roads during the year of 1916, according to the report submitted to the board of county commissioners by Highway Engineer W. E. Monks. The distance over which this work was done totalled 104 miles, and the different items of expense are as follows:

Dragging	$ 352.96
Cutting weeds	345.13
Repairing surface	347.75
Cleaning ditches	230.50
Repairing washouts	162.20
Repairing culverts	60.53
General Maintenance	398.33
Total	$4,297.89

This maintenance work was divided into five sections of 12 miles, each district being in charge of a patrolman who was paid $115 per month. One man furnished three teams and had these ready for service whenever and whereever wanted. The system proved a success in every way, the roads being kept in better shape than at any previous time in the history of the county. This was the first season during which this scheme was followed, and with the experience gained it should be even more successful another year. The working season included the period from May 15 to Nov. 15.

Mr. Monks devoted considerable time to watching the working of the new idea and is satisfied that it is the only sensible way of maintaining roads. The necessary work is done at the time needed and the men and teams are on hand when wanted. Repair work is thus taken care of before the highways have had time to be ruined by heavy traffic after rains. It is the system of road maintenance now being generally followed by all Minnesota counties.

Commence Cement Work

The forms for the concrete work on the Kretszchmar-Schrieter dam are about completed and the actual work of putting in the mixture will begin Friday. Fifteen carloads of sand and gravel have already been used in putting in the floor of the dam, the apron and the flume floor. Superintendent John Hedlund states that the only thing he now fears is a shortage of cars that will delay the arrival of material. All gravel for the work is shipped in and there has already been considerable trouble in securing enough to keep the crews going.

Cold weather will not stop the work as a system of steam heating has been devised to keep the cement from freezing. Mr. Hedlund states that he considers his troubles about over and that the work from now on will progress smoothly and rapidly. The present coffer dam will be removed as soon as the concrete structure is finished in order to have it out of the way in case of an early or unexpected breaking up of the ice in the river.

PROPOSAL BY GERMANY MAY MEAN PEACE

Germany has sent what amounts to an invitation to the Entente powers, neutrals acting as messengers, suggesting that all warring nations join in a parley to discuss the possible basis of peace.

One of the stipulations made by the Central powers is that all territory conquered, including German colonies, be reestablished in the status they occupied before the war broke out. Under the proposed plan, as it is understood in this country, the sovereignity of Belgium would be recognized and an independent Polish kingdom established.

That the United States will play an important part in case negotitations are begun is certain.

WOMAN WANTS JOB AS RURAL CARRIER

Mrs. Clara Huff of St. Hilaire, is Informed That Law Does Not Permit Appointment.

Congressman Steenerson, according to dispatches appearing recently under authority of the United Press, has introduced a bill in congress which will permit women being appointed as rural mail carriers. The immediate reason for this step on the part of Mr. Steenerson is that Mrs. Clara Huff of St. Hilaire, who made application for the position made vacant by the death of her husband, was turned down because the regulations of the department prohibitied a woman from holding the position. The patrons along the route to be served, petitioned for her appointment and there was no doubt as to her being fully able to handle the work, but the department ruling was in the way. Should Mr. Steenerson's bill become a law it will mean that women will be eligible to these positions by passing the same competitive examinations as do the men.

Sale a Success.

The Catholic ladies bazaar held at the church last week was a decided success in every way. The three suppers netted the ladies a sum in the neighborhood of $247, while the entire proceeds including the dinners and sale of fancy work amounted to $750.

WANT BETTER HIGHWAY FROM BROOKS NORTH

Plummer Commercial Club Wants Assistance of Pennington County in the Matter.

A committee representing the Thief River Falls Commercial club yesterday left for Plummer, where a meeting for the purpose of urging upon the commissioners of Pennington and Red Lake counties the necessity for providing an improved highway between Brooks and this city. Brooks is on the line of the Soo railroad about 35 miles south of Thief River Falls and is in the middle of the trading area of our merchants. Plummer would be directly in the line of travel and would thus undoubtedly benefit by the construction of the road, but the people there are more interested in the proposition because it would insure them a first class highway to this city.

In his letter to Secretary Laird, the secretary of the Plummer club, F. R. Davies, states that the aid of the local club is very much desired and he has been assured that it will be forthcoming.

The club at Plummer has just completed its organization and Mr. Davies also wanted a copy of the by-laws under which the local club is operating to use as a guide in making up a set for his city.

SPECIAL SCHOOL ELECTION DEC. 19

Proposition to Raise $45,000 by Bond Issue Will be Decided by Voters Next Tuesday.

PRESENT CONDITIONS BAD

Large Sum in State Aid Yearly Jeopardized—Rentals Now Paid for Additional Room Would Meet Interest Charge.

Next Tuesday the people of School District No. 18, which is practically the city of Thief River Falls, will decide whether or not they will raise $45,000 by an issue of bonds for the purpose of providing another school building, or will risk the loss of all moneys received from the state through their failure to ratify the loan.

There Is No Alternative.

Makeshifts will no longer answer. The school board has on file in the office of the clerk letters from the state educational authorities showing that dilatory tactics will no longer be tolerated. The intimation is plain that if the people of the district indicate by a defeat of this proposed issue of bonds that they do not wish to remedy the condition now existing the annual aid will be withdrawn from the district. This means a loss of revenue to the schools of nearly $16,000.

Have Been Very Lenient.

The heads of the state's school department have been very lenient in this matter. Fully realizing the difficulties confronting the local board the demand for immediate improvement has not been insistent. That matters must at once be remedied, is, however, now made plain.

No Additional Expense

Every man, woman and child in the district realizes that something must be done. This being the case, it is hard to see how anyone can consistently vote against the bond issue. There are a few, as usual, who still seem to entertain some hope that another way will be found out of the difficulty. If there is any other way the board will be very glad to learn of it, as the members do not wish to build at this time and are simply doing so beacuse it is a case of the most positive necessity.

A few—a very few—citizens oppose this bond issue because of the effect it will have on the tax rate. These are not well informed as to the situation. The rent paid for the extra room now being utilized for school purposes outside of the buildings regularly erected for that purpose would pay the entire interest charge on the bonds. Consequently the present unsatisfactory condition offers no argument for its continuation because of a lower cost.

Bond Payments No Higher.

In providing for this issue the bond payments have been distributed so that the burden will be no greater in any one year than at present. The time for the payment of the principal will have to be extended, but this is already provided for in the laws of the state and will present no difficulties. At maturity the issue will simply have to be refunded and re-distributed in order to gain an extension of the time of final repayment. This can be done by simple resolution of the school board and does not even require that an election be held in order to authorize such action.

Women Will Vote.

There is no indication of any serious opposition to the authorizing of this loan. But this fact should not have the effect of keeping those in favor of it at home. However few there may be who think there may be some other way out of the difficulty, every one of them is sure to express his opinion at the polls. In order to be safe, therefore, everyone having the welfare of the school system of the city at heart should be on hand to vote for the proposition. Women are permittedto vote at this election and the indications are that a large number of them will avail themselves of this right. They realize even more fully than do the men that something must be done to provide more room in our schools and their votes can be counted on as being practically unanimous in favor of the issue.

Low Interest Rate.

The money can be borrowed from the state of Minnesota at a low rate of interest. The proposed building, with the necessary equipment, may not require the expenditure of the entire sum but it is asked for as a margin of safety. Should a smaller amount be asked for and be found insufficient it would mean delay and additional expense in providing for the deficiency in some other manner. It would not be the first time such a thing has happened right in this community and experience has shown that it is a contingency to be avoided.

Observing "Quarant Ore."

The period known as "Quarant Ore" or "The Forty Hours Devotion," is being observed this week at the Catholic church. The services began on Wednesday morning at 5:30 o'clock and continues until after mass tomorrow morning at 9:30. There are three visiting priests, and mass is held three times daily.

Make It Unanimous.

The Times does not believe there is any question but that the proposition to issue the bonds of District No. 18 in the sum of $45,000 for the purpose of erecting another school building will carry. In fact, we thoroughly agree with the member of the school board who said that there should not be a single vote cast in opposition to the issue. There will be a few of course, as there are always those who think that some other way can be found out of a difficulty, even when the only course open is as plain as in this case.

The people of Thief River Falls have a right to be proud of their schools. These are among the best in the state in spite of the fact that during the past year or two pupils and teachers have been prevented from getting the best results because of lack of room. The city ranks with such well-known municipalities as Stillwater, Mankato, Fergus Falls, and Albert Lea and has a larger enrollment than Crookston, Bemidji or Alexandria. There are more pupils in the high school of this city than in Virginia with its twelve to fifteen thousand population and more than in St. Cloud, regarded as one of the really sizable cities of central Minnesota. The city of Duluth with its 100,000 population has only five times as many pupils attending the high school as there are here.

The rapid growth of the city has kept the school district busy providing room for the children. So far from being something to be deplored, this should be cause for congratulation. It proves that the city is growing by families rather than by individuals. The fact that men come here looking for school room for their children is proof that they intend to stay here, in which case they will bear their share of the expense of school maintenance. One of the surest ways of keeping desirable citizens away would be to let the impression get abroad that the school facilities are insufficient.

The disrict already owns the site for the proposed building. The location is ideal and directly in the line of greatest probable growth. The money may be secured from the state at a low interest rate. The members of the school board can be depended on to see that the best material and workmanship procurable goes into the new building. Nothing is to be gained by delaying this matter, while the need for its being immediately undertaken is imperative.

Vote "yes" on this question next Tuesday.

A Lack of Appreciation.

The disappointlingly small crowd which greeted the Minnesota State band at the first winter concert on Sunday afternoon is not particularly flattering to the musical organization. In fact, it amounted almost to an indication of severe disapproval.

A noticeable fact this fall and winter has been the disinclination of the people of the city to patronize anything worth while, as witness the small attendance at the excellent lyceum entertainments. It was to be hoped, however, that this lethargy would not extend to a home institution like the band, and that the winter concerts would command the same liberal patronage as heretofore.

Had Sunday been an ideal outdoor day there might be some excuse for the failure to come to the Auditorium. But it was not. Snow covered all the ice available for skating and the roads were in no shape for autoing. People simply stayed home.

It is safe to say that if some buffon were performing in a two-reeler the house would have been filled with people highly enthused and instructed. They would have no personal interest in the buffon and would in all liklihood refuse to recognize him if they lived in his neighborhood. They cannot, however, find time to listen to their own band render a bright, enlivening march, written by their own band leader.

The band is not giving these concerts for the money there is in it. The members simply ask permission to prove that the small amounts expended for the upkeep of the organization are not wasted. The people, however, do not apparently care enough about the matter to find out.

Another popular concert will be given about the same date next month, and it is hoped the attendance will be larger.

It Gets Results.

It is just barely possible that Clearwater county would have received that $10,000 federal aid for road work even if the neighboring counties had not made it their business to help the matter along, but the chances are that this would have been the result only after long and tedious comparisons. When the people of Pennington, Red Lake and Beltrami counties found that this particular ten thousand dollars would serve the entire section best by being expended on one piece of road in the neighboring county, there was no longer a question about it.

The usual proceedure would have been for all these counties to lay claim to the money without stopping to find out whether or not they stood any show of getting it. If they themselves could not have secured it, they could at least in this way have prevented their neighbor from getting he benefit from the appropriation.

But this was different. The road situation was carefully looked over and the stretch between Bagley and Clearbrook on the Jefferson highway was found to be in particularly bad shape. It was also known that the improvement of this road would be a hardship on the people of Clearwater county at this time. Beltrami, Pennington and Red Lake counties all had roads needing improvement, but none were quite in as bad shape as this piece within the borders of Clearwater. Influential men in the other three counties therefore threw their weight into the balance and did everything in their power to make those in charge of the distribution understand that all of northwestern Minnesota was particularly interested in seeing that Clearwater county was awarded enough of the appropriation to make the needed improvement. And there was nothing to it. The road will be fixed and a bad link in the "through highway" will be made not only passable, but converted into as fine a piece of road as there is on the entire pike.

The same kind of team work might help in some other localities.

Col. Frank A. Day of the Fairmont Sentinel, who has some mighty sound ideas except where politics is concerned, believes that the state of Minnesota could help in the curbing of one of the most rapacious trusts in the country by establishing a paper-making plant at the state prison. In advocating his proposition Col. Day calls attention to the fact that the state owns millions of acres of pulp timber and that controls the streams available for water power. The paper manufacturers claim, of course, that the idea is not feasible, but the same thing was said when the twine and farm machinery plants were put in. If something is not done to relieve the situation pretty soon about half the publishers of the state will be doing something that will get them a job at the prison anyway, and as all of them cannot possibly be put on the staff of the Mirror they might be put to work making paper for those who manage to pay the prices asked without resorting to crime. It may not always be best to advocate a measure having for its purpose the bringing of prison-made products into competition with those of free men, but when a price of $7 per hundred pounds is demanded for a commodity costing the maker about $1.65, and by him is sold practically direct, the consumer is justified in going to extremes in order to protect himself. Of all the price advances of the past two years that in the case of common print paper is certainly the most arbitrary and inexcusable.

The women of Pittsburgh last week again proved that the members of the sex are unable to grasp the first principles of business. There was a corner on turkeys in the city, the speculators holding the stock at 35 cents per pound. If a similar sitution had confronted the men folks they would first have cussed the administration and blamed the war, after which resolutions would have been passed requesting congress to reduce the duty on turkey feed in order that the cost might in this manner be brought to a lower level. The women did nothing of the kind. They simply refused to buy the turkeys, with the result that the hold-up men were forced to back up. Turkeys came down to eighteen cents, and the women laughed, but did not buy. Finallly the speculators, in order to save anything at all out of the wreck, threw the stock on the market regardless, and it was bought up at five cents a pound. There is grave danger that a similar stunt may be tried where other communities are concerned, in which case those cherished American institutions known as the Combine and the Corner may find it necessary to have some laws enacted for their protection.

Secretary Scott Laird of the Commercial club has placed himself on record as absolutely refusing to sanction worthless advertising schemes, and to prove that he is in earnest he has begun at home. The annual club play is to be given at the Auditorium this evening, and the advisability of an advertising program was considered. Mr. Laird set himself squarely against the proposition, claiming that advertising of a character usually found in theatre programs was absolutely valueless and that the merchants should not be asked to make a contribution under any such guise. He further added that printing advertisements is the legitimate function of newspapers and that the club has no more right to enter into competition with these enterprises than it has to take up the selling of groceries or dry goods. The entire printing fraternity, as well as the advertising business man, will be under a deep obligation to Mr. Laird if his attitude shall gain general recognition and be followed by home-boosting organizations everywhere.

A copy of the first issue of the Northwest Monthly, issued at the Northwest School of Agriculture, Crookston, has been sent out to people interested in the work of that institution. In his declaration of intentions Supt. C. G. Selvig says: "The Northwest Monthly will aim to give information regarding the plans and work of the various organizations and institutions which are actively promoting these interests in this part of the state. It will be published by he Northwest School of Agriculture of the University of Minnesota, Crookston." The publication contains a full description of the courses offered at the college, the dates and purposes of important agricultural meetings in this section during the month, advice to students and alumni, and other matter of much value. The little paper should prove helpful in stimulating interest in the excellent work being done by the Crookston school.

In the year 1901 there were four small creameries in what is now Red Lake and Pennington counties, the total number of patrons being 129. The amount paid to the farmers of the two counties fourteen years ago was so small that it was not tabulated in the reports. In the year 1915 Pennington county alone is credited with four creameries, having 559 patrons, these receiving a total of $149,568.20 for the product of their cows. Red Lake county did not keep up with this record, but has a much greater amount to its credit than did the two counties combined in 1901, the total being 389 patrons to whom a total of $66,612.35 was paid. Pennington, although the newest and one of the smallest counties in the Northwestern group, is only topped by Polk, Norman and Ottertail in the value of its dairy products.

Bemidji wants to join the Northern league, and may be given an opportunity to see just how far it can come from supporting a base ball team. One thing is certain, however. Should Bemidji secure a Northern franchise, the city will have the pennant winners. The team may never play a game, or may lose all the games played, but that will make no difference. Bemidji will begin claiming the championship about the first of August and will continue to claim it, no matter who wins. The sports over in that energetic burg never allow little things like facts in get in the way of their ambitions. Baseball pennants ought to be as easy as football championships when this proceedure is followed consistently.

1917 ANNUAL WILL BE THE "MOCASSIN"

Rousing meeting Held at Lincoln High Assembly Room on Tuesday Last Week.

The publishing of a 1917 high school annual was the cause of the most enthusiastic mass meetings ever held at Lincoln high school on Tuesday of last week. This year's book will be the "Mocassin."

The annual will be published by the Senior class and will contain departments for the three lower classes and also the Junior high school. At the meeting several rousing speeches were made in favor of the annual. The real necessity of such a book was pointed out by the speakers and it is the aim of the staff to produce an annual that will be a credit to the institution. Sample annuals from several schools are in the hands of the staff and in every case co-operation between the students and the citizens is bespoken. The character of the school as well as the character of the city is often represented in the issuing of an annual. Bearing this in mind the staff is working with united efforts together with the student body to make the '17 book a success. It is hoped that the citizens will also aid these in charge in order that another victory may be added to the string for Lincoln high.

The annual will be ready for press shortly after Christmas, thus insuring delivery to students and others, two or three months before the close of school. This is the plan of the staff to date.

Advisors of the different classes gave brief speeches beaming with optimism and containing helpful ideas. Miss Synneva Grindeland, principal, and Supt. J. H. Hay, assured the school of their co-operation.

This year's annual will be known as the "Mocassin." A vote was taken among high school students and this proved to be the most popular among a score of others titles.

The following is the annual staff:

SOO FLYER HITS AUTO; FOUR DIE

Train Going 25 Miles an Hour Crashes Into Machine on Crossing.

GIRL CARRIED ON PILOT

Girl Taken Off by Fireman Shetler of This City—Bodies of Four Literally Cut Into Pieces.

Four persons were killed outright and one girl was seriously injured Sunday evening at 11:30 at Vergas, when Soo flyer No. 109 hit an auto on the railroad crossing just north of the depot. A little baby 4 months old escaped without a scratch.

The Dead:

ALFRED KOPLIN AND WIFE; bodies badly mutilated.

MISS PHILLIPINA KOPLIN, sister of Alfred Koplin.

MISS A. E. DITTINGER, sister of Mrs. Koplin.

The Injured:

Miss Frances Koplin, age 13 or 14; broken leg and arm, badly bruised, but not fatally hurt.

The tragedy of the party came after they had attended a show at Vergas and were enroute to their home at Frazee. The flyer had come around the bend and was on a straight stretch of track. The crossing is north of the depot and the train can be easily seen for a long distance.

It was a rather chilly night and the entire party was apparently bundled up and were riding in an enclosed car, making it difficult to hear the onrushing passenger train.

Feels Jar.

The train was nearing the station and was running at a low rate of speed, as the mail is taken off a crane at Vergas. Fireman Shetler had just thrown two shovelfuls of coal into the engine when he felt a slight jar. Shetler yelled to the engineer: "We've struck something. You had better give it to her." The engineer put on the brakes immediately but it was impossible to stop the train before they had gone for at least fifteen car lengths. Shetler climbed into his side of the cab and peered out through the window, seeing a shawl or some object waving from the pilot. When the train had stopped, the engineer and Fireman Shetler went to the pilot. Shetler was first on the scene. A young girl about sixteen years old had her foot wedged in under the drawbar and when Mr. Shetler arrived she grasped him with a death grip. At that time the young baby rolled out from her lap. How she managed to hold it all that time and how the baby came through without a scratch is a mystery.

The girl was taken to the hospital at Detroit, where she is getting along nicely. The baby on being put into the baggage car went to sleep after the terrible accident.

Bell Was Ringing.

That the engineer carried out his duties to the dot is evident, as he blew the whistle for the crossing and for the mail also. The bell was ringing and passengers are willing to testify to this. The accident happened on the fireman's side. The accident is laid to two facts. Either that the auto attempted to cross the rack before the train crossed and was caught, or that the occupants failed entirely to see the train due, to riding in an enclosed car and all wrapped up.

Dead Strewn Along Track.

After the accident trainmen worked for an hour picking up parts of the dead people's bodies. It was difficult to identify the dead as their bodies were badly mutilated.

POSTAGE INCREASE ON MAIL ORDER CATALOGS

Congressman Steenerson Asks That These be Denied Parcel Post Privileges.

An amendment taking catalogues from the class of printed matter that may ben sent by parcel post and requiring them to pay the third class rate has been placed in the postoffice appropriation bill by the house committee on postoffices at the instance of Representative Halvor Steenerson, the leading Republican member of the committee.

Mr. Steenerson declined to discuss the amendment and its purpose, but it is aimed particularly at mail order houses.

The committee also adopted the zone system for the distribution of newspapers and periodicals which will have the effect of raising rates on the papers hauled more than 30 miles.

Mr. Steenerson has also introduced a bill permitting the importation of free seed wheat under certain conditions.

DAIRY MEETING BEST YET HELD

This is Unanimous Opinion of Delegates to Thirteenth Annual Convention Held Here

OLD OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

Attendance Better Than a Year Ago in Spite of Fact That Similar Meetings Were Being Held at Other Nearby Points

The Red River Valley Dairymen's association closed the 13th annual convention of the organization here last Thursday after the most successful meeting in its history.

In spite of the fact that a number of things conspired to keep down the attendance, a larger number of dairymen and buttermakers were present than at any previous meeting. Those holding membership cards in the association totalled 245, of which 197 were dairymen and 48 buttermakers. The number of dairymen at last year's meeting, held at Fergus Falls, was 128, while the number of buttermakers was also considerably less than at the Thief River Falls gathering.

The weather conspired somewhat to keep down the attendance and conflicting attractions undoubtedly kept many away who would otherwise have been present. For instance, there was a meeting of the state dairymen of Wisconsin being held at the same time. While this convention did not perhaps attract any of the delegates from the Thief River Falls gathering, a number of speakers who had earlier signified their intention of being here were prevented from coming. The same fact holds good in the case of the National Live stock show, which was being held at Chicago. The buttermakers of South Dakota were also in convention, and the Farmer's Equity association was holding a meeting in Minneapolis. It will be seen, therefore, that the local attraction had some very effective competition.

Old Officers Re-Elected.

At the business meeting of the association held on Thursday afternoon all the former officers were re-elected, as follows: President, C. G. Selvig, Crookston; first vice-president, L. Jensen, Clearbrook; second vice president, A. B. Stensgaard, McIntosh; secretary, L. J. Houske, Halstad; treasurer, C. M. Davidson, Climax;

Everyone Enthusiastic.

The one particular oustanding feature of the 1916 meeting was the unanimity with which those present declared that never had they known of such rapid strides to be made throughout an entire section in any industry as that experienced by dairying in Northwestern Minnesota during the past few years. That this is indisputable is evidenced not only by the increased output in dairy products and the steady improvement in the quality of dairy herds, but is further indicated by the greater interest shown in the association's meetings from year to year. Men who have followed the history of dairying in this country said without reservation that the attendance of actual dairy farmers at this meeting was the largest they had seen. So impressed were they with the interest shown and progress made that they predicted that at no distant day this section would be nationally recognized as the greatest of all butter producing sections of what is acknowledged as the greatest butter state in the Union.

Pleases President Selvig.

Perhaps to no man is the present outlook more pleasing than to President C. G. Selvig. As superintendent of the Northwest Agricultural Experiment station at Crookston, he has steadily maintained that the future prosperity and fertility of this region depended upon the intelligent development of the live stock industry. He has been untiring in his efforts to bring this fact to the attention of the country and it is largely due to his persistent and excellent work that such remarkable progress has been made. Mr. Selvig presided at all the meetings here and was one of the authorities always in demand when visitors wished to be informed on any subject pertaining to the progress of cattle raising or dairying in the section.

Mr. Houske's Trying Job.

Secretary L. J. Houske found his work cut out for him. Upon him devolved the job of getting up the program, securing the speakers, keeping track of all awards and contest winners, placing and classifying the butter exhibits and about a thousand such other little matters. He was as-

Keep Stock Up and Prices Down

IT IS NO SNAP in these days of unsettled marketing conditions to keep a stock of groceries up to the standard. Particularly is this true when that standard is as high as that set by us.

We are keeping prices as stable as possible, preferring to take a loss rather than shift values every day or two in order to keep exactly abreast of the market quotations.

Our motto of "Quality and Service" still holds good. This means that if you cannot find what you want at this store it cannot be had anywhere.

SCHOOL NOTES

Mis Chapman, formerly principal of the Washington and now occupying a similar position at Grand Rapids, spent the Thanksgiving holidays renewing former local friendships in this city.

Chickenpox has entered the lists in competititon with mumps. and between the two school children have their share of the ills to which humanity is heir.

For laboratory purposes in English, as well as to secure and compile the early history of various features of the development of this city, the two upper classes in high school will during this month collect the necessary information by research and interview.

George Gunderson, teacher in the associated Hamer school east of the city, accompanied his larger girl pupils last Friday to the cooking class in high school. The previous day his big boys visited the Woolson farm and made reports thereon. These actions are indicative of the progressive and practical nature of the instruction in Mr. Gunderson's school.

The manual training department has just completed the construction of twelve mechanical drawing tables which for convenience, stability and appearance are superior to the $15 tables offered for sale by the school furniture companies.

Much unnecessary ado is being made by the Bemidji newspapers because the local football team would not play the team from the neighboring city. The school authorities here refused to permit the boys to play after the ground froze up. Football is dangerous at best and it was considered wise not to invite injury by playing on frozen ground following the close of the seson.

One hundred and fifty-seven high schools and twenty-five graded schools will maintain state aided agricultural departments this year. Eleven new agricultural departments have been added and five of the old ones in small towns have been discontinued.

School closes on Friday, December 22nd. Appropriate programs for the season, to which visitors are invited, will be presented in all grades below the seventh. Work resumes Monday, Jan. 8th.

The formal opening of the basket ball season took place last Saturday at Warren, where the locals won by a score of 48 to 26. The girls' team was defeated by the Warren girls on the same date by a 14 to 4 score.

The work of the first semester will close on Jan. 9th. At that time new half year classes will be organized and the program arranged.

The North Star school recently voted to associate with the Thief River district for industrial purposes. This action will assure the rural school an annual gift of $50 from the state and free tuition in the local school and at no expense whatever. The state grants the central school annual aid of $200 for carrying on the industrial work in each associated school.

GOOD PRICE PAID FOR SAMPLE BUTTER

Philadelphia Concern Offers 35½ Cents For Supply at Dairy Convention.

H. T. Sondergaard, representing Geo. M. Baer & Co., of Philadelphia, was the successful bidder for the butter sent here for exhibition at the dairymen's convention last week. There were a total of 50 tubs of the product, each weighing 20 pounds. The bidding was started at 33 cents, this being increased until 35½ cents was reached, when the other bidders dropped out.

Mr. Sondergaard was present throughout the meeting and took an active part in the proceedings. He is the northwestern manager for the Baer concern and takes a lively interest in everything pertaining to dairy development.

GOVERNMENT WILL CONSTRUCT DITCH

Drainage Project, If Carried Out, Will Prove of Great Benefit to Star Township Farmers.

The problem of draining the lands along the eastern boundary of Star township will probably be solved by the building of a ditch by the government. It was at first proposed that Pennington county and the Indian department jointly enter upon this project as it would be of even greater benefit to Red Lake reservation lands than to those of Star township, but chairman Peter Wold of the board of county commissioners, this week received notice from Walter F. Dickens, agent at the reservation, calling attention to the fact that a ditch running about one mile east of the location of that proposed as a joint project was already in the hands of the department and that work would be begun soon. Concerning this project Mr. Dickens says:

"You are advised that there is a proposed ditch contemplated under a drainage project of the Red Lake Indian reservation. This ditch begins at the town line between Sections 5 and 6, Township 155, running south to the river, a distance of approximately eight miles. Would such a ditch relieve the conditions in your neighborhood? If so it would seem your relief would depend upon the appropriation for our drainage plan, which we hope to secure this year."

The Pennington county officers are very much pleased to learn of the government's action in this matter as it will do away with the necessty of a ditch on the county line, the building of which would have been a severe burden on the taxpayers of that section.

ANNUAL CROP SHOW OF THE VALLEY COUNTIES

Many Circumstances Make This Year's Event Most Important of Any Thus Far Held.

The best of everything that grows in the Red River valley—farm crops, fruits, livestock and poultry—will be shown at the annual farm crop show of the Minnesota Red River Valley Development association Feb. 5 to 9 and in conjunction with he show will be a farmer's short course.

Many parts of Minnesota are looking to these counties to furnish seed for the 1917 crop and the word has been sent out that the district has good seed. An especially good potato crop, a large part of which was held in warehouses, will furnish a supply for many other sections. The show will be he sixth that the association has given.

The association comprises the following counties: Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Norman, Mahnomen, Clay and Becker. The show has grown to such proportions in the six years that the Minnesota agricultural school in Crookston is too small to house it and it will be staged in the national guard armory.

GOODRIDGE MEETING IN JANUARY IS DECISION

Originally Called For Dec. 16, But Is Put Off Because of Conflicting Attractions.

The meeting of farmers of the eastern part of Pennington county which was advertised to be held at Goodridge on Dec. 16, has been postponed until sometime in January. It was discovered that a series of state institute meetings were to be held in various communities from Oklee northward at about the time set for the Pennington county meeting and it was thought advisable to drop the matter for the present.

By putting this meeting off until a later date it will be possible to secure one or more of the speakers who are at present engaged in institute work to deliver an address, and this will be the aim of the committee in charge. Prof. J. H. Hay, Peter Engelstad and Harry Woolson are among the live stock enthusiasts from the neighborhood of Thief River Falls who will be present at the meeting.

HIGHWAY SIGNS ARE READY FOR DISTRIBUTION

A sample of the heavy sheet iron signs to be used in designating the route of the Jefferson highway have been recently received here. The indicators are 10x30 inches in size, heavily enameled in three colors. At one end is placed an embossed reproduction of a palm tree, a pine occupying the opposite end. Parties well versed in woodcraft claim that the pine tree represented is a spruce, but a little thing like that will not matter. Between the two trees appears the legend: "Palm-Pine. New Orleans-Winnipeg."

It is understood that these signs will cost the county association nothing, the expense of their manufacture being borne by the national organization. Every county will, however, look after the putting up of the signs within its territory.

Dance A Success.

The dance given at the Masonic Temple last Saturday evening by the Alumnii of the Thief River Falls high school in honor of the 1916 football team, champions of Northwestern Minnesota, was a success.

There was a fairly good attendance, but a larger crowd was expected by the Alumni officers. A representative of the first graduating class in 1904 was present in the person of Miss Emma Backe, librarian, and there were members of the last graduating class in 1916 also. Many regrets were received by Harry Prichard, Alumni president, from graduates, who have drifted far away in their battle with life. Dancing started at nine o'clock p. m. and continued until 12 when a light lunch was served by the Alumni girls, Misses Mary Prichard and Gena Granum having charge of this end.

Following the lunch the gathering was called to order and the 1917 captain was chosen. The ballot resulted in John Steen being elected. Short speeches were made by Messrs. W. W. Prichard, Jr., Walter Smith, John Brmund and Captain Holzknecht in response to the alumni presidient's call. Each speaker were former grid men and they were loud in their praise of the 1916 champion team. Dancing was resumed after this session and the entertainment ceased at 12:30 a. m.

Music was furnished by Lowry's three piece orchestra.

sisted in every possible way by Secretary Scott Laird and a committee appointed for the purpose by the Commercial club, but even at that he was a very busy enthusiast during the entire two days. Mr. Houske is a painstaking and accomodating official and the fact that he was again unanimously chosen for the position of secretary proves that the members of the association realize the fact.

What Visitors Thought

H. H. Kildee, chief of the division of dairy husbandry, Minnesota college of agriculture, who delivered an instructive address on "The Value of the Pure Bred Dairy Sire," said that he had never attended a convention at which he had a better time. In common with all other visitors who have not been directly identified with the growth of dairying in this section, he was astonished at the progress made and the interest shown. Mr. Kildee stated positively that he had never visited a section in which the farmers, at such an early stage of the live stock industry's development, had shown such enthutsiasm and interest.

State Secretary's Views.

Christ Heen of Osakis, secretary of the State Dairymen's association, who was an interested visitor at the convention, said that the Northwestern part of the state was entitled to more recognition because of its dairy development that had thus far been accorded. He suggested that an effort be made to secure the state meeting for Thief River Falls next year and intimated that such move would receive his enthusiastic support. Mr. Heen also said that the convention held in this city was in many respects of greater value and of more interest than that in which the entire state is interested. Four thousand dollars is allowed by the state as prizes and awards at the big convention, and it is worth making a try for. Mr. Heen was assured that the Commercial club would act on his suggestion at the proper time.

Irving Quist, engineer on Marshall county ditch No. 28, attended the letting of bids for the work to be done on the above ditch at Warren last Friday. The Northwestern Drainage company was successful in getting the contract for the excavating at 13.2c per yard. Otto Lee received the contract for leveling grades at $85 per mile. Clearing right-of-way, John Olberg, $475. Culverts, North Dakota Metal Culvert company; bridges, Minneapolis Bridge company. Others who attended the sale from Thief River Falls were Messrs. Frank Weiland, L. E. Gesell, F. Blake and Isak Helseth.

Among the particularly excellent holiday displays to be seen about town is that of the Sapero store. This exclusive women's emporium not only has all the latest requisites for the season, but the store itself is fairly alive with the holiday spirit. Mr. Sapero bought the goods for this season long before the present shortage became acute and has had but little trouble in getting his orders filled. The articles on display are of a nature particularly dainty and appropriate and an inspection is worth anyone's while if only for the purpose of finding out just what class of goods an up-to-date merchant finds it necessary to carry in order to meet all demands in Thief River Falls.

BRIEF SKETCH OF ROSEWOOD VILLAGE

The birth of Rosewood, a village in Marshall county nine miles northwest of Thief River Falls, in common with that of many other villages in this section, is traced back to the time the Soo Wheatline traversed this section of the state in the year 1905. A postoffice and a store had been conducted at a point about half a mile south of the present site of Rosewood prior to the coming of the railroad, and the place bore the name "Strip." The mail was received three times a week from Thief River Falls and was carried in a wagon with horses as the motive power. But the advent of the railroad terminated the old stage coach days and since then the village has enjoyed a daily mail, passenger and freight service.

In the spring of the following year, 1906, two Minneapolis men, Oscar and Arvid Carlson, established the first general store in Rosewood, and called it, "The Strip Mercantile Co." A few years later Oscar Carlson sold his interest in the business to his partner, who conducted it successfuly until 1909. In that year Mr. Carlson sold the store to Herbert Carlson and J. W. Sagmoen, who have since conducted the business under the firm name of Carlson & Sagmoen. From a very modest beginning one of the best small town general stores in the county has developed. A large stock of groceries, dry goods, hardware, etc., is carried, and it has been found necessary from time to time to provide additional room by enlarging the building and by erecting warehouses and store rooms apart from the main structure.

In this store the Rosewood post office in conducted as a side line. Herbert Carlson was appointed postmaster September 11, 1911, to succeed Axel Larson, former custodian of Uncle Sam's mails at this point. Mr. Carlson manages to take sufficient time from his other duties to act in the capacity of official stamp vendor and will likely hold the job as long as he cares to. The receipts of the office have not yet reached a point to take it out of the civil service into the presidential class and for this reason democrats and republicans all look alike to Mr. Carlson.

Wants New Depot.

In 1907 John Remmem of Thief River Falls, concluded there were openings in the new town for a livery and feed barn and for a restaurant. He accordingly moved to Rosewood and engaged in these lines of business. For some time he conducted both, but eventually discontinued his livery business and changed the restaurant into a confectionery and variety store—or "bargain store" as it is called. Since that time he has devoted his time to the store and has also done a thriving real estate business in connection. Mr. Remmem has always been a good booster for Rosewood and it has been directly due to his untiring efforts and influence that many conveniences and improvements have been secured from the railway company. Among these may be mentioned the stock yards, which were badly needed but hard to secure. He also hopes eventually to be able to convince the Soo that the people of Rosewood are entitled to a new depot.

Garage Is Opened.

Another of the Rosewood boosters is Axel Larson, the garage man. Mr. Larson came to Rosewood about ten years ago and started in the feed grinding business in a building which he erected on the east side of the street. In 1915 he entered the garage business and his place filled a long felt want in the village. Prior to 1911 Mr. Larson was postmaster of Rosewood, but found that it took too much time and concluded to give up the position.

Cement Block Factory.

During the years 1905-1910, inclusive, Gust Opseth, in company with the Carlson brothers, operated a cement block-factory and turned out several carloads each year. Many residences, both large and small, in adjoining cities, were built during these years by Mr. Opseth. At this place the Rosebank school house, pronounced by County Superintendent Johnson one of the finest schools in this section of the county, was erected in 1907. The large eight-room residence on the Styrlund farm north of Rosewood is also constructed from blocks made by the Opseth-Carlson factory.

Elevator and Lumber Yard.

The elevator, lumber yard and flour and feed warehouse were erected in the summer of 1911 by the Hanson & Barzen Milling Co., of Thief River Falls. The business was under the management of John Phillipson until the following year. At that time Albert Vorseth was placed in charge and he has since held the position. The books of the company show a steadily increasing business and the elevator last year, in spite of the small yield in the vicinity, handled between 25,000 and 30,000 bushels of grain. In addition to this a large business has been done in flour and feed.

Creamery Sub-Station.

The creamery building erected in July, 1911, by Mr. Krohn, of Thief River Falls, is a sub-station of the Co-operative Creamery association of Thief River Falls, of which most of the farmers in this neighborhood are stock-holders. Cream is brought here two and three times a week by the farmers and shipped to Thief River Falls. While no figures were available for this article, it was stated that thousands upon thousands of gallons of cream is the annual shipment of the farmers of this section. John Sagmoen is the able representative of the creamery association at this point.

Regular Church Services

While there are several churches in the immediate neighborhood, there is only one within the village limits. This is the Scandinavian Bethlehem Congregational church, of which O. A. Anderson is pastor. The building was erected in the spring of 1912 by Enoch Nelson. It is 24x32 feet in size, excluding halls, and has a seating capacity of about 125. The first meeting and the corner stone ceremonies were conducted by Prof. R. Risberg, of Chicago, on June 23, 1912. Rev. Anderson has been the pastor ever since the congregation was organized. Regular meetings are held on two Sundays of each month, and frequently special services are conducted. The Young People's society meets regularly every two weeks.

The Neighborhood Butcher

O. J. Vignes is operating the Rosewood grocery and lunch room. Mr. Vignes purchased the building last August from E. Nelson, who had conducted a grocery and feed store there for several years. Having previously been engaged in the butcher business, Mr. Vigness is also dealing to a considerable extent in meats and is in much demand by the farmers to assist them when they kill beef or pork for their own use. The Rosewood hall, this community's chief amusement center, is under the management of Mr. Vignes.

Charles and B. P. Sagmoen, contractors and builders, both have fine homes in this village. The Sagmoen name is considered a guarantee of quality throughout the entire neighborhood, and as a result the firm has all the work it can handle.

Located in Good Section.

The original name of the village was Strip, but the people of the place thought it deserved a better name and accordingly petitioned the authorities at Washington, asking permission to change the name to Rosewood. This permission was granted in July, 1912. Rosewood is a hustling little place and is making a steady growth, although it has never experienced what might be termed a boom. It has a very good territory to draw from, and when that part of the country gets the number of resident farmers it should have to bring the farm land under proper cultivation, the village will soon add to its population also and take its place in the very front ranks of the smaller Minnesota municipalities. Rosewood is small—but was there ever a large town that didn't begin the same way?

A Recent Arrival.

A few weeks ago Jens Matson and family arrived from their former home at Albert Lea, this state, and moved onto the Iverson farm, northeast of Rosewood. The farm is in a good state of cultivation and has a fine set of buildings. It is Mr. Matson's intention to engage extensively in the live stock and dairying business and he is stocking the place with cattle as rapidly as possible. He comes from a stock-raising country and is firm in the belief that conditions here are ideal for this method of farming. Mr. Matson believes that what can be done farther south can be done here and the difference in the land values and rents here and there should make the business much more profitable in this section of the state.

Church on This Farm.

On section 27, New Solum township, resides Gust Nakken. Mr. Nakken came here twenty years ago from Fargo, N. D., and purchased the farm upon which he has since made his home. He has followed the diversified farming system with consistent success and as a result has built up his farm and improved the land until now he has one of the finest farms in the neighborhood. Dairying and mixed farming is Mr. Nakken's method and he is proving that it is the best suited to conditions in this part of Minnesota. On one corner of the Nakken farm is the Norwegian Lutheran Free church of the New Solum congregation. The church was built sixteen years ago and Rev. Bredeson has been the pastor in charge ever since the congregation was organized. The church building is a very substantial structure and will serve the needs of the people of the vicinity for many years to come.

Another Big Dairyman.

That dairying is the best paying branch of farming is the firm belief of Peter Sorenson, who owns and operates a fine farm on section 27, New Solum township. Mr. Sorenson has been on the place for thirty-two years, coming to this locality direct from Norway and homesteading the farm which has since been his home. When he came from Norway, Mr. Sorenson did not have a cent to his name, and for the first few years endured many hardships. As an example of what the early pioneers had to contend with, he informed the writer that the first garden patch on his farm was plowed and put into shape with the aid of a spade made from an oak tree. But things are different now. A fine residence, a modern barn and other out-buildings, and labor-saving machinery of every description makes it comfortable and convenient to live on the farm, besides increasing the profits materially. A gasoline engine runs the cream separator, washing machine, pump, etc., and Mr. Sorenson has a novel hog trough which should be investigated by those having hogs to feed. It is his own invention but he hasn't a patent on it and will not try to control the manufacture of it. It is a good idea and could be used to advantage on every farm. At the present time Mr. Sorenson is milking seventeen cows and is sending his cream to the Co-opeerative creamery of Thief River Falls, of which he is a shareholder. His cream checks during the past season have been running close to $75 a month, which shows that the cows are paying their way pretty well. In the opinion of Mr. Sorenson, potato raising is a very profitable branch of farming in this country and he raises a large quantity of "spuds" each season. He is equipped with planters, diggers, etc., so that the labor of handling the crop is reduced to a minimum. A number of large county drainage ditches running through and near the Sorenson farm furnish complete drainage and every acre of the place can be worked in the most adverse seasons.

Raises Good Corn.

O. A. Flann, who lives on section 24, New Solum township, has owned and operated the place for the past fourteen years. He came here from Willmar and has never had a desire to move back farther south as conditions here are entirely to his liking. The Flann farm is right up to the minute in all particulars, being practically all under cultivation, equipped with a fine set of farm buildings, a good well and windmill. The barn, which is modern in every particular, was completed a year ago. In common with the other progressive farmers of his neighborhood, Mr. Flann is an advocate of mixed farming and keeps a nice herd of cattle. He is at the present time milking nine cows and is getting satisfactory returns from them by shipping the cream to the Thief River Co-oprative creamery, of which he is a stock-holder. This year Mr. Flann raised no wheat, but devoted all of his farm to corn, rye and oats. That he made the right move has been proven beyond a doubt. He raises Minnesota No. 23 corn and is having good success with it every year. In his opinion good corn can be raised here if the right seed is secured and it is properly taken care of during the growing season. Potatoes have also been a good stand-by for Mr. Flann and this year he raised about 200 bushels an acre of good tubers.

A Big Live Stock Man.

One of the oldest residents, as well as most successful farmers, in New Solum township is O. J. Dahl, who owns and operates half of section 22. Mr. Dahl's father, John Dahl, homesteaded one quarter section of this land, and the son homesteaded the other, thirty-two years ago. The Dahl family came direct from Norway and their first stop was at St. Hilaire, eighteen miles away. They immediately located on the homesteads and have not made a move since, having become firmly convinced that they could do as well here as anywhere. And the progress made in the time they have lived on the farm shows that their original judgment was right. Mr. Dahl has a fine start in cattle and is wintering thirty head. A thoroughbred Aberdeen Angus sire has headed his herd for a couple of years, but it is Mr. Dahl's intention to replace this animal with a Shorthorn as he desires to run more into a dairying type. He recently purchased a pure bred sire of the latter breed, paying a fancy price for the animal. It is Mr. Dahl's opinion that every farm should have in its equipment a cream tester thus enabling the owner to know just exactly what each cow on the place is doing and making it possible to get rid of the inferior butter fat producer and keep only those of proven merit. Mr. Dahl has almost entirely discontiued the raising of small grain and devotes his acres to corn, timothy, clover and alfalfa. He has no trouble in raising good corn and has a good-sized field of it each year. The Northwestern Dent has given the best satisfaction and this is the variety Mr. Dahl will continue to raise in the future. A comfortable residence and a large barn are among the improvements on the place, and an unlimited supply of good water is furnished by a drilled well. Over 400 bushels of potatoes were raised on two acres of ground the past season.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE

By Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes

Copyright, 1916, by Adelaide M. Hughes

SYNOPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, with his daughter Gloria, is wintering at Palm Beach. Gloria is a vivacious but willful young lady who chafes under the restraining hand of a governess from whom she repeatedly escapes. Her childish capers cause young Doctor Royce to fall in love with her. Becoming lost in the everglades she falls into the hands of the Seminole Indians. Gloria falls in love with her rescuer, Freneau. Five years later she leaves school and meets Freneau at the theater; he has forgotten Gloria. Later Freneau persuades her to forgive him. Gloria's sister-in-law, Lois, becomes intensely jealous and Doctor Royce discovers in her an ally. Freneau takes leave of Gloria. She sees from her window an attack made upon him. Doctor Royce convinces her it is a delirium. A telegram followed by a letter, comes from Freneau. She replies but her telegrams are returned. She accidently sees the supposed suicide of Freneau reported in the paper. Gloria swears to find the murderer of her lover. Royce tells what he knows of Freneau to Mr. Stafford. They seek to prevent scandal from enveloping Gloria. She accuses them of conspiracy against her. Gloria sets about to run down Freneau's murderer. Royce warns Mulry to tell Gloria nothing. Gloria calls on Mulry and there sees Lois who is also worried. Gloria's suspicions are aroused. Royce endeavors to show her the difficulty she faces. Gloria goes to David's country home. She mets Mulry who flees at once. Gloria insists on going to Palm Beach. Again she sees Mulry there. He leaves for the North. She is recognized by her one-time captor, the young Indian chief. He tells her that Royce and not Freneau was her rescuer at that time. Gloria attends night court; she sees Mulry there, also the tramp who attacked Freneau. But Judge Freeman releases him. She follows the tramp when he leaves the court and falls into the hands of hold-up men. She finds herself in a low saloon dance hall, and is selected by one of the patrons as his partner. Doctor Royce, however, follows her and when he attempts a rescue, calls down a riot on their heads. The hall is raided and the crowd, including Gloria and Royce, is arrested and taken before Judge Freeman. The newspapers feature Gloria's arrest. Reporters surround the house. Casimir arrives with the child Gloria promised to adopt. She orders Royce to take Casimir's wife to the Stafford home. She follows Trask and lands on a houseboat to hear him accused of Freneau's murder.

FIFTEENTH EPISODE

The Murderer at Bay.

Pierpont Stafford cherished his majestic country place principally because it furnished him an ample solitude. He could wander about it for hours and never meet a soul. If he wanted company, there was room for it in the palace and in the formally gardened grounds. And he could look down on the tremendous peace of the Hudson river, admiring its strength as one strong man does another, and complimenting it on the efficiency with which it did such a big business with so little fuss.

He asked few persons to visit him, and those few only when the mood moved him. In his everyday life as a man of big affairs he met so many people and was so pointed out when he walked the streets that he acquired a kind of shyness in his hours of leisure.

He was touched in a tender spot when he heard that his scapegrace daughter Gloria had invited three guests to make his sacred retreat their more or less permanent home. She had not consulted him and the guests were the last people in the world he would have invited. It was nice enough for Gloria to take pity on a poor waiter and his forlorn child. It was sweet of her to adopt the child. Pierpont had even forgiven her by now for compelling him to hunt employment for the waiter. But then what followed? Gloria invited the boy's almost hopelessly invalid mother and the boy and the father to make themselves at home in Pierpont's own sanctuary! That move was far more than too much.

"This has got to stop, and I'm going to stop it," Pierpont stormed to Doctor Royce, who had, at Gloria's command, transported the three to Pierpont's country place.

Royce smiled. Pierpont grew more furious.

"Oh, I'm not afraid of her just because she is only a child. She's got to obey me and get rid of them."

"Tell her so, sir," said Royce, amused at the old man's helpless bluster.

"Oh, I'll tell her!" Pierpont swaggered. "Where is she?"

No one knew. Royce suggested that she had probably gone to the country place to see her new playmates. So Pierpont motored out with Royce. He told Royce that he would really have to get rid of the unwelcome guests, if only to prove to Gloria that she was not yet the absolute boss of the family.

"That victory will be worth going miles to see," said Royce.

They reached the country place, only to find that Gloria had not been seen nor heard of. Her three guests were there, however, installed for a long stay. The butler was so horrified at having a waiter's family to wait on that he offered his notice.

Pierpont decided to evict the waiter's family and save the butler. He would do it at once, before Gloria got home. He stalked forth like a constable with a writ of eviction.

The boy Stas caught sight of him and ran and flung his arms about his neck and began to tell him of the wonders of his own country place, of trees and flowers and birds and animals—commonplace things to Pierpont, but miracles to the boy from the slums. Casimir had gathered an armload of flowers for his sick wife, and he was aglow with the feeling that she was better already.

Pierpont had a great deal of Gloria's impulsiveness and a great deal of her abounding tenderness. He lost his temper in flashes, but his charity burned steadily and deeply, and now Stas had won his heart. He could not unclasp that child's arms. In fact, he lifted Stas to his arm and held him there while he told the butler he could leave without notice if he did not like the guests of the house. Also Pierpont told Royce that he must take particular care of Casimir's wife. Royce laughed at the old man's complete collapse and said:

"It's a pity Gloria isn't here to see you. I wonder where on earth she is."

"She's somewhere she oughtn't to be, that's sure," Pierpont growled, as he stared at his section of the Hudson, where, fighting against the current, a little tug was visible, towing an old canal barge loaded to the water line. Then he added: "She's probably on that barge now, adopting the bargeman's family."

He could imagine nothing more extravagantly impossible to say than that. And yet, the truth kept pace with his extravagance. For Gloria was indeed even then on board just such a barge being towed upstream by just such a tug. Only Gloria was not adopting the bargeman's family. She was being adopted by it. She was a prisoner and her life was in pawn.

Gloria's curiosity as to one problem was solved. She had found out that her vision of Freneau's murder was not a delirium. She had seen the assassin and heard him accused by his own daughter. One trouble with satisfying curiosity is that every curiosity satisfied opens up new curiosities. Gloria now was frantic to know why Gideon Trask killed Freneau and how Trasks' daughter was involved in the crime. Next, she was curious to know how she was to escape with her knowledge, once she had it.

When Trask heard Gloria's voice over his shoulder accusing him of the crime he was denying, he whirled as if an angel had spoken with the voice of conscience. An angel would have been hardly more surprising then the look of Gloria on the stairway of the barge.

Trask had no idea of Gloria's identity. He could not imagine who she was, whence she had come, or why she accused him. He stood transfixed a moment, then moved toward her with menace. Gloria retreated up the steps, but he leaped at her and dragged her down and seized her by the throat, as he had seized Freneau.

She tried to scream, but she could not make a sound. Nell attempted to restrain her father, but he turned on her with terror and wrath: "If she gets away, I go to the chair."

He might have throttled her then and there, but there was a jolt, the barge shook as the towline dragged it away, and down the hatchway came the voice of Trask's helper, Jed.

Trask hurled Gloria against the way and warned her that if she made a sound it would be her last. He would wring her neck and throw her into the river.

Gloria cowered in utter dread of him and remembered the fate of her poor lover, whose body the same stream had received and kept for days.

When Trask stamped up the cabin stairs and banged the hatchway down Gloria studied the girl. She had been beautiful, and still was pretty but too sad. Just now she was too angry. Nell had been fighting against her father till this unknown woman appeared from nowhere. Now Nell was all for her father against the world.

Gloria spoke to her, questioned her about Freneau. Nell did not answer at all, only in grumbling monosyllables. Gloria tried to bribe Nell to let her escape. Gloria offered larger and larger sums till Nell would have been dazzled if she had been convinced. At last she spoke:

"Say, who do you think you are? The Dime Savings bank? And who do you think I am? I ain't on auction. If your father had all the money you're makin' up he has, do you think you could buy my father with it? No!"

Glora liked her better for that, but she was none the less determined to escape if she could. She talked no more. But she thought harder than ever before.

Nell went on getting her father's supper at the little stove, clattering the pans and jabbing the fire with the poker angrily.

Gloria had often steamed up the Hudson on her father's yacht. This was her first voyage on a canal barge. The place was extremely unlike her father's yacht, but the savor of the frying pan made Gloria democratically hungry. When Trask came back, however, his cold eyes took her appetite away. But not his own. She watched him wolf his food; she felt that he was half insane, a relentless fanatic on a wild crusade.

His eyes kept rolling in her direction. He found her so mysterious that he was half afraid of her. He remembered the loneliness of that winter night by the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument. He remembered the appearance of Freneau alone and no other human being in view. His very hands remembered the death grasp they took on Freneau's throat. He smiled. That was one good deed, at least, he told himself.

But he could not imagine how this girl could have seen him. How could he guess that she had sat at her window with binoculars to her eyes and watched the whole tragedy. He began to grow superstitious. Gloria was apparently able to perform miracles. She wore the invisible cloak. Perhaps she would leave as mystically as she had come.

Finally he grew brave enough to shout out at her: "Who are you? What was Freneau to you?"

Gloria knew that anyone who blusters is likely to be weak, so she answered coldly: "Never mind who I am. The main thing is, who are you and what was Freneau to you?"

The very name Freneau seemed to madden Trask. He emitted a loud yelp of hate and derision and left the table. He moved toward Gloria, but changed his mind or deferred his purpose and went up the stairs, closing the hatch and fastening it above. There was nothing reassuring in his last look at Gloria.

Nell was clearing up the table when she saw that Gloria was faint with hunger or terror. She offered Gloria the remnant of the supper. Gloria was glad to get it. She ate like another pauper. She felt that she would need what strength she would acquire. Her wits were dancing as she tried to think out a means of escape. She could not fight Nell and her father and the big man, too. She could not overcome them with force, and she had no weapon but her five wits, and they had never been trained to such problems.

She was as helpless before them as she had been when she was a little fifteen-year-old filly at Palm Beach and her governess had given her a problem in algebra (a-b)x(a-b)—? She had stared at that riddle as she stared at this one.

Doctor Royce had happened along then and smiled at the easy task. He could probably solve this problem, too, but he was not here. She was alone and the solution depended solely on her.

She thought and thought while Nell cleared the table. She offered to help Nell and was permitted to aid in the work. When the last dish was removed to the wash basin Gloria and Nell took opposite ends of the course tablecloth. When it was folded twice the two girls began to bring the two ends together, as people do who are folding tablecloths.

Nell stopped short at the proper moment; Gloria went toward her. The solution came to her in a flash. Instead of putting the two ends of the tablecloth in Nell's fingers, she suddenly whipped the cloth over her head, brought it down around her elbows and, after a furious struggle, forced Nell back into a chair and knotted the tablecloth corners under the arms. She snatched a pair of dish towels from the wall and tied Nell's feet to the legs of the chair. Nell fought like a mad woman in a straitjacket, but the knots held.

Gloria was out of breath, but she was proud as Punch over her victory. She stood up panting and exclaimed: "Well!"

So far so good. But there was still Trask to settle with, and Jed, also. She had not tablecloths enough for all three, and she doubted if she could hoodwink those giants in the same way.

Another scheme occurred to her. She had noticed Nell poking up the fire in the little stove. Now Nell was quieting down and it was safe to leave her.

She ran to the stove, lifted the lid and set the poker in the red coals. It was a grand idea and she was tremendously enthusiastic. But the poker was not. It was in no hurry whatever. They say that a watched poker never glows. Gloria heard somebody working at the hatch before the poker had attained as much blush as a hardened sinner feels on his cheek at a little mistake.

She heard Trask's footsteps. She could see his feet on the stairway. She stared at the poker and whispered: "Hurry up." The poker was in no hurry.

Trask paused to call Jed, then he began to come down the stairway. Gloria was stupefied to see how much there was of him. His face appeared last of all and it appalled her. He carried a rope in his hand.

Trask did not see Gloria at first. But he caught sight of the animated bolster in the rocking chair and it frightened him. He stared back. But a muffled shriek came from the depths. "Pa! Pa! It's me! She did it!"

Trask understood that the witch woman had performed another of her feats and he was sure that he was under the voodoo. Then he saw Gloria standing by the stove. She looked so small and so timid that he regained courage. He roared at Gloria and moved toward Nell. Gloria cried: "Stand back!"

Trask was so astonished by her impudence that he laughed.

"Why, you little fluffy pullet, I'll tie you up and drop you in the river!"

"Oh, you will?" said Gloria.

She snatched the poker from the fire. Trask laughed at it. She hit the table with it and sparks flew. She rubbed it on the wooden top of the table and smoke arose. There was a hissing sound. Trask shuddered. Gloria jabbed at him with her red-hot sword. He could feel the searing pain of it before it reached him. When it arrived where he was he was not there. Gloria was a trifle conceited over her success.

And now, what next? She saw the rope in his hand. He had brought it to tie her with. The next idea came. She gloated a trifle.

"You thought you would tie me up, did you? Well, you can just tie yourself up!"

Trask could hardly believe that anyone would be cruel enough to inflict such an insulting injury. But Gloria's arguments were pokes with the poker.

If Trask had been more intelligent and less confused, and had known how, he might have tied himself up as the cabinet tricksters do—so that he could slip out easily. But this was beyond him at the time, and Gloria was vigilant.

She made him fasten the rope around a stanchion, then knot it about one wrist, then pass it around him till he looked like a package of Gloria's own tying. The last knots she attended to herself. She set the poker on a plate within easy reach, and knotted, and knotted, and knotted. Trask gnashed his teeth with rage, but he could not budge. He yelled just once, then she seized a dish towel, whirled it into a roll and gagged him so that he could not even gnash his teeth.

Gloria heard footsteps along the deck overhead. Probably Jed was coming down. The poker was cold. There was no time for reheating it. Something must be done at once. She put out the lamp that Nell had lighted, she set at the foot of the stairs a wicker rocker, she laid it on its side and fell back to await developments.

Jed came down the stairs in the dark. As he left the last step he put his foot in the wicker rocker as in a trap. Jed went on over with a crash that shook the barge. He was yelling that he was being bitten to death by a wildcat, when Gloria sidled past him, ran up the stairs and out on deck. She closed the hatch, fastened it and voted herself three cheers.

She looked about her now and saw that she was in the middle of the Hudson river and a great distance from either shore. The view was magnificent in the gloaming, but she had had enough of it and the hateful tug was furrowing the water and dragging the barge farther and farther north.

She saw the tiller of the barge flopping idly, and it occurred to her that if she could get free from the tug she could steer the barge to shore herself. Somewhere below was her father's home. Stas and his father and mother would be waiting for her. Perhaps her own father was alarmed. It was time for her to go home. She would take her prisoners back to her father and deliver them to whatever punishment seemed right.

She had never steered a canal barge, but she imagined that it would be about the same as a motor boat in general principles. Fortunately, she had been carried so far north that the current would act as engine power.

She was delighted with the scheme. She went forward and saw the big hawser sagged in the middle and cut the water. The tug had buckled down to its work, churning up a noisy wake. She could see the backs of the crew of the tug where they sat smoking and solemn and bored to death.

They would have had a good laugh if they had seen Gloria trying to untie the knots in that hawser with her little hands. She was laughing to think how surprised they would be later when they discovered by chance that the barge had disappeared.

When a parcel came home from a shop Gloria always tried to untie it, then always went for the scissors. So now, when she saw that she could not quite unknot the hawser, she looked for the shears. She found an ax on deck and attacked the big rope.

She hit everything but the hawser, and when she hit that at last it was like hitting a huge rubber band. The ax bounced out of her hands and just escaped falling into the river. She picked it up and chopped at the hawser where it was wound. Every third or fourth blow hit the cable and severed a few strands. And finally the rope gave and flew. The barge quivered at its release from the tension, and the tug, suddenly unhitched from its load, jumped forward and sent the crew sprawling.

Gloria ran to the tiller to steer her prize home. She was greatly disappointed when she heard the yells from the tug and saw that the pilot already was making ready to recapture the barge as soon as he could take in the hawser. Also she could faintly hear the howls of her cabined and confused prisoners. If the tug men came aboard and released them, what would become of Gloria? Gloria wondered.

ASK TO BORROW OF LIGHT FUND

Special Legislation to be Urged Granting City Permission to Loan Money to Itself.

LATER THE CITY CHARTER

To Ask Change of Law So That Entire Board Will Not be Retired at One Time—Payment Extension on Improvements.

According to the report of Clerk A. H. Fasel, issued on Nov. 30, the city of Thief River Falls has a credit balance of $69,333.08, but because this sum was practically all lying idle to the credit of the electric light fund, the city is going contrary to law in drawing warrants when there is no money with which to pay them.

The city council, together with Senator D. P. O'Neill, have been working on a plan whereby this trouble might be overcome, and believe they have reached a solution. It is to secure the passage of a bill at the next session of the legislature that will permit the city to borrow money from itself.

The following report submitted to the council by Mr. Fasel will make clear how this is possible. According to the city's books the condition of the municipal finances is at present as follows:

	Cr. Bal.	Dr. Bal.
Current Fund	$11,595.71
Road Imp. Fund	126.78
Local Imp. Fund		$28,719.81
El. Light Fund	51,648.84
Waterwks Fund	26,756.59
Sinking Fund	17,830.05
Audtrm. Fund		4,764.75
Poor Fund	584.76
Interest Fund		5,180.32
Library Fund		518.87
Cemetery Fund		836.21
Park Fund	805.50
Mayor's Contingent Fund	4.81
	$109,353.04	$40,019.96

It will be seen that the local improvement fund, the auditorium fund and the interest fund are in a bad way, while the electric light, waterworks and sinking funds are particularly flush. The money in the waterworks fund is practically hypothecated by reason of the extensions and improvements in the system now under way, while touching the sinking fund is of course out of the question. This leaves the electric light fund with its $50,000 which might be used for some other purpose if this were permissible under the law.

Would Borrow the Money.

The idea, as outlined by Mr. Fasel, is as follows: To get a bill passed at the next session of the legislature permitting the city to issue certificates of indebtedness against the local improvement, auditorium and interest funds, selling these certificates to the electric light fund and having the last-named fund carry the certificates until such time as the money is needed for further development of the electric light plant, when they could be sold in the open market. These certificates would bear a stipulated rate of interest and would thus prove a good investment for the funds of the public service plant.

Would Loan to Itself.

Under this plan the city would be loaning to itself. The interest paid would simply go from one municipal department to another and not to some bond holder with no other interest in the community other than that of getting the rental for his money. Should the electric light department suddenly be confronted with a need for the cash the securities would be easily convertible and the interest accruing during the time they were held here would at least be saved.

Believe It a Good Idea.

Senator O'Neill and City Attorney Theodore Quale can see no good reason why the idea should not work out satisfactorily. The city as a whole would have neither more nor less money and the current expenses could be met without any law evasion.

For a Hold-Over Council.

Another bill which will be introduced by Senator O'Neill has to do with the changing of the system of electing councilmen in the city of Thief River Falls. Under the present charter there are six men elected to the council every two years. Their terms all begin and end at the same time. It must be apparent to everyone that it would be vastly better if one half of the city board were elected every two years, leaving a like number as hold-overs. If this idea is carried out it will mean that next fall one of the councilmen at large will be elected for four years and the other for two. The same rule will be followed for council member representing the wards. This would provide for practically the same system as is followed in the election of county commissioners.

Extends Time of Payment.

The third bill to be introduced has to do with the time of payment for local improvements. As the law now stands the entire assessment for paying must be paid in three years, which is a hardship on the property owner. The new law would so alter matters that the city council would decide the number of years which the payments might be allowed to run. This would be decided at a public hearing and become a part of the preliminary resolution.

Wants Owner to Pay.

City Attorney Theodore Quale has brought suit in the district court to have tested the responsibiliy of owners for the light and water bills left unpaid by tenants.

Just one year ago Albert Schultz went out of the saloon business along with quite a number of others. At the time he was rentinρ the building at 209 La Bree avenue south, and in closing up his affairs he neglected to pay the city the sum of $50 due for electric light and water.

The building is the property of the Duluth Brewing and Malting company and it is the contention of Mr. Quale that this concern should be made responsible for the indebtedness. Should Mr. Quale succeed in making this contention hold it will mean that all property owners will take particular care to see that these bills are settled before the tenant leaves the property.

ALL READY FOR VISIT BY SANTA

Committees Appointed to See That Everything is in Readiness for His Reception.

CHRISTMAS TREE IN PLACE

Union Chorus of All Church Choirs to Render Anthems at Opening Exercises and Band Will Be on Hand.

In Case the Weather on Christmas day should be Cold or Stormy the Celebration will take place in the Auditorium.

The joint committee of the Woman's club and the Commercial club having in charge the preparations for the municipal Christmas tree are among the busiest of all the people in the city these busy days. Not only have they the work incidental to the season to take care of at their own home and places of business but they have also undertaken to see to it that all the children of the town shall have something for which to be thankful.

Regular Santa Claus.

A meeting was held on Thursday afternoon in the Commercial club rooms at which the general committe of both clubs were present. Mrs. T. L. Melgaard, chairman of this committee, appointed the different subordinate overseers upon whom will devolve the details of the work.

Santa Claus has promised to be on hand. He will pass through here on Christmas eve on his way to visit the children of Canada, but will return in time to take charge of things in Thief River Falls on Christmas afternoon.

Sleighloads of Goodies.

The tree will be erected at the corner of LaBree avenue and Third street and the exercises will take place at that point beginning at three o'clock Monday afternoon.

There will be three sleighloads of pop corn, apples and candy on hand, these being distributed by Santa Claus, stationed at the tree. The children will approach this commissary department in two lines, passing between lines of grown-ups stationed on each side of Third street.

The Singing Exercises.

The vocal music will be in charge of Dr. P. L. Vistaunet, leader of Braga chorus, who is busy training a union choir composed of singers from all the churches of the city and other vocalists of merit and renown. The program for this detail of the program is being looked after by Dr. Vistaunet and a sub-committee of ladies and is expected to prove one of the most pleasing and effective features of the afternoon's proceedings.

Prof. Joe Greenfield has promised the services of the Minnesota State band for the occasion, and instrumental music of an appropriate nature will not be lacking. In fact, nothing will be lacking that the committee can provide.

In order that the occasion may take on the spirit of a genuine community affair everyone is urged to lend their presence at the observance. It is particularly desired that the children be permitted to come, but it also hoped that parents will be present. A large part of the program will be for their particular benefit.

In Place for One Week.

The tree will be permitted to remain standing and trimmed for one week. It will be lighted every night by electric lamps scattered through the branches. The wires will be strung and the current furnished free by the city.

Autos Still Running.

There is no use in attempting to deny the fact that it has been cold during the past week, but no colder here than at many points farther south. In Minneapolis the thermometer has registered between 20 and 35 for a whole week, and it has never been colder than that in Thief River Falls. The weather has been clear and fine, automobiles being in evidence nearly every day on our streets. A stretch of such cold weather is an unusual thing for this season, but nearly everyone finds it preferable to storms. Merchants state that the holiday trade has been effected very little by the cold.

FLAX STRAW IS TO BE TRIED OUT

Two Carloads Sent From This City to Winona Factory for Experimentation in Paper Making.

RESULT VERY IMPORTANT

If Waste Product Is Found Suitable For Pulp it Will Mean a Large Increase in Flax Acreage of Northwest.

Flax straw, a product heretofore regarded by the farmers of this section as possessing little or no value, may become an important article of commerce if experiments now being carried on shall prove the material available as a substitute for wood pulp in the manufacture of paper.

Representative Here.

During the month of October, Geo. A. Stewart, representative of the bureau of plant industry, was in the city and made a number of trips through the section investigating the probable amount of flax straw to be obtained, its quality, etc. His researches disclosed the fact that there are in the neighborhood of 33,000 carloads of flax straw, the greater part of which was being burned right on the ground.

Samples of the straw produced in this vicinity were sent to the bureau at Washington and the matter taken up with Jason L. Merrill, paper plant chemist, who is conducting experiments at the pulp plant of the Union Fibre company, Winona.

Data Soon Available.

The Union Fibre company is just completing a large paper mill which will be in operation within sixty days, when some interesting data will likely be available. Not only is this straw to be tested from the standpoint of the paper manufacturer, but also for the textile and cord manufacture as well as for any use to which it can be put.

Price Steadily Advancing.

For years there has been a vast amount of flax straw in this state burned just to get rid of it as it was not considered good for any purpose whatever. With the advent of the manufacture of tow therefrom a low price was established. This has been gradually increasing until a year ago good tow was bringing $4.00 per ton f. o. b. tow mills.

As soon as it became known that the government had discovered that tow was a practicable substitute for wood pulp, the price began to advance. Five dollars per ton was paid last year and this season $6.50 has been received at the mills in some instances.

A New Source of Revenue.

It is now practically certain that flax fibre will be utilized to a much greater extent than has thus far been thought possible. While its value as a pulp product has not yet been definitely decided, experiments have advanced to a point where it has been proven that there are many profitable uses for the product. That the demand for the straw will steadily increase is certain and this will automatically raise the price. A much more general cultivation of flax will result throughout the northwest by reason of this additonal revenue to the farmer. The agricultural department is at work devising a system of fertilization which will make the growing of flax possible on old fields that have long been given over to less paying crops because of their inability longer to carry profitable yields of this staple.

The result of these experiments are awaited with much interest by the farmers of the northwest, the importance of the new departure being fully appreciated

ANNUAL ELECTION THURSDAY, JAN. 25

Nominations For Commercial Club Officers Will be Made Two Weeks Before That Time

Every member of the Commercial club will have a chance to participate in the election of officers and directors at the annual meeting next month. They will also be given an opportunity of making nominations.

The secretary has been authorized to send out a notice to all members asking them to nominate nine men for the position of president, first and second vice president, treasurer and five directors. The eighteen receiving the highest number of votes will be declared candidates at the annual meeting.

The nominations will close on the evening of Thursday, Jan. 11, two weeks before the annual meeting, at which time there will be a club meeting following a regulation stand-up supper. Only such members as are in good standing will be allowed to cast votes for the nominations as well as at the election. There are several members who have not as yet paid their dues and it is hoped that this will prove an incentive to them in doing so.

OUR BOOZELESS YEAR REVIEWED

Average Arrests For Drunkenness During 1916 is But Fraction Over One Each Week.

APRIL WAS BIGGEST MONTH

Prosecutions of Blind Piggers Bring Court Fines For That Period to a Higher Figure Than in the Previous Year.

At 12 o'clock on the night of December 18 just one year had elapsed since the last saloon in the city of Thief River Falls closed its doors in compliance with the people's edict that no further license should be issued permitting the sale of intoxicating liquors. So many things were prophesied as a result of this action that a review of the doings of the past twelve months, as these pertain in any way to the effect of saloon closing, may be of interest.

No Vacant Buildings.

It was freely predicted by those who favored the continuance of the licensed saloon that abolishment would mean empty buildings and business depression generally. These prophesies, however, have not been fulfilled. The rooms used for saloon purposes were almost at once taken over by other enterprises and if there has been any falling off in the amount of business done by stores generally it certainly can not be laid to the passing of the saloon. In fact, business men very freely admit that they would not go back to the old order of things if they were given an opportunity to do so.

Another Prediction Shattered

Another argument advanced by the "wet" portion of the population was that there would be as much drunkenness without the saloons as there ever had been when these flourished. That the people making these claims were mistaken is proven by the figures. The report of Chief of Police O. E. Berge shows that during the twelve months just closed there were a total of 57 arrests made for intoxication, or an average of a little more than one a week. For the same period during the previous year the number of arrests on this charge was 220. The report for the different months during the two years is as follows:

	1915	1916
January	5	4
February	10	3
March	14	5
April	13	14
May	13	5
June	6	2
July	15	5
August	13	5
September	28	7
October	47	7
November	33	0
December	23	1
Total	220	57

Other Offenses Proportionate

Besides these there were a total of 32 arrests made on charges of disorderly conduct in 1915, while during the past twelve months there have been but five such cases. According to Chief Berge the number of undesirable characters warned out of town during the year will not reach more than a half a dozen while such proceeding was practically an every day occurance during the time that the saloons were running.

Amount of Fines Small.

The records of Municipal Judge N. W. Tarrant show that the business of his court has languished during the year. The fines collected totalled $336.60, this being an average of $28.50 per month. In 1915 these fines amounted to $1,223.05, this being an average of $102 per month. Following are the amounts paid in each month during the year:

	1915	1916
January	$103.68	$ 25.00
February	63.16	12.50
March	104.00	15.00
April	38.25	85.00
May	40.00	50.00
June	40.00	25.00
July	40.55	21.00
August	103.50	27.50
September	192.25	31.50
October	200.06	26.00
November	146.60	10.00
December	151.00	7.50
Total	$1,223.05	$336.60

April and May are the months showing an increase in the amount of fines paid over last year. This was caused by the fact a general cleaning up of blind pig operators was made at that time. This also accounts for the fact that April is the month with the greatest number of arrests.

Record Satisfactory.

The police department feels that this is a very good record for the first dry year in the history of the city. There were naturally those who attempted to continue with the selling of liquor in spite of the prohibition, but these were discouraged to such an extent that Chief Berge now feels confident that very little of the business is being carried on. It is likely that Thief River Falls is as free from drunkenness at this time as any city in the United States when the fact is taken into consideration that it is located only a few miles distant from a licensed saloon.

Proof of the Pudding.

If any proof were needed that advertising in the columns of The Times is a paying proposition it was furnished during the past week. Loken Brothers, always strong believers in this kind of publicity, are now more satisfied than ever that the use of the proper medium brings results. Last week their advertisement in this paper contained an offer of a ten per cent reduction on certain lines in their store providing the advertisement was cut out and brought along at the time of the purchase. In spite of the fact that these reductions were offered on ladies' wearing apparel exclusively the result was such as to astonish them. Much of the success of the Loken store is due to the fact that the proprietors always do exactly what they agree to in their advertisements. This will be found the policy followed in any first class establishment.

PROGRAM OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Preparations For Proper Observance of Season at All Thief River Falls Churches.

BEGINS SATURDAY NIGHT

Children of Presbyterian and Methodist Churches Will Render Their Program at That Time, Others Later.

The usual observance of the Christmas season will begin on Saturday night, when the children of the Presbyterian Sunday school will hold their annual Christmas tree festival. The programs have been in course of preparation for some time and teachers and superintendents have been drilling their charges in their different "pieces" for a month. The older people will also assist in making these observances enjoyable by taking part in the several festivals.

Following are the programs arranged:

WILL INVESTIGATE CANNING FACTORY

Commercial Club Committee Will Look Into Matter of Securing Plant For This City.

A number of very interesting matter came up for consideration at the regular meeting of the directors of the Commercial club on Monday evening. Among the most important of these was the proposition received from a Twin City concern which offered to put into operation a canning factory in this city if the proper arrangements were offered. The matter was favorably discussed and left to the industrial committee of which W. W. Prichard, sr., is chairman. As the matter is one of much importance it is likely that a report will be forthcoming without delay.

The Winter Activities.

Reports of various committees were received showing that the activities of the winter in various lines are well under way. The matteer of the annual election, which occurs on the fourth Thursday in January, was brought up and it was decided to make the election as popular as is possible.

The mid-winter fair was discussed and President Johnson was authorized to appoint a committee of seven, including himself and secretary Laird, to devise ways and means for carrying out this project.

A vote of thanks was ordered extended to the various members of the cast in the club play given last week.

BIG INCREASE IN SALE OF CHRISTMAS SEALS

The report of Mrs. O. F. Mellby, in charge of the tag day sales of Red Cross Christmas seals, shows that the total receipts of the campaign were $138.74. This is an increase of $52.74 over the amount of last year and practically assures the services of a visiting nurse for some time. Besides this, there will undoubtedly be a fair sum left for the purpose of aiding in the maintenance of the women's rest room which was recently opened in this city.

The ladies in charge of the sales believe that the increase is largely due to a better understanding of the purposes for which the money is to be used. Much good has already been accomplished in combating the ravages of the white plague through the funds secured by this form of popular subscription and everyone is responding more liberally.

The rural schools sales in the county are already much larger than a year ago and the local stores all report a good demand.

The success of the local campaign is due largely to the excellent hustling abilities of the teachers, Woman's Club members and Camp Fire girls, who saw to it that everyone coming within their reach was properly tagged.

BUT FIVE VOTES AGAINST BONDS

Proposition to Issue $45,000 in School Securities Carried by Vote Of 138 to 5.

LITTLE INTEREST IS SHOWN

General Feeling That Result Would be Practically Unanimous Helped Cold Weather Keep People at Home.

By a vote of 138 to five the proposition to issue bonds of School District No. 18 in the sum of $45,000 was carried at the special election held on Tuesday evening. The money will be used for the purposes of erecting and equipping a new grade school in Oakland additoin to Thief River Falls.

Was Small Vote.

A total of 143 votes in a district containing over 2,000 qualified electors is certainly not an encouraging percentage, but it was so generally understood that there would be practically no opposition to the bond issue that most people did not consider it worth while to register their preference. It is certain that had the vote been larger the percentage against the proposition would have been still smaller.

Another thing that prevented many from getting out and voting was the extremely cold weather. People do not enjoy leaving the house after supper when the thermometer registers in the neighborhood of thirty degrees below zero.

Two years ago when a similar proposition was up to be balloted upon the vote stood 140 favorable and 30 against, so that the turnout averaged up pretty well.

Will Apply To State.

The next move to be made toward securing money for this new school building is to make application to the state for the loan. The bonds may not be issued for six or eight months, this depending entirely upon whether or not the state has the money available. A resolution has just been passed by the board having in charge the loaning of the state's money providing that loans to the amount of $1,500,000 may be taken up in the near future. Application will be made so as to have the local loan come in under this provision.

Payments Taken Care of.

After this loan is accepted by the state the district has no farther concern with it. Repayments and the annual interest charge are provided for in the general taxation budget, the redemption being made at the rate of $1,000 annually after the first five years. No sinking fund against the final maturity of these bonds need be provided, the state looking after the matter in such a way that gradual repayment is made during the entire life of the issue.

Work Will Be Rushed.

Now that the necessary funds have been authorized the work will be rushed to an early completion. Nothing much can be accomplished during the dead of winter, but operations will be begun as soon as the weather conditions make such step possible in the spring.

PRESENT PETITION AT NEXT MEETING

Residents on Proposed Road Between This City and Brooks Will State Position.

At the first meeting of the county commissioners to be held for the year 1917, a committee of citizens residing between Thief River Falls and Brooks will appear to urge that a state highway be established between the two points. This proposed road will run a short distance to the north of Hazel in Pennington county and will touch in Plummer and Brooks in Red Lake county.

The different communities on the route have chosen the following as representatives at the board meeting: Paul Borgie, T. J. Sumpter and J. W. Denhart, Hazel; William Bottineau, H. J. Enderle, and F. R. Davies, Plummer; John E. Peterson, J. R. Larson and August Roese, Wyandotte township; Helner Finstad, S. O. Lee and Peter Engelstad, Rocksbury township; Knute Steen of Garnes township in Red Lake county.

The distance between Brooks and Thief River Falls is now 39 miles by road. With the completion of the proposed road this would be cut down to 21 miles.

The matter is one of much importance to both the people living in the farming section to be tapped and to those of the trading centers on the line.

No Directory for Crookston.

Crookston Times: This city is not to have a new city directory next year. Mr. John H. Ley, who has gotten out the directories for this city, after a two days' canvass of the situation, has decided that the business to be obtained will not warrant the publication. Mr. Ley left for Thief River Falls this morning, where he has just completed the compilation of a directory for that city.

Merry Christmas To All

The Times wishes its readers, one and all, a Merry Christmas.

Throughout the civilized world this is a season of thanksgiving and in no section have the people greater reason for rejoicing than in these United States of America. In times like the present it may sometimes be a little hard to believe that the acclamation "Peace on Earth and Good Will to Men" is being very generally observed, but the hope must be entertained that the horrible examples of not being heeded is being brought home so forcibly that it will hereafter be impossible to disregard it.

The twelve months elapsing since last we celebrated Christmas have been a time of peace and prosperity for the people of the United States. Not only have we produced bountifully for our own needs, but have out of our plenty found enough to aid those so unfortunately situated that without help they must have undergone the most dire suffering. We have not, perhaps, done all we could, but this is a good time to rectify the omission.

No matter how general the prosperity which surrounds us, there are always those who will be lacking in the things which go to make up the proper Christmas surroundings unless someone more fortunately situated comes to their aid. Look up one such and do something to brighten his or her outlook. If you do, you will find that this will be the merriest Christmas you ever spent.

And go to church. You may find a new significance in the Old Story.

◆

The proposition to ask the passage of a law which will make it possible for the city of Thief River Falls to borrow a sum of money from the surplus to the credit of the municipal light plant and use it for other purposes looks most sensible. It is not the purpose to permanently divert this money to any purpose other than that of the upkeep and extension of the plant, but as this is a matter for future consideration, whereas other expenses are now crowding the city, it seems wise to allow the use of this money for such purposes as may seem best. These funds will be taken over the same as any other loan, drawing a fixed interest rate which will also revert to the credit of the light fund. In this manner the money used will be secured right in the city and the interest paid will also remain here. Any permanent diversion of the funds of the light plant would undoubtedly meet with strenuous opposition as it is realized that it may all soon be required to meet the cost of extension and improvement. Under the proposed plan, however, the money would always be available even though it became necessary to convert the certificates of indebtedness held by the light department into cash. This could be done at any time and the city would still be saving the interest which would have been paid to outsiders in the meantime. The idea looks sensible on the surface and if there is no constitutional barrier, could be made to work for the temporary relief of any municipality situated as is Thief River Falls at this time.

◆

It seems as if an accident such as that occuring at Vergas last week, in which four persons lost their lives, would be well-nigh impossible in these days, and serves to again prove that too much care can not be excercised in crossing car tracks. Just how a man, well acquainted with the section and with the train schedules, could take such inexcusable chances is a mystery. The train was on time and the autoists had just left a residence in which there must have been clocks to warn them of the hour. Persons acquainted with the conditions at Vergas say that the headlight of the locomotive can be seen for a mile down the track and that long before the spot at which the accident occurred is reached the powerful reflector casts its rays some distance on each side of the right-of-way. A young woman member of the party, who was so badly injured that she has since died, stated that it was simply a case of the driver attempting to cross in front of the train. He was warned to stop by the other occupants of the car, but kept on going, consequently the blame is all his. The railroad company had provided every safeguard, the members of the train crew were exercising all reasonable care, the newspapers of the section were continually sounding warnings against this very kind of carelessness—and yet this man placed every member of his family in danger of their lives by totally disregarding every precaution. So long as people will take chances of this kind, just so long will the records be filled with accounts of such horrible accidents.

◆

The practically unanimous vote with which the proposition to bond the school district carried is highly gratifying. It proves that the people are fully aware of the danger of permitting things to longer continue as they have for some time in the past and that they are desirous of having the only possible remedy applied as quickly as possible. The bonding proposition came within five votes of carrying unanimously, which is probably as near as any district the size of Number Eighteen ever came doing so. It is altogether likely that had the vote been larger the percentage of those casting their ballot in opposition would have been still smaller. At any rate, the matter is now settled in the most satisfactory manner and Thief River Falls will have a new school building before the beginning of another winter.

◆

Daily newspapers contained the information that a congressional committee having the matter in charge had decided to report for favorable action a bill providing for national prohibition. The same papers stated in another article that Wisconsin brewers had declared for law and order and a general clean-up movement for the purpose of curbing the low saloon. Had the last named movement started sooner it is altogether likely that congressional action would not have started so soon.

NEARLY 300 SIGN DRAINAGE PETITION

State Commission Asked to Recommend Legislative Aid For Relief of Floods.

A petition containing the names of over 300 signers in Pennington, Polk, Clearwater and Red Lake counties was this week forwarded to the state drainage commission, asking that the legislature be urged to make an appropriation to help the flood relief work. The petition sets forth that the state is at present the owner of much land that would be benefitted by any work done for flood control and that the entire northwestern section of Minnesota would be vastly benefitted if the Red Lake river were straightened and the channel deepened.

No attempt was made to reach all the people interested, but enough signatures were secured to prove that the need of some action being taken is generally recognized.

There were 157 signers of the petition in Red Lake county, this being the largest number secured in any one place. Pennington county had 67 signers, Clearwater county 51, Polk 12 and Beltrami 4.

A copy of the petition was also sent to Warren, but Secretary Laird of the local club, who had the matter in charge, was informed that Marshall county is not interested in the matter. Most people will be surprised to hear that Marshall county is not interested in getting proper drainage and flood control as it was generally supposed that the western part of that balliwick was as badly off in this respect as the balance of the Red River Valley.

MAIL EARLY AND INSURE PARCELS

This is Advice of Postoffice Department to Those Who Would Send Packages by Mail.

Among those to whom this gladsome Christmas season means a great deal are the postal clerks and mail carriers. It means an enormous amount of extra work, long hours, irritable and unreasonable patrons, heavy loads and—in the Thief River Falls office at least—a serious handicap because of lack of room. Postmaster John Morgan therefore wishes the people to know that there are many things they can do to lighten the work and aid in the prompt dispatch of the business of the office.

First and foremost of these is the mailing of parcels early. The amount of postal business all over the United States is multiplied a hundred fold at this time and there is no possible way of working the extra help which would be necessary in order to keep things cleared away. If people would take into consideration the fact that even though parcels are mailed early they are liable to be later than usual in delivery they would be more certain to follow the postmaster's advice. Christmas parcels are for the most part third class and parcel post. These must wait at any postoffice until the first-class business is out of the way, and it must be remembered that the amount of this last named business is much greater at this time than during any other sesaon of the year.

Therefore, get your packages started early. You will thereby insure their prompt delivery and at the same time ease up just that much on an overworked postoffice crew.

The Value of Insurance

Mr. Morgan advises that all parcels of any value be insured. Conditions in the office to which they are addressed may be no different from what it is here and all intermediate offices are cluttered up the same way. The possibility of a package getting lost is far greater at this time than when things are running at their regular gait. The insurance rate is so low that it is poor economy to send parcels without it. A package valued at $10 may be insured for three cents; $25 value, five cents; $50 value, 10 cents; $100 value, 25 cents. Besides the protection assured in case of loss, the insured parcel gets the best care in transit and is given the best argument when it comes to deciding upon what is to be handled first. This is surely worth the small fee charged.

But whatever you do, mail early.

THE COMMERCIAL CLUB

> "I will not condemn the Commercial Club for failure to secure results unless I myself, personally, have given time, thought and diligent effort to help secure these results."

"Modern Building" is one of the new magazines which will be found upon the reading tables of the Commercial club during the coming year.

Word has been received from E. V. Willard of the state drainage board, to the effect that the petitions bearing on the subject of the overflow of the Red lake and Red Lake river, will be taken up at the next meeting of the board.

Word has been received from Plummer that active measures will be taken by those who attended the meeting in that city last week in favor of a state highway from Brooks to Thief River Falls through Plummer and Hazel, to bring the matter to a successful end. The meeting was very enthusiastic and a committee was appointed to wait on the county boards of Pennington and Red Lake counties and have them take such steps as are necessary to have the road in question made a state highway.

A new directory of commercial and civic organizations is now in preparation by the publishers of the American City, which magazine is one of those on file at the club.

The meeting of the State Dairymen will be held at Lake City on the 15th to 17th of January. Acording to Secretary Fred Heen of Osakis, this city would stand a good chance of landing the next state convention if proper representations are made at this forthcoming Lake City gathering. It is likely that a represntative will be sent to this meeting by the Thief River Falls Creamery association and the Commercial club will back up his efforts to secure the summer convention.

The directors have decided that the club rooms shall hereafter be closed not later than 12 o'clock at night, or before that time if no one is present and occupying the rooms for any purpose. This not only conforms to the general usages among similar clubs in the state but will help out on the light question.

The total receipts from the presentation of the annual club play at the Auditorium last week were $187.65, with expenditures of $115.65, leaving a surplus of $72 to be applied toward meeting the deficit caused by the dairymens' convention. The expenses were divided as follows: Director, $50; manuscript, $5; draying, $1.75; sewing, $1.50; cloth, $6.95; cosmetics, $3.05; printing, $33.75; costumes, $13.65.

PLEASED CROWD AT CLUB PLAY

"My Friend From India" Proves Even Greater Success Than Press Agents Predicted.

GOOD WORK THROUGHOUT

Cast Well Balanced and Every Character Handled With a Keen Understanding of Its Proportionate Value.

People who went to the Auditorium last Friday evening expecting to see a regulation home talent play, with its lagging action, halting dialogue, ridiculous exaggeration and silly costuming, were disappointed.

"My Friend From Inidia," put on by the Commercial club under the direction of Mrs. C. A. Pitkin, was without doubt the very best play ever attempted by a club which has become famous for the excellence of its productions. From the raising of the curtain on the first act until [illegible] the large audience had laughed themselves tired there was not a dull moment in the entire period required for the presentation.

An All-Star Cast.

Every member of the company carried off their part well. Any attempt to extoll one above the other would be foolish as well as dangerous. The lines were read with expression and judgment and the acting carried out with dignity as well as charm. The title role of the play, Augustus Keene Shaver, was handled by T. Glenn Harrison in a manner that proved that it was not the first time he was up against a similar proposition, although he had not before appeared on a Thief River Falls stage. His work was uniformly good, the different requirements of the character being met with ease and confidence.

Charles A. Pitkin as the retired porkpacker, Erastus Underholt, added considerable to an already excellent reputation as a character artist. Underholt has money to throw away and wants to break into New York society because of his two daughters, Bernice and Gertie. Miss Eva Messerschmidt and Miss Eva Johnson as the daughters, were charming, and if their ambitions were not in every respect realized, at least they should have been. Miss Olive Booren as Marian Hayste, a good-hearted, well-meaning city girl, succeeded in convincing everybody that she sincerely did wish to help the westerners as much as possible, even though she seemed to be none too firmly established herself.

Miss Synneva Grindeland as Arabella Beekman-Streete, was a really charming widow who, even while industriously engaged in securing her "third," carried on her campaign with dignity and intelligence. The work of Miss Grindeland and Mr. Harrison in the mirror scene was a superior piece of acting and has been one of the episodes most frequently commented on since the performance.

And then there was "Tilly." The program stated that Tilly was "a maid," which information was superfluous. The part was taken by Miss Laura Stoppel and was either written especially for her or she has been putting in a number of years training for the part. Tilly is of a very practical turn of mind in spite of the fact that "two tousand yar ago she stood on one foot and blink on the sun." Miss Stoppel furnished rather more than her share of the fun of the evening.

Lawrence A. Hermanson as Charlie Underholt, was the male character most in evidence after Shaver and old Erastus himself. He did very well with a rather difficult part and would have been better still had he emphasized the love scenes a little more. Chase F. Mix as the genuine Rev. Tweedle, made this rather subordinate character stand out and shine. His acting was perhaps the most finished of any in the cast. A. M. Stewart, as Tom Velentine, appeared for the first time before a local audience. His part was not important and he did not make the mistake of trying to make it appear so. Scott Laird was the servant at the bidding of everyone, a situation for which his job as secretary of the Commercial club admirably fits him. A. H. Fasel, who played the policeman, was only in evidence in one scene, but that was enough to prove that in a more important part he would have been a winner.

The presentation surprised everyone by its excellence and it has been suggested that the Commercial club make theatricals a regular thing during the winter months. It is likely that the parties making this suggestion have no idea of just how much work this would entail, but the move would be popular.

The Commercial club and members of the cast wish to express their appreciation to the following business houses for the loan of costumes and accessories: The Sapero company for gowns; Thief River Music company, piano; Mrs. B. E. Dahlquist, hats; E. O. Mogensen, gent's clothing.

WORK PROGRESSING IN SPITE OF COLD

Foundation at Sanitarium Going Forward While Cement Laying at Dam Has Never Stopped.

L. H. Nelson, a member of the Minneapolis contracting firm in charge of the erection of the tri-county sanitarium building near this city, has completed the excavation work and has a crew employed putting in the foundation. He has so arranged matters that the cold weather has hampered the men but little. The basement has been roofed over and divided into several small compartments. These have been kept sufficiently warm by heaters specially constructed for the purpose and there has never been the slightest danger of any damage being done. This partitioning off of the space permits the men to work over a small heated surface which is allowed to dry as soon as completed, when a move is made and another similar section treated. The scheme is working very satifactorily and Mr. Nelson says that it has only been necessary to lay the crew off for one day because of the cold.

Work at Dam Continues.

Very much the same plan is being followed by Superintendent John Hedlund, in charge of the construction work at the Kretszchmar-Schrieter dam. He has enclosed entirely the full length of the section on which he is at work, keeping his mixture from freezing by the use of steam pipes. Mr. Hedlund says that shortage of cars has prevented him from receiving gravel as rapidly as he could have used the material up, but that he has not been held back but very little because of the cold. The work is now progressing very satisfactorily.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Olson, who reside on a farm near Weldon Sask., and who are visiting in Thief River Falls at the home of Mrs. Olson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Bothun, left for Red Lake Falls Monday afternoon to spend a short time visiting with friends.

112 POINTS MADE IN TWO GAMES

This Is Record of Johnson's Basket Tossers So Far—North Stars Defeated Last Thursday.

TO PLAY ALUMNI TONIGHT

Team Has Nearly "Point-a-Minute" Record Judging From Big Scores Rolled Up in First Two Games of the Year.

Coach Johnson is perfecting a "point-a-minute" basket ball machine for the season of 1916-17. Out of the two games played Johnson's men have scored 112 points during 120 minutes of playing. Had the first string men been left in during the entire two contests, instead of having run in second team men, the machine would undoubtedly have made more than "a point-a-minute."

On December 9 the Thief River Falls high school team defeated the Warren quint by a score of 48 to 26.

Last Thursday evening at Lincoln gym, the North Star college five walked the plank in the season's first home game to the tune of 64 to 8. The collegians managed to find the hoop twice, making four points, while the balance of the scores resulted from free throws.

Captain Conner and his team mates ripped off play after play with a precision that was remarkable and at times swept the Warrenites off their feet. They were completely outclassed and bewildered as to where the ball was in some instaces. Thief River started scoring right after the tip-off, "Dutch" Zeh making two points after two minutes of playing. The first half ended in the locals' favor, 36 to 4.

Beginning the second half Coach Johnson decided to run in some second string men so as to give Warren a slight chance and at the same time give his boys a workout. There was a steady stream of second and third squad men going into and out of the contest during the second half.

Captain Conner of the high school quint played in good form, shooting baskets from very difficult angles, and starred at several occasions by sending the sphere into the basket from the center of the floor. Alvin Holzknecht, ex-football captain, also played a stellar part, holding the Warren forward down to no baskets. He also made many of Thief River's points. Fouls were not frequent and the game throughout was tame.

The North Star college players lacked team work and this, coupled with poor basket shooting, lost the game for them.

Team Looks Good.

The team for this year looks as if it will make a strong bid for top honors in Nothwestern Minnesota, according to present views. The showing in the first two games in which the opposing teams were snowed under heavily and which nearly gives them the name of being a "point-a-minute" machine, is highly gratifying for the season's first work.

With Conner at the head and with many of the husky and versatile foot ball players in the game, followers of the Thief River Falls high school basketball team are showing an awakened interest. Many state that the local team will make a strong bid for the title, which may later send them to Northfield to battle for the state championship. Preparations are being made at the Lincoln gym to accommodate the large crowds that will be in attendance at the games during the winter.

Officials: A. Johnson, umpire; Miller, of Warren, referee. Time—15 minute quarters.

Game Tonight.

Johnson's men will be seen in action again tonight at the gym, when they clash with a five made up of ex-basketball players, who at one time have fought to uphold the high school's honor on the maple boards. Many of the former stars will again don the uniform for their evening's performance, and they promise to give the high school team a good run although they expect to lose. Among those who will be in uniform will be Maurice Fossum, Oscar Paulson, Alfred Adolphs, Harold Schmitt, Lawrence Hermanson, and others.

Hunt Volunteers Advice

Sunbeam: "Must act now, if Federal building is wanted," says the Bemidji Sentinel. We don't blame Bemidji for trying to land a Federal building for their city, but in the meantime it seems to us that it is about time for the Commercial club of Thief River Falls to pinch themselves, and see if they are awake. The city attorney of Bemidji has instructed the people to write their Congressman urging him to try and get an appropriation through this session of Congress. Their congressman will of course seek the aid of the other Congressmen from the northern part of the state to assist him to get the appropriation, and what else could our Congressman Steenerson do but to assist them, if there was no claim from his district to have this Federal building located at Thief River Falls? You fellows down there at Thief River Falls slept while Bemidji stole the Normal school, which belonged to you. Now do not take another nap while they get this Federal building. Wake up. Take this matter up with our Congressman at once. He is ready to help you, but let him know that you claim this building for Thief River Falls.

HOLIDAY BUSINESS VERY SATISFACTORY

Heavy Trading Began Saturday and Has Continued Steady—Stores Are Well Stocked.

The annual Christmas shopping rush may be said to have opened in Thief River Falls last Saturday. Merchants report sales for that day as being among the best in the history of the city, and the trading has continued good since that time. The weather has been cold and has no doubt kept many at home who would otherwise have come to town to make their purchases. It is possible that money is not quite as plentiful as in some previous seasons, but there seems to be enough on hand to provide a very Merry Christmas.

The stores of the city are in excellent shape to stand any kind of a demand. Goods were bought early in the season in anticipation of a brisk business and before prices were nearly as high as they are at present. This enables the merchants here to sell the goods at practically the same figures as heretofore, although wares secured at a later date will all have to bear the burden of the advances made throughout the summer.

The storekeepers are all pleased with the business thus far transacted and anticipate that the last three days of this week will be record breakers.

WANTS REPRESESTATIVES FOR IMPORTANT MEETING

Commercial Club, Fair Board, County Commissioners and City Council Asked to Respond

Several important meetings are to be held during the month of January in which this city is more or less interested. First among these is the meeting of the All-Minnesota Developmnt association at the University farm, St. Paul; Jan. 5 and 6., to which the Commercial club has been asked to send a representative committee.

President Johnson would like to get in touch with anyone who expects to be in the Twin Cities at either or both of the above dates so that they can act as a delegate to the meeting from this city. The board of county commissioners and the city council are also expected to send delegates.

The state fair board also meets in January. Secretary LaBree of the fair association has received word to send a delegate from that organization.

On January 17th there will be a meeting of the League of Minnesota Community clubs, comprising the secretaries of the various Commercial clubs of the state. President Johnson has signified his willingness to aid in the issuing of a call for this meeting. Fred T. Lncoln, former secreary of the Thief River Falls commercial club, is secretary of the state organization.

Address Mail Correctly.

Postmaster Morgan advises that complete and acurate addresses are essential to prompt mail delivery and that all patrons should co-operate with the Department to the extent of seeing that all mail originated by them bears a street number, or room in case of an office building, in addition to the name of the city and state. Attention is invited to the fact that patrons can be of material assisance in the education of the general public with respect to this requirement by having all stationery intended for transmission in the mails printed with their complete office or street address. It is respectfully requested that all patrons put forth an effort to relieve the postal service of the burden imposed by the growing evil of incompletely and improperly addressed mail.

First Term Closes.

The first term of the eleventh year of the Northwest school of Agriculture is drawing to a close. In spite of somewhat unfavorable crop conditions the attendance at the school was normal. A large number have registered for the term after Christmas. The students in attendance from the territory around Thief River Falls are Carl Isaacson and Henry Nabben.

The holiday vacation opens on December 23rd and the winter term begins on January 9th. New classes will be organized at that time so that students who were unable to attend during the fall term will not be handicapped in any way. Circulars describing the short courses offered in various lines of farm subjects, farm motor work and home economics training for girls, will be mailed free upon application.

Nat Head, Red Lake Indian Forrester, was in the city Monday. He arrived from Gonvick and left for Warren to look after some ditch proceedings in behalf of the Red Lake Indians. The ditch in question touches on the reservation, and is in charge of Irving Quist, a surveyor for Marshall county. Mr. Head talks English fluently.

Johnson-Nelson

The home of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Nelson, 602 Main avenue north, was the scene of a pretty wedding Saturday afternoon when their daughter, Rose Gertrude and Morten J. Johnson were united in marriage, Rev. O. P. Staavas officiating. Only immediate relatives were present at the ceremony. Miss Amy Nelson, the bride's sister, and Olof M. Thompson acted as witnesses.

The living room was decorated with white carnations and the dining room with pink and cream roses and ferns. The bridal party entered the room, where the ceremony was performed, to the strains of Mendelsohn's wedding march, executed in a splendid manner by Miss Theone Walker.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of cream satin with a tunic of flesh colored Georgette crepe, bodice of satin with hand embroidery and sleeves with overlay of satin and finished with a pique edge. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony a delicious four course dinner was served. On the table stood a tall cut glass vase filled with pink and cream roses. This formed the centerpiece, while at each cover lay a pretty place card. The happy couple departed on the afternoon train for their honeymoon trip to the Twin Cities and points in Illinois.

The bride is one of Thief River Falls' fairest daughters and has resided here all her life. She completed her education in 1913, when she graduated from the Lincoln high school. Since that time she has been employed in various offices in this city as a stenographer.

CHANCES GOOD FOR WELFARE WORKER

Thief River Falls Likely to be One of Cities Securing Services of Trained Nurse.

Miss Effie Hamry, who is the local Red Cross Seal campaign manager, has announced that the funds raised in Thief River Falls this year will be devoted to the salary of a visiting nurse. For every 6,000 seals sold in our city this year we shall be able to have the services of a visiting nurse to do school, tuberculosis or infant welfare work for one week.

The Minnesota Public Health association has a number of nurses working under its supervision in various communities of the state, as the result of seals sold last year. Some of the small places have enjoyed the services of a nurse for a week or two, and some of the larger ones, the size of Thief River Falls, sold enough of the seals to have a nurse for several months.

It is anticipated that we shall sell enough seals to have a nurse at least two months during the year 1917.

Send Her As YOUR Messenger

THROUGH her, you can do much—with Red Cross Christmas Seals. She goes into the homes of the unfortunate in your community and helps conquer Tuberculosis. Every Red Cross Christmas Seal you buy helps to save the sick and to prevent infection.

Use RED CROSS CHRISTMAS SEALS on everything you mail or wrap.

If you cannot get Red Cross Christmas Seals in your town, write to the AMERICAN RED CROSS, Washington, D. C., for as many as you want at 1c each.

A most welcome Christmas gift in the shape of a nine-pound boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Glenn Harrison on Tuesday. Glenn has permitted other interests to suffer somewhat since the advent of the youngster, trying to make up his paternal mind whether to start him out on a reportorial assignment or have him begin learning the lines of "My Friend From India." There is a well founded suspicion among the neighbors that as soon as Mrs. Harrison again takes her customary interest in affairs these propositions will be quite unanimously vetoed.

Dr. C. J. Anderson met with a painful accident Saturday afternoon, when he was returning to this city from Middle River on a Great Northern freight train. The freight had reached this city and was about to pull up to the depot with the caboose. Dr. Anderson was standing in the caboose reading a calendar, when the engine coupled onto a string of cars and the jar was sufficient to throw him several feet, and he struck the corner of a board. He suffered a deep gash over his left eye, Several stitches were taken in the wound a few minutes after the accident.

"God's Country and the Woman," shown at the Lyceum theatre Monday and Tuesday evenings by the Cheerful Charity Circle in conjunction with Mr. Brockway, theatre manager, proved a big drawing card, and a tidy sum was made to be used in making happy during the Yuletide some of the less fortunate. Monday evening the show house was crowded to its capacity, it being necessary to hang out the "S. R. O." sign before the close of the first performance. Tuesday's show was also well patronized. The picture, according to some, was one of the finest and most picturesque of any yet shown on the screen in Thief River Falls. The scenes from the land of the deep snow and big trees seemed to please all present, while the acting stood out par excellence. Manager Brockway and the C. C. Circle are to be commended on their worthy enterprise.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Sedlacek, 1617 Fifth street, San Diego, Cal., former residents of Thief River Falls, are sending their Christmas greetings to their friends in this city. Souvenir folders of San Diego and cities in Mexico have been received by many here from the Sedlaceks. It will be remembered that they left this city April 1, 1914, in their Mitchell six, bound for Los Angeles, Cal. They arrived there June 1 after a very pleasant trip across the continent. For over a year they have been residing at Santa Monica, Cal., where Mr. Sedlacek conducted a garage, but they have now moved to San Diego, where Mr. Sdlacek and his son, Oliver, are in the automobile business, having the agency for the Mitchell car.

POOR WEATHER FOR THE MAKING OF ICE

Opening of Municipal Rink May be Delayed and for the Most Unusual Reason.

The recently completed municipal skating rink was to have been opened tonight with all the ceremonies usually attending a function of this kind, but the opening has been postponed—and for the most unusual reason. It is too cold to make ice.

The fence and warming house have been completed and it is only necessary that a sheet of frozen water cover the enclosed space in order to make glad the hearts of all lovers of this particularly favored winter sport. It is no go, however. Fred Haug of the committee in charge of the erection of the rink, has on several occasions begun action with a fire hose, but has had to give it up as he was doing more harm than good. The extreme cold of the past few days has turned the water into ice as soon as it has struck the ground, with the result that the entire surface as far as the experiment was tried presented a succession of ridges. Fred fianlly became discouraged and gave the job up.

John Bratrud, another member of the committee, says he will watch for a break in the temperature and will souse the water on as soon as it can possibly be done. Should the weather moderate at night he has so arranged matters that he will be right on the job before another sub-zero spell gets in its wor.k Every attempt will be made to have the rink in running order by Sunday.

RECRUITING OFFICE ESTABLISHED HERE

Corporal H. Howard in Charge of Enlistments—May Remain in City Permanently.

Corporals H. Howard and M. E. Coombler of the infantry division of the United States army, are in charge of the recruitng station onened last week in the court house here. They have already succeeded in interesting a number of young men in army work and expect that the inquiries will come fast when it becomes generally known that a regular enlistment office has been opened.

Corporal Coombler will leave shortly to take up his post at another city and the office here will be looked after by Corporal Howard. Although still a very young man this officer has seen much of the world and also considerable service. He has been at practically every point in the Western hemisphere to which the government has of late years found it necessary to send soldiers, his papers proving that he has acquitted himself with credit in Cuba, Porto Rico, Guatemala, Honduras, San Domingo and Mexico.

The enlistments now sought are under the new army regulations which went into effect last fall. These provide that the term of nlistmnt shall not last longer than three years, while if sufficient progress is made in mastering the drills the time may be cut down to one year.

Corporal Howard believes that service in the army now offers many opportunities for young men enlisting with the idea of making arms a profession. From a salary of $15 per month an ambitious and capable man can work himself up to a very good position during his first enlistment. The pay gradually increases until it reaches $75 per month for quartermaster sergeants, band leaders, and others. Corporal Howard admits that everyone enlisting cannot hope to reach to these distinctions, but almost any sincere man is now offered very good opoprtunities in the army.

Should the enlistments warrant such move it is likely that an office will be maintained here. Corporal Howard says that this would likely be the result if there were three or four enlistments each month.

THE FARMERS

OF PENNINGTON AND ADJOINING COUNTIES

By M. A MATTISON

Cattle Pay Best.

That cattle pay best on the farm has been the experience gained by Ole Barhals, who lives on section 15, New Solum. Mr. Barhals has been on the place for thirty years and the farm is the homestead of his father, John Barhals, who died eight years ago. The aged Mrs. Barhals is still active and in good health and keeps house for her son, who has not yet entered the ranks of the benedicts. The farm is well provided with buildings and is nearly all under cultivation. Since the large county drainage ditch was put through in that vicinity every acre of the place can be worked in any kind of a season, and fields that were formerly too wet for cultivation now produce the best crops. Mr. Barhals has a nice herd of cattle and makes good money out of the dairying business, being one of the steady patrons of the Rosewood sub-station of the Thief River Falls Co-operative creamery. He has had good luck with the Northwestern dent corn and has no trouble in raising a fully matured crop each season. A considerable part of the farm is also devoted to the raising of clover and timothy, which grows in abundance and provides excellent feed for the live stock.

Makes Money Raising Sheep.

Twenty-three years ago O. B. Hall and family came from Grand Forks, N. D., and moved onto their present place, section 13, New Solum township. Mr. Hall is making a pronounced success of farming and says that one of the best propositions on the place is his flock of sheep, which now numbers about twenty head. This is all Mr. Hall can conveniently winter, but during the summer season he has a much larger flock. In addition to the sheep he is wintering twenty-six head of cattle and is milking eight cows at the present time. The cream is shipped every week to the Farmers' creamery at Thief River Falls, of which Mr. Hall is a share-holder. He finds that the feed products of the farm can be converted into more cash in this way than in any other, and he does not have to rob his land to make a good thing out of farming. Mr. Hall is one of the men who have ceased to experiment with corn—he raises it and raises it successfully every year. Two years ago he had a field of corn that yielded 75 bushels an acre, which isn't half bad for this part of the state. With proper care in the choice of seed and the cultivation of the ground, Mr. Hall insists there is no doubt but what good corn can be raised here and he is proving it year after year. The farm is provided with a good set of buildings and is in a high state of cultivation.

Getting Nicely Started.

Just east of the Hall farm, on the same section, lives Nels Johnson. Mr. Johnson has lived on the place for four years and is getting a very good start with stock. During the months of the year when he is not busy with work on the farm, Mr. Johnson puts in his time working on the section for the Soo. Mrs. Johnson is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Hall, mention of whom is made in the previous paragraph.

Went South—Came Back.

On section 13. New Solum, lives Peter Sagmoen. The farm is the property of his father, B. Sagmoen, who has retired from the farm and lives at Rosewood. Mr. Sagmoen has operated the place for the past two years and has met with success. While he was raised here and knew the possibilities of the country, he some years ago became imbued with the idea that he could make more money by farming farther south and accordingly he went to Murray county, in the extreme southern part of the state, where he rented a farm for three years. Although he raised good crops down there, he soon found out that the higher rent and other expenses made it a losing venture and he decided to return to his old home. He finds he can raise just as much here on cheaper land and for this reason has more money left at the end of the season than is possible in Murray county or any other place where a many has to pay enormous rent for the privilege of operating a farm. In Mr. Sagmoen's opinion this part of the state is destined to become a stock raising and dairying country and the fact that it is naturally adapted for this method of farming is a good thing for the farmers as this is the surest and most profitable system where it can successfully be carried on. A good set of buildings and other improvements make the Sagmoen place an ideal farm home.

A Successful Renter.

On section 18, New Solum township, lives K. T. Knutson, who came here two years from Norman county. Mr. Knutson is renting the place from the owner, C. H. Gunheim, of Holt, but expects to be able to purchase a place of his own in a year or two. According to Mr. Knutson, farming is a paying proposition in this country and if a man does not have to go too deeply into debt to get started he is reasonably sure of making money. Although the past season was an unfavorable one for the raising of small grain, Mr. Knutson is getting along very nicely with the aid of his cattle, which produce for him a steady income every month of the year. The farm tenanted by Mr. Knutson is in a good state of cultivation and the buildings and other improvements are above the average.

No Trouble in Raising Corn

On section 15, New Solum township, reside Mrs. Belle Sorenson and her three sons, John, Peter and Sellmer. The Sorenson folks are not strangers in the neighborhood, having resided continually upon the same place since homesteading it thirty years ago. Previous to their arrival here they had made their home in Norway, and they do not hesitate to state that the move was the best one they ever made. The Sorenson farm is one of the very best in the township and is producing an abundance of all kinds of crops every season. Corn has been raised successfully here for many years and it is a common occurrence to harvest fifty bushels and over per acre. Northwestern dent has proved the safest variety on this farm and it will continue to be raised in the future. Mixed farming, with a good herd of milk cows, is the system followed by the Sorensons, and they receive a nice check each month for cream sold to the Thief River Falls Co-Operative creamery. As a reminder of olden times the original log cabin on this place still stands and is still used as a residence. It is one of the best of this type of building that it has been the privilege of the writer to see and it makes a very comfortable home. A large barn completed a couple of years ago furnishes ample quarters for the live stock and makes it convenient for the Sorenson boys to do the chores.

More Clover Is Needed

From experience ranging over a period of thirty years spent in the county, P. N. Peterson, who resides on section 14, New Solum township, has come to the conclusion that farmers would be away ahead if they seeded their farms to clover and other tame hay and went into the stock raising and dairying business exclusively. Mr. Peterson came to this country from Ottertail county and has lived on his present farm for nine years. He has recently sold his farm, but expects to buy another in the neighborhood before spring and will not sell out his live stock, machinery, etc. Mr. Peterson has engaged for some years in mixed farming, and raises an abundance of fodder, corn, clover, etc., each year. In the form of a good herd of cattle he also has the necessary machinery for converting these products of his farm into ready cash. The one crying need for the rapid development of this country is more settlers to engage in actual farming, according to Mr. Peterson. There is too much vacant land and there should be some way to get farmers from other sections of the country to come here and help bring the land into the state of cultivation that it should be. Some sort of a community organization with the purpose of keeping outsiders informed on the good points of this section of the state could do wonders in this respect.

Drainage Unfairly Assessed.

On section 14, New Solum township, resides F. O. Jarshaw. Mr. Jarshaw has lived on the place for fourteen years and came to this country from Wisconsin. He has traveled extensively and says he has never seen a place where the man who is willing to work stands a better show of making a good living and laying up something for the future than right here. It has been Mr. Jarshaw's experience that drainage is absolutely necessary and he has also found that sufficient care is not always exercised by those in charge of the matter of assessing the benefits to the farmers affected. It often happens that farmers who get the least benefit from a ditch are forced to bear a large part of the burden of its construction. Mr. Jarshaw has recently completed a fine new home on his farm and he has a good set of barns and other out-buildings. He has also demonstrated beyond a reasonable doubt that corn and potatoes can be grown here successfully and he is harvesting good crops of these each season. A good herd of cattle and the diversified system of farming keep Mr. Jarshaw on the safe side in his operations and he is making consistent progress every year. He is a booster of the first order and never lets pass an opportunity to say a good word for this part of Minnesota.

Cheaper Farm Loans Necessary.

For the past eighteen years E. A. Silverness has made his home on section 10, New Solum township. He has been in the county for thirty years, however, having come here in company with his father, who homesteaded a quarter section a mile to the north of the present Silverness home. The old gentleman still makes his home with his son and the two conduct the half section farm in partership. The Silverness farm is well stocked with dairy cattle and this is proving the most profitable venture on the place. Fine corn is grown every year and the crop turned out exceptionally well the past season. Next year it is the intention to increase the corn acreage to a considerable extent and in future years it will be one of the main crops. Good crops of clover and timothy are also raised every year, producing an abundance of fine feed for the dairy cattle. The past season beans were tried as a side line and from one-fourth of an acre an income of $30 was netted. Cheaper rates of interest on farm loans would be of great benefit to the farmers of this section, according to Mr. Silverness. More ready money would make it possible to build barns and silos and add to herds of stock, thus making farming much more profitable. With the present high rates of interest and the difficulty in arranging for time loans, farmers are afraid of going too deeply into debt for fear of being unable to meet their obligations when they become due.

An Early Pioneer.

Following a very active life from the very earliest pioneer days, Mrs. Ingeborg Olson has retired to her 40 acre farm on section 10, New Solum, and is enjoying in peace and comfort the declining years of her life. Mrs. Olson came to this section thirty-three years ago from Blue Earth, this state, and has seen many hardships. The place originally homesteaded by Mrs. Olson is on section 15 and has been the home of her son, Anton Gulseth, for a number of years. Mrs. Olson has as her companion her granddaughter, Ida Gulseth, and the two live here in perfect harmony with the world. Outside of a small garden they cultivate no crops and Mrs. Olson's finances are in such shape that she need not worry on that score. With her son living across the road to give his assistance whenever it is required, she really has nothing more to wish for. She has a fine home and its hospitality can be vouched for by the writer. City life with its attendant noise and confusion has no temptation for Mrs. Olson and she will remain where she is until she answers the final summons and goes to her eternal reward.

SOO XMAS PRESENT TO HELP IN LIVING COST

Bonus Based on Family Size to Be Distributed Among Mill City Office Employees.

General office employees of the Soo Line in Minneapolis will receive one of the largest Christmas gifts ever made there, on account of the high cost of living. The presents will be in the form of cash bonuses of 5 to 10 per cent of their annual salaries to all whose monthly pay runs below a certain standard.

Cards have been sent through the general office building to employees asking every one, whether married or single, to state whether or not others are depending upon him for support. Any employee who is at the head of a family, in the sense of being the principal support, will be considered in the same class as married employees. Clerks and other employees who have families, have been asked to set down the number of children and ages.

President Pennington, of the Soo Line, said that details of the plan were not yet ready for announcement, but that an effort was being made to equalize the cost of living as far as possible.

Soo Line is Growing.

In railway circles there is a well founded rumor that the Soo Line is about to purchase the Minneapolis and St. Louis, which will open up a valuable territory to the Soo. Recently the Soo purchased the Spokane and International railway.

Gloria's Romance

by MR. and MRS. RUPERT HUGHES

Novelized From the Motion Picture Play of the Same Name by George Kleine

Copyright, 1916, by Adelaide M. Hughes

SYNOPSIS.

Pierpont Stafford, with his daughter Gloria, is wintering at Palm Beach. Gloria is a vivacious but willful young lady who chafes under the restraining hand of a governess from whom she repeatedly escapes. Her childish capers cause young Doctor Royce to fall in love with her. Becoming lost in the everglades she falls into the hands of the Seminole Indians. Gloria falls in love with her rescuer, Freneau. Five years later she leaves school and meets Freneau at the theater; he has forgotten Gloria. Later Freneau persuades her to forgive him. Gloria's sister-in-law, Lois, becomes intensely jealous and Doctor Royce discovers in her an ally. Freneau takes leave of Gloria. She sees from her window an attack made upon him. Doctor Royce convinces her it is delirium. A telegram followed by a letter, comes from Freneau. She replies but her telegrams are returned. She accidently sees the supposed suicide of Freneau reported in the paper. Gloria swears to find the murderer of her lover. Royce tells what he knows of Freneau to Mr. Stafford. They seek to prevent scandal from enveloping Gloria. She accuses them of conspiracy against her. Gloria sets about to run down Freneau's murderer. Royce warns Mulry to tell Gloria nothing. Gloria calls on Mulry and there sees Lois, who is also worried. Gloria's suspicions are aroused. Royce endeavors to show her the difficulty she faces. Gloria goes to David's country home. She meets Mulry who flees at once. Gloria insists on going to Palm Beach. Again she sees Mulry there. He leaves for the North. She is recognized by her one-time captor, the young Indian chief. He tells her that Royce and not Freneau was her rescuer at that time. Gloria attends night court; she sees Mulry there, also the tramp who attacked Freneau. But Judge Freeman releases him. She follows the tramp when he leaves the court and falls into the hands of hold-up men. She finds herself in a low saloon dance hall, and is selected by one of the patrons as his partner. Doctor Royce, however, follows her and when he attempts a rescue, calls down a riot on their heads. The hall is raided and the crowd, including Gloria and Royce, is arrested and taken before Judge Freeman. The newspapers feature Gloria's arrest. Reporters surround the house. Casimir arrives with the child Gloria promised to adopt. She orders Royce to take Casimir's wife to the Stafford home. She follows Trask and lands on a houseboat to hear him accused of Freneau's murder.

SIXTEENTH EPISODE

A Modern Pirate

People who raise children are sure of a life of surprises. They would have more than they get if they could see everything that goes on.

Pierpont Stafford had been kept pretty well surprised of late by his daughter's actions. In his haste he had said that she was probably "on that canal barge in the river." He did not expect to be taken seriously by the fates. But there his daughter was, at least on another barge, miles farther up the stream but drifting downward. She was in command of the ship, at the tiller, trying to steer the bulky hulk.

When Gloria saw that the captain of the tug had noticed the slight detail of the parted hawser and the lost convoy she was vexed. When she saw the tugboat turning around to recapture the barge she felt that it would be hard to explain about the prisoners she had fastened down in the cabin. She supposed it was mutiny or something for a passenger to tie up captain, crew and cook, and change the course of the ship. She believed that people who did that were usually hung from the yardstick or something. She hoped that the old barge did not have such a thing on board.

The nearer the tug came the louder the pilot and the crew yelled at her and the less Gloria wanted to meet them. She had never met any tugmen and she felt no ambition to get into their social set. It was growing so dark by now that they could not see who was at the tiller, and they kept calling her: "Trask" or "Oh, Jed!"

At length Gloria decided that she was not needed any longer. She had noted a little boat bobbing along after the barge and she felt that she might as well capture that. It was more nearly her size. She would be safer alone on a skiff than on the barge when the tugmen released that fiend of a Trask. He had planned to kill her before she tied him up. He would certainly do no less now that he had escaped. Jed had evidently picked himself up from the rocking-chair trap, untied Trask and unmuffled Nell. The three had been pounding and howling for some time. The hatch held for a while, but they were going at it now with something as heavy as a battering ram. It would yield soon surely and then where would she be?

She ran to the edge of the barge and hauled in on the painter attached to the little boat. The barge was swishing in the tide and it was trying to run over the skiff. But Gloria had no other avenue of escape. She hung across the edge of the barge and dropped into the skiff. Her aim was not very accurate and the river nearly got her. But she sat down quickly and steadied herself and the boat. She began to ply the oars with great eagerness, but little progress.

At length she noticed that she had forgotten to cast off. She ran to the bow and had to untie the painter. The wet knots were torture to her delicate hands, but at last she was free and the boat fell away from the barge. The river was dark and menacing, and its current was like some invisible geni dragging the skiff away to its lair. Still, when Gloria saw the tug come alongside the barge and make fast, and saw Trask, Jed and Nell dash up the companionway and meet the tug-hands on the deck, she felt that the current would be kinder to her than the men would have been.

What explanation Trask and Jed made she could not imagine. Evidently it was not a good one, for the crew from the tugboat gesticulated violently and it looked as if there would be a big fight. Gloria hoped that they all would throw one another overboard.

The tugboat crew went back to their quarters. Trask ran back to stare at Gloria. He shook his fist at her and she rowed faster. But the barge moved northward, following the puffing tug.

Gloria breathed a sigh of relief at her escape. Then she realized that after all Trask had also escaped. She was so angry at this cancellation of her success that she started to row back after the barge. What she would have done had she overtaken it she did not stop to think. The current prevented the possibility of knowing. The Hudson streaming into the sea carried Gloria with it in spite of all her efforts at the oars. She gave up at length and devoted all her energies to rowing ashore. The nearer shore was the further from her, because a landing on the west bank would compel a lengthy roundabout to fetch her to her home on the east bank.

She rowed for the New York shore and crept toward it slowly, though the boat turned southerly so fast that she feared to be swept on down to the city's crowded water pavements. It was lonely out there on the dark river. Her arms ached with fatigue, her silken hands were pouching with blisters.

Finally she felt the keel grate and she landed on a rocky point. She forgot the little dinghy and it slipped back and danced on down the river to some unknown fate. Gloria felt better on the firm earth and she grew angry again. She stared at the barge, now a mere smudge on the vague horizon.

She whispered to herself: "I'll get him yet, and he won't get away!"

Gloria thought of her father's yacht. She believed that it had been recently put into commission. If only she had it now! But it was loafing at anchor in the river at her father's country home, the last she had heard of it.

To get a yacht! That was her small requirement now. She must get home to get it. She plunged along till she came to a lonely road. After a time a farmer appeared driving a wagonload of empty milk cans. Gloria envied him his throne on the high seat. He was the rich one now and she the pauper. He called out: "Have a lift, miss? How fur ye goin'?"

"I'm going as far as you'll take me, please."

"Get in, then, miss, and we'll jog along."

The farmer was naturally anxious to know what errand his guest was on, but she did not exchange information for hospitality. She grew so impatient for faster progress that when the farmer came to his own lane and turned into it she was glad to get down and walk.

Gloria trudged till she was worn out. All the motors she saw seemed to be going the wrong way. When finally she heard one coming behind her she was so delighted that she turned and held out her hands. She wanted to embrace the driver for being so kind as to be going her way.

Anybody looks well coming to a rescue, but the young man driving the southbound automobile was too good looking for his own comfort or anyone else's. He accepted Gloria as a passenger with more enthusiasm than she relished. He jumped to the ground, lifted his hat, assisted Gloria into the front seat, and took his place beside her. He shot the car forward with a swagger and his compliments began to puff out of him. Gloria endured a number of his flatteries because she needed his motor, but she grew angrier, and when he began to call her "Cutie" she decided that his usefulness had ceased to exist. One of the twain simply had to get out and walk. Gloria was sure that it was not to be herself. She plotted carefully how to throw this new skipper overboard. The victim helped her to an idea by leaning close to her and murmuring: "Kind of cozy, Cutie, huh?"

"Very," said Gloria, foaming at his impudence.

"We make a great team, huh?"

"Great," said Gloria.

"Atta girl," said the youth and slid his left arm around her.

Glora laughed harshly and somehow managed to knock the hat off her wooer's head. The wind whipped it back and the driver shut off the engine and threw on his emergency brake.

"So sorry," said Gloria, smiling in the dark.

"At's all right, Cutie," said the young man. "Back in a minute."

He slid from his place and ran back along the road for his hat. Gloria had been studying his methods of running the car and comparing it with his own. As soon as the driver started back Gloria pressed the self-starter button and put the car into motion.

The man heard the engine sputter and he yelled, "Hey!" thinking the gasoline to blame. He was sure that he had forgotten to stop his engine and he was afraid that the car was running away with its pretty passenger. He ran after it, forgetting his hat in his alarm, lest Gloria be dashed to pieces on the side of the road. The clean way the car leaped across the hill and the hand Gloria waved in farewell reassured him as to her safety, but filled him with disgust and with fear that she were some new type of automobile thief.

Gloria's conscience was clear. The young impertinent had earned his punishment. The walk would do him good. She would restore his car to him by hunting up the owner of its number when she had time. If necessary, her father could buy the car. It was a nice car. She loved its appetite for miles and fed it well. And finally it brought her back to her home.

As she ran in through the gates she almost collided with her father's car. The piercing searchlight blinded her until she heard his voice from behind it. He welcomed her to his arms and was so glad to have her safely there again that it was several minutes before he began to scold her.

She asked him to hush, please, as she had no time to waste and she wanted to borrow his yacht and its entire crew for a while. Pierpont refused the loan with all the severity of a bank president, but Gloria calmly sent for the sailing master and in the presence of her father gave him orders to be ready as soon as she had her long-delayed dinner.

Doctor Royce and Judge Freeman were at the house. They sat with Gloria while she told them of her adventures as she ate a hastily reassembled dinner. She said to Doctor Royce: "I am surprised, Stephen, at your leaving me alone by myself to solve my new problems. Of course, you didn't know where I was going, but you usually manage to arrive in the knick of time. You ought to have been there."

"I wish I had been there," Royce replied. His heart ached at the sight of her beauty and at the adventurous spirit which sent her tender body into so much danger with so few resources.

"I won't let you quit my sight again, Gloria," he said and stared with such idolatry that she felt afraid that he was loving her too well.

"Then you will come along and help me to capture the man who killed my beloved Dick?"

"All right, captain," said Royce with a plucky smile, though her allusion to Freneau cut him to the quick.

Judge Freeman seemed to be agitated by the plan Gloria outlined for the pursuit and capture of Trask. "You must not permit this, Pierpont," he protested, anxiously. "Your daughter has no legal right to arrest the man Trask. If she should capture him she would have to turn him over to the authorities and she would have to face a public explanation."

Gloria retorted with vigor: "You had him, judge, and you said that he slipped out of your fingers. Now you advise me not to go after him again. You let him escape once and want me to let him escape a second time. Why, I do not know. Why don't you tell me why?"

Judge Freeman looked away guiltily. His eyes turned to Pierpont and his answer was to him and not to Gloria.

"You must realize, Pierpont, that such a cruise is no place for a girl of Gloria's position and breeding."

"That's true," said Pierpont. "It's all off, Gloria."

"No, it isn't!" Gloria cried. "If you don't help me to catch that fiend I'll get the police after him."

"What police?" Pierpont laughed. "The local chief? He couldn't capture a snail."

"The man is out of his jurisdiction, anyway," said the Judge. "It would be quite a complicated process getting the fellow arrested and he would probably be hard to find."

"My way is a very simple way," said Gloria. "Instead of sending, go! That's a good motto. But the judge will neither send nor go, and once more I want to ask him why?"

The judge was not used to being cross-examined and he bore it illy. He faltered:

"Some day you'll know and you'll realize that I acted for your peace of mind."

"My piece of mind depends on capturing that man!" Gloria answered curtly, "and anybody that wants to can come along now."

Royce saluted and waited for orders. Pierpont decided to go. Judge Freeman refused and repeated his warnings, but Gloria would not even tell him good-by. She, her father and Royce went down to the yacht landing and were carried aboard in a little boat, the oars flashing in the moonlight and the sailors coming handsomely alongside.

It was splendid to feel the deck underfoot. Gloria chuckled at the contrast between the yacht and the canal boat. She rejoiced in the famous speed of the engines and she could imagine the prow slicing the waves in pursuit of the lumbering barge. She was on a racehorse and she was chasing an ox. But racehorses are delicate giants and so are race cars and racing yachts. This sea rover declined to rove. There was engine trouble in the works and the captain brought the hateful news that the yacht could not budge for several hours. Gloria was bitterly disappointed and completely baffled.

"It's the old story of the tortoise and the hare," she grumbled. "While we are sleeping here the barge is moving along every moment. We'll never find it. It'll get away for keeps this time."

"Never despair," said Royce stupidly.

"Don't speak to me," said Gloria. She flounced away to the stern deck to be by herself. Then the soft breeze blew away her anger and her furies. In spite of herself she fell asleep. Her father came to urge her to go to her berth, but she refused to stir.

"You'd better sell this old tub and buy a motor boat," she said.

Later Gloria was half-awakened by a little chill. She was too cold to say where she was and too drowsy to move. She saw a shadowy figure tiptoeing up. She knew that a steamer rug was gently laid over her. Half a-dream, she murmured, "Thank you, Stephen."

She did not know whether he heard her or not.

When she awoke the yacht was redeeming its lost reputation. It was hastening up the river at a splendid gait. The sun was just crossing the eastern wall of hills.

Gloria went to her stateroom to bathe and dress for a new and busy day. Breakfast was served on deck, and the Palisades slid back with encouraging rapidity.

Before Gloria had finished her breakfast a tug, towing a barge, was sighted on the northern edge of the water. Gloria went to the pilot house to stimulate the pursuit. She had great fun calling down the tube to the engineer to go as fast as possible and then still faster. She tried to hurry the pilot, too, but he explained that he could not increase the speed by turning his wheel. Gloria asked him numberless questions and made him teach her how to steer the yacht. At first he helped, but soon she could throw the wheel over to the queen's taste.

Gradually the barge grew larger and larger and its ugliness more distinct. The men on the tug paid no heed to the yacht following closely. But Gloria saw a gaunt figure on the barge watching anxiously. Soon he was distinguishable as Trask. Gloria left the pilot house and went forward to make sure. She recognized him as he recognized her. She called to him to surrender. He laughed. Then she saw that he had a rifle in his hand.

Trask had been mystified beyond endurance by the whole transaction. He had left Freneau's body in the moonlit snows in front of the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument on Riverside drive. He had watched the papers for days, expecting to read in each one an account of the finding of the body.

He had been driven frantic with anxiety by the silence of the journals. He had begun almost to wonder if he had really killed his man or only dreamed it, when suddenly the headlines had flared out with the statement that Freneau's body had been found in the lower bay, miles below the spot on Riverside drive where he had left it empty of soul.

He had cudgeled his brain trying to conceive who could have disposed of the evidence of his crime and with what motive. The papers said that Freneau had committed suicide, and nobody disputed it.

Trask had begun to grow used to the hope that his crime was to go undiscovered, to remain another of the many instances that disprove the old fallacy, "Murder will out." It seemed safe for him to return to his business as bargeman, yet he had no sooner entered his own cabin than a strange girl appeared, unexplained, and charged him with the murder. She avowed, in fact, that she had seen him do the deed.

Then she escaped, but after that nothing occurred to hamper Trask's northward voyage in his canal boat. His night was sleepless, however. He started up dozens of times, seeing Gloria's little white finger pointing at him, hearing her cry out again:

"You killed him! I saw you!"

The daybreak found him stretched out at the stern of the canal boat, looking south for some possible avenger. He saw the yacht swooping up the stream long before Gloria made him out. He seemed to feel that the uncanny speed of the boat meant business. So he hunted out his old rifle and kept his eyes on the yacht, as it joined with relentless persistence. Finally he made out Gloria on the prow, pointing at him.

Now Trask felt assured that Gloria was a witch. She had appeared in his cabin, then vanished, only to reappear with a posse of yachtsmen. He felt that he had been a fool to let her dupe him when he was alone. Now she had a little army and navy of her own. But if he got rid of her he would be rid of the only witness against him. So he reasoned with a madman's logic. He leveled his rifle at Gloria. He took careful aim. He fired!

4 FIRE ALARMS IN 5 DAYS IS RECORD

Two Fires Occur at Soo Railroad Yards—A Blaze at Penney Residence Sunday.

Four fires in five days have occurred so far this week, all being directly due to the cold wave that has hung around Thief River Falls for the past week and a half.

The first alarm was sent in Sunday noon from the D. A. Penney residence, where a fire originated when an attempt was made to thaw out a water pipe with a blow torch. In thawing out the pipe, a quantity of hay, which had been placed near the pipe to keep it from freezing, became ignited and caused a slight blaze. There was no damage from water, most of the damage resulting from smoke.

Sunday evening the second call was sent in. A caboose on the Soo track near the coal chute was found in flames by Henry Hoium, yard clerk, immediately following a slight explosion in the car. The fire is believed to have started from an overheated stove. The department made a spirited run to the yards, but on arrival it was found that the hydrants did not fit the city's hose and further that the hydrant was frozen up. A switch engine was brought up alongside the burning caboose and the "blow-off cock" was opened, letting out a volume of steam. This tended only to increase the flames. The caboose was then taken to the stand pipe, where it was given a "shower bath," but by this time the fire had reached a stage which made it impossible to save the car.

Monday morning another alarm was sent in from the Soo yards. This time the yard office was in danger, fire being caused from an overheated stove. The flame confined itself between the roof and the ceiling, making it difficult to reach. Upon the arrival of the department the blaze had been extinguished. There was considerable damage from water, although none of the records suffered injury.

The fourth and final alarm was registered Tuesday evening about 5:30 o'clock, when the fire laddies were called to the Christ Johnson residence on State avenue. This was more or less of a false alarm as nothing was found in the way of a fire that necessitated calling out the department.

A NEWSPAPER WITHOUT STORE "ADS" WOULD BE AS INCOMPLETE AS A CITY WITHOUT STORES

Try to imagine a city without stores! You wouldn't like to live in it. It would be the lonesomest place, the least livable place, imaginable.

Can you imagine a newspaper without store advertisements?

Such a newspaper would lack the same element of interest which would be missing in the city without stores.

Next to a city without stores, as a place to shun, would be a city without good stores.

Next to a newspaper without store ads, as something to avoid, would be a newspaper without adequate, informing, interesting, store ads.

If you never considered what a big part is played in the life of this city by its stores, think for a moment what the city would be like without them.

If it has never occured to you how much of the news interest of a newspaper is found in its store ads, try to imagine your newspaper without these ads.

Gloria's Romance

by MR. and MRS. RUPERT HUGHES

Novelized From the Motion Picture Play of the Same Name by George Kleine

Copyright, 1916, by Adelaide M. Hughes

The Tell-Tale Envelope.

Shots that are fired from guns do not often hit the people they are fired at. The coolest target puncturer grows excited when his target is a man, and more excited when it is a woman. Gideon Trask was not an expert with the rifle. He had been crazy enough to take the life of Dick Freneau—to wring it out of him with his hands. He thought he had escaped detection until, with an appalling abruptness, Gloria Stafford—though he did not know her name—charged him with the murder and declared that she had seen him commit it before her very eyes.

He had not been quite crazy enough or quite wise enough to kill her then and there when she was alone and at his mercy. He thought to repair the consequences of his delay by shooting her down now that she reappeared with an armed force at her back. So he fired at Gloria where she stood in front of the pilothouse demanding his surrender.

They told Gloria afterwards she was brave as a veteran and faced the assassin coolly. But she told the truth when she said that she was paralyzed with fear, so frightened that she could not even show her fright.

When the muzzle of Trask's rifle spat at her, she heard the bullet sing past her ear. She was already wondering whether she were dead or alive, whether the next one would strike where she heard the first one thwack. The pilot grunted and mumbled: "He got me!"

She forgot Trask and whirled round to see the pilot fall across his own wheel. The yacht wavered and swerved in its course. Gloria was the nearest to the pilothouse. She had been a pupil of the pilot only a few minutes before. She ran to him, lifted him aside and seized the wheel by its projecting spokes, just in time to keep the yacht from crashing into the barge at full speed. She made a sharp turn, the yacht swerved and ground along the side of the barge. Gloria meanwhile was alarmed more for the life of the pilot than her own. She began to call "Stephen! Doctor Ryce!"

But Doctor Royce was too busy to hear her call. His immediate interest was not in a wounded man, but in wounding a man. When he saw that Trask was aiming his rifle at Gloria again, his whole being thrilled with a ferocity unknown to him before. To save Gloria from being hurt he would have massacred a hundred Trasks.

He leaped aboard the canal barge before the deckhands could make it fast. He sprang at Track and seized the rifle he held. He twisted it out of Trask's hands before he could fire a second shot.

But he was pounced upon at once by Jed, who pinioned his arms and flung him to the deck. The captain of the yacht, following close after Royce, laid hold of Jed and dragged him away before he could harm Royce. But he left Royce supine on the deck, with Trask's fatal clutch on his throat.

Gloria, wondering at Royce's not answering her call, clung to the wheel till she saw the cable fast, then she ran forward to the edge of the upper deck and saw why he failed her. He was in the baleful clutch of Trask. Gloria, looking for a weapon of rescue, could find nothing but a life preserver tied to a rope. She began to swing it about her head in circles of increasing diameter, like a lasso.

It was revolving at a violent rate when it reached Trask. It smote him aside and dazed him into loosening his grip for just a moment. This was long enough for Royce to shake free and regain his feet. He hurled himself at Trask, but Trask, seeing his victim erect and menacing, lost courage and ran. At the edge of the barge he slipped and sprawled. He would have fallen between the yacht and the barge into the river if the yacht had not swung alongside in time to catch him. It held him up, but it held him as in a giant lemon squeezer, and it squeezed his bone and flesh with dreadful force.

Gloria saw the agony in Trask's face and the sight was horrible. She saw the yacht swing free again. Trask's body dropped into the water.

Now the life preserver that had served as a weapon returned to its original purpose. Gloria threw it to Trask. Suffering as he was, he seized it automatically and hooked his elbow through it.

Now Royce also reverted to his purpose as he knelt down and clutched at Trask's collar as Gloria hauled him in like a great fish. One of the deckhands fended off the barge and the yacht and kept them from closing in again like scissors blades. Another deckhand helped Royce drag Trask to the deck.

He was heavy, and his agony seemed to increase upon him when the desperate necessity of swimming was over. He fainted the moment his dripping body was stretched out, and Doctor Royce had, as it were, to save his life twice, first to bring him back from the swoon of pain, and then to bring him back from the annihilation of his shattered machinery.

Meanwhile Jed was locked in a ferocious wrestle with the captain of Pierpont's yacht, who called the engineer to his aid. As the engineer told Pierpont, "I had to knock him senseless before I could knock any sense into him."

And now Nell Trask, who had turned from one battle to another, tearing now at Royce and now at the captain, recovered from the stupor with which she had watched her father's disaster and, leaping over to the yacht, knelt by him, calling to him with wild appeals and threatening Royce as his slayer.

Gloria came running down from the upper deck and stood gazing at the result of her work with utter dismay. Trask was crushed and perhaps killed. Jed was unconscious, and Nell seemed to have gone out of her mind.

Gloria felt that her head was covered with blood guilt. The sobs of Nell were heart-breaking. Gloria forgot all her resentments against Nell and her father. She forgot that Nell had kept her prisoner. She saw only that Nell was a motherless daughter who saw her father dying.

She caught the girl in her arms, held her in spite of her resistance, murmuring: "Forgive me, you poor child! It's all my fault, but we won't let your father die. Doctor Royce is a splendid physician. He saved my life. He will save your father's. You can trust him."

Nell also forgot all other emotions in that one necessity for hope. She turned eyes of prayer on Doctor Royce and beat him on the shoulder with imploring hands, urging him to bring her father back. It was not Royce, but, doubtless, nature that brought Trask back to consciousness. Royce received the credit and the gratitude, however, when Trask's eyes opened and his tortured lips moved.

Nell and Gloria were overjoyed at the miracle, but Royce was the more alarmed the more he studied Trask's body with fingers searching everywhere and finding everywhere the hints of broken bones and internal lacerations. He pretended none the less to be confident, for the sake of all three, Trask and Nell and Gloria.

A bucket of water restored Jed roughly to what wits he had. He came up yelling, as if the fight had not been interrupted. They had to tie him up to keep him from continuing the war.

It had taken this much time for the tugboat to round upon its course and come alongside the barge. The crew had watched the scrimmage with impatient envy. They came aboard now ready for carnage. They were armed with weapons of every sort, and with zest for blood. The yacht crew gathered itself to meet the onset of these re-enforcements.

Now came the opportunity of Pierpont Stafford to use some of the heaviest artillery of battle—finance. He was too old and too little used to fisticuffs to attack roustabouts with blow for blow. He put up the shield of his pocketbook. The captain of the tugboat led his little army forward in a wedge, demanding with tugboat emphasis:

"What kind of pirates are youse, anyhow, and what you beatin' up the old man fur? For two cents I'd—"

Pierpont answered:

"That's what I want to know. What would you do for two cents?"

"I'd t'row de whole bunch of youse into de river."

"I see," said Pierpont, "and what would you charge not to?"

This stumped the captain. He could not quite make out Pierpont's drift. As he pondered, Pierpont gave him a chance to look into the depths of a wallet full of bills of a size and number that had not been seen hitherto in his circle. Pierpont kept moving the bills under the tugboat captain's very nose. They had the effect of cat nip to a cat. The captain began to purr, also to reach out for the money.

"Let us understand the transaction," said Pierpont. "This man Trask is wanted on a serious charge. He had escaped from the jurisdiction of Judge Freeman. He was probably bound for Canada. I happened to have steam up in my yacht, so I came after him. I'll take him back and deliver him to the judge. You take the barge on up the river and deliver it to the consignee. Is that the agreement?"

"That's the agreement, sir," said the captain, "pervidin' I'm took care of proper."

"Would those take care of you?" asked Pierpont, holding out two bills.

"What does 'C' stand for?" asked the captain. "I can only count up to 'double X.'"

"C stands for a hundred," Pierpont explained.

"Two C's will just about take care of me, sir," said the captain. As soon as he touched the bill he touched his hat, called his crew back to the tug and set forth once more on his twice interrupted cruise. Pierpont ordered Jed released to care for the barge. He asked Nell to go with him, but she preferred to stay with her father, at Gloria's invitation.

Nell was sullen with Gloria, but Gloria was neither surprised nor resentful. She would have thought less of Nell if she had been too easily placated by her father's persecutors. Trask was no more responsive to Royce's ministrations. He was bewildered with pain and terrified by his captivity. He was as little grateful as a lion that has been trapped and bound.

To Royce he was doubly a mystery, both as a patient and as a criminal. If he were guilty of murdering Freneau, then his life belonged to the state, and it was Royce's curious duty, as a citizen physician, to save Trask's life so that the state might take it.

Royce had done what he could to keep Gloria from investigating the murder. He had lied to her, knowing that Freneau had been killed by some person from some motive unknown to him. He had told Gloria that her account of witnessing the murder was only a delirium. He had lost her confidence and her respect, and they were precious to him. He did not know that Gloria was tormented by a dual emotion toward him, one of suspicion and rancor, one of gratitude and affection. Gloria was helpless in the quarrel of her emotions. She could neither love nor hate Royce perfectly, neither trust nor distrust him.

nstantly She Recognized the Envelope.

While Gloria was at a little distance Royce was questioning Trask in a low tone, trying to persuade him to speak the truth, warning him that he might not have a long opportunity to unbosom himself of his crime. But Trask's mouth, distorted with suffering, was also twisted with a sneer of hate. He would not even answer Royce's questions.

Pierpont had drawn Gloria to one side, and he said: "Well, now that you've got your man, what are you going to do with him?"

"Find out why he killed Dick," Gloria said, "and then turn him over to the police."

"In spite of all the publicity?" Pierpont asked.

"In spite of all the publicity," said Gloria.

Pierpont gave up the fight. He loathed the prospect of a newspaper scandal, but if it had to come, he must brace himself to endure it. He had done all that he could legitimately do, and more than that, to thwart the police, and now that the necessities of the law compelled him to give the law the right of way or suffer the consequences. He resolved to turn Trask over to Judge Freeman as a representative of the law and let the judge assume the future responsibility.

When the yacht reached the country house at length, Pierpont sought for Judge Freeman. He had left the house. Pierpont would have sent Trask on after him, but he was too weak to be moved farther. Besides, Royce was insistent in giving Trask the full benefit of his medical and surgical knowledge, and asked for a guest room to lodge him in.

Now Trask was stupefied indeed. He had expected that his enemies would throw him into a prison cell. And they had installed him in a luxurious chamber in a palace. And his daughter was established in an adjoining room whose fittings would have satisfied a princess. They almost terrified the poor habitant of a canal boat.

Royce decided to motor into the city to fetch his surgical instruments and bring out his assistant. While he was gone Gloria stole into Trask's room to question him, but he had passed into a state between sleep and coma, and she dared not trouble him. She found that Nell had fallen asleep, too, worn out with emotions of every sort. Gloria stole away to her own room. She was tired out, too. She felt that she was on the brink of discoveries that would mean everything to her. She was a little afraid of them.

She paused at her window, and, seeing Doctor Royce just stepping into his car, she mused on him. He was an increasingly interesting mystery to her, very much at her beck and call in some ways, and absolutely beyond her control in others.

He looked back and waved his hand. She thought he waved to her and she answered his salute. Then she saw that he was signaling to someone else and had not seen her. It was a woman he was signaling to, for he lifted his hat. Gloria wondered who it was, and felt an odd quirk of jealousy. It needled her like a stitch in the side.

She would have felt a sharper stab if she had known that Doctor Royce was waving at Lois. Lois was with Casimir's wife, reading to her and comforting the sick woman as best she could. The sight had startled Doctor Royce, as much as it pleased him.

The wild and ruthless Lois had given up her perilous intrigues, indeed, if she could give herself to the monotony of ministering to the lonely and the sick and take pleasure and pride in such service as a substitute for a social lawlessness that had made her hateful in Royce's eyes.

As he rode on into the city he felt a great elation. He was not a religious man, but he loved a wholesome, healthful soul as well as a body that was clean and well. He had kept Gloria from learning of Lois' affair with Freneau for Gloria's own sake. Now he believed that under cover of the deception Lois' own soul had been enabled to redeem itself.

He felt that Lois had earned the right to have back the letters she had sent to Freneau. Whether she would wish to destroy them or keep them as a reminder and warning from her evil past, they belonged to her and to no one else. Certainly Royce had no further use for them.

When he reached his office and gathered up his instruments he took the package of letters from the safe and put them in his pocket. Then he returned to the motor and sped back to the Stafford country home.

It was a long ride and he was troubled about many things, about Gloria's determination to probe into the secrets that could mean only a cruel disillusionment for her, about the chances for Trask's recovery, and the dangers that threatened the Staffords if the newspapers or the police learned with what independence of the law the prisoner Trask had been captured and held. He wondered at his own connivance in the matter, and he shuddered to think how many illegal acts are constantly committed by the most respectable people.

When he reached the Stafford estate he stopped the driver of his car and got out, telling the man to take the case of instruments up to the house. Royce had seen Lois strolling about the lawn in a mood of solemnity. He felt that the time was appropriate for the surrender of the letters. He wondered if he had the right to deliver them over to her. Yet he knew that he had no right to keep them. It seemed that he had so tangled himself in the net of the Freneau affair that anything soever he did was bound to be wrong.

He hurried to Lois and called to her. She turned to him sadly and weakly. He knew too much about her for to face him without shame. He brought a little smile of relief to her along with a swift blush of guilt when he said:

"Lois, I have decided to give back to you the letters you sent to Freneau. I read only one of them, and I have forgotten, I think, what it said. I think you have earned them back, and I advise you to burn them up at the first opportunity."

He took the long envelope from his pocket and her hand was just moving forward to take it when he saw her blush vanish in a flash of pallor.

"My husband!" she whispered. Royce thrust the envelope back in his pocket just before he felt David's hand on his shoulder and turned to look into David's smile of comradeship.

Royce had to play-act with all his might to pretend a cheer that he was far from feeling. Once more the loathsome phase of deceit was uppermost. He could not control himself under David's eyes and he made an excuse to move on.

"I was looking for Gloria," he said.

"She's over by the marble pool," David answered. Royce moved on, knowing that he was watched. He did not want to meet Gloria with those letters in his pocket, but he must go on with the role.

Gloria seemed a figure in a painting as she stood at the edge of the blue water in its white frame, with the formal shrubbery and the graceful colonnade back of her. The boy Stas was on one knee at her feet. He was sailing a tiny sloop on the tiny ocean.

As soon as Gloria saw Royce she beckoned to him with a cordiality that she regretted at once, remembering that someone else had waved to him before. Having just seen him speak to Lois, she felt sure that it was to Lois that he had waved when he left the house.

When Stas saw Doctor Royce he left the sloop to its fate and ran whooping to him. Royce caught the child in his hands and tossed him high, then brought him to the level of his shoulder for a hug and kiss. He loved children and children loved him.

He did not notice that the little groping hands of Stas had happened on the envelope full of Freneau's letters and lifted it stealthily from his pocket. When he set the boy's feet on the ground again Stas ran away, brandishing the envelope and challenging Royce to a game of tag.

Royce's heart bounded with alarm. If the child had carried a stick of dynamite in his hand it would hardly have been more dangerous.

"Give me the letter, my boy," Royce said, putting out his hand.

Stas laughed and ran a little farther off. Royce followed, demanding. The more anxious Royce was the more Stas liked the game.

Royce was in mortal terror lest the letters fall from the envelope and somehow Gloria would learn their nature.

He made a dash for Stas. Stas whisked behind a juniper and circled it. Royce chased him through a clump of rhododendrons.

Gloria began to laugh and encourage Stas. At length Royce made a frantic rush for the boy, and Stas, growing breathless, made for Gloria's arms and flung himself into them, panting: "Take it! take it! take it! quick!"

He placed the envelope in Gloria's hands. She was about to return it to Royce without a glance. But the heavy seals on the back caught her eye and she looked down.

Instantly she recognized the envelope. It was the one that had fallen from Freneau's pocket the night he came to bid her good-by. It was the one that she had seen the crouching figure take from Freneau's pocket after Trask had murdered him and run away!

SHORT COURSE

The annual short course of the Thief River Falls high school will open on Monday, Jan. 8, at the Lincoln building, and will contiue in session three months.

The character of the work will be practical and immediately applicable to affairs of everyday life. The studies offered will be reading, spelling, penmanship, business English and correspondence, practical and business arithmetic, agriculture for boys with special emphasis on stock breeding and judging, sewing for girls, farm law, elementary accounting, manual training. The instruction will be given by a special teacher, assisted by the industrial teachers in the school.

The course is open to all persons over sixteen years of age, regardless of their former standing in school, but no student regularly enrolled in the local schools this year can transfer to the Short Course. It serves its best purpose and can accomplish the greatest good for those young men and women who have not attended school for several years and who now feel the need of some practical school training.

There is no expense; everything is free to all comers.

Only one school in the state had a larger Short Course enrollment than Thief River Falls last year and it is hoped that the 1917 class will be as large.

It is desired that those who intend enrolling notify the undersigned as soon as possible. Rooms and board can be secured at reasonable rates.

Address all inquiries to J. H. Hay, Superintendent.

FACTORY AND FARM PRODUCTS

Also Elaborate and Novel Store Displays Will Feature Second Mid-Winter Fair.

MUCH INTEREST CERTAIN

Success of Last Winter's Exhibit Will Have Effect of Stimulating Everyone to Still Greater Effort For Coming Event.

Arrangements were gotten under under way this week for the big midwinter celebration of the people of Pennington county. This industrial and agricultural exhibit will in all probability be held during the last week of January, but the exact dates have not yet been fixed.

Need Farmers' Help.

The first exhibition of this kind was held last January under the auspices of the Commercial club and proved in every way so successful and valuable that it was decided to make of it an annual event. Particularly were the farmers interested. Coming at a season when they have more time than at any other period of the year, and also when interests and amusements of any kind are at their lowest ebb, this fair filled a particular place in the routine of their lives and they attended in large numbers.

Will Need Products.

The general farm products competition will be carried out substantially the same as last year, but will be greatly enlarged and extended. It is the intention to have a live stock exhibition in connection this year, this being a new feature. Other new departures may also be added when the general committee meets to make the final arrangements.

No definite outline of the program is available at this time. A general meeting of the committees will be held soon, at which time the dates will be decided upon and other preliminary matters arranged.

The Committees.

The executive board of the Commercial club will have general supervision over the fair and have selected the following as special committees:

General committee—President Geo. P. Johnson, Sec. Lair, Supt. Hay, M. C. Cutter, C. W. McDaniel, Jess LaBree and Abe Sapero.

Reception—C. L. Hanson, W. W. Prichard, J., Olaf Gramstad, H. Dahlen, Geo. G. Johnson, Lars Bakke, Dr. F. H. Gambell, Dr. O. F. Mellby, Supt. Hay, G. Halvorson, T. A. Way and H. O. Loken.

Dinner—C. W. McDaniel, H. Brumund, J. Provencher, B. Knudson and Geo. Leimers.

Program—C. A. Pitkin, Supt. Hay and Scott Laird.

Farm Clubs and Invitations—Henry Werner, H. Prichard and D. Gustafson.

Auto Section—J. H. McKinney and three assistants to be named by him.

High School section—M. Schmitt.

Merchants' Section—H. O. Loken, E. K. Aasen, A. Langseth, A. Lieberman, W. A. Devenny and A. Sapero.

Farm Section—J. B. Conner, Peter Engelstad, Wm. Fredericks, Albert Johnson, Sen. D. P. O'Neil, Henry Hanson and Henry Werner.

Auditorium Arrangements — The general committee.

Manufacturers' Section—M. Barzen, J. J. Richter, F. H. Herrick, P. W. Sharp and J. M. Bishop.

Publicity—M. C. Cutter, R. H. Ross and Scott Laird.

Woman's club—Mrs. Larson and committee.

BUILDING RECORD OF YEAR IS LIGHT

Total Outlay in City for Public and Private Improvements During Year About $70,000.

Building operations in the city of Thief River Falls have not been particularly brisk during the year just closing. When compared with 1915 the falling off is so great as to be startling until the fact that during the last named period at least two of he very best buildings in this section of the state were put up, these being the new depot of the Soo railway and the Citizens State Bank building.

Two New Garages.

But two business blocks of any importance have been put up during the past twelve months, both of which are garages. That of A. C. Rasmussen & Co., completed late this fall, cost $10,000, while the cost of the building erected for a similar purpose by M. McFarland is down on the building permit as costing $4,500.

No High-Priced Dwellings.

While the records in the office of City Clerk A. H. Fasel show that there were quite a number of alterations and extensions to dwelling houses made during the year, only four new ones were reported. These were put up by the following: H. O. Loken, $3,000; Zion Lutheran church, $2,500; M. N. Benson, $2,000; A. E. Stern, $2,500. Besides these the Winton-Nichols Lumber company erected a warehouse at a cost of $2,000. All building work of this nature of which any record is to be found totalled $31,035.

Dam a Big Item.

The cost of the work thus far done on the Kretszchmar-Schrieter dam is estimated at $17,000. This is one of the big undertakings of the past summer and will not be completed until well towards spring.

The Public Work.

Sewer and water works construction covered a large share of the money expended for improvements. The three test wells for the water works system were drilled at a cost of $1,044.45, while extensions cost in the neighborhood of $4,000.

The cost of laying new sewers was practically $13,000. Of this work that performed in District No. 2 came to nearly $8,000, that along Zeh street in District No. 4 to $2,500, the Atlantic avenue sewer cost $2,000, and that along Main street $400.

The amount expended for the maintenance of streets was about $3,000. This includes the cost of keeping the snow off the sidewalks, cleaing crossings, sprinkling, etc.

More Light Users.

Electric light extensions were not encouraged since the dam went out last spring as this handicapped the system for power. Besides this the cost of material has been much higher than for years and it has been thought advisable to postpone expansion until things again assume their normal status. Superintendent Peterson states that there are about 50 more light consumers than a year ago and that no attempt has been made to increase the number. The closing down of 13 saloons in the city had some effect upon the amount of current used, but it was more than offset by the demand in other directions.

Business Generally Good.

When the unsettled state of affairs throughout the country generally is taken into consideration, the showing made must be considered very satifactory. There has been no boom, but neither has there been a depression of any kind. The business men have all enjoyed a very fair season of trade and labor has been generally employed. While unusual conditions have tended to make times unusually good in some sections, the northwest has jogged very much the same as before and will consequently have no serious readjustments to make when things again resume their usual trend.

SMALL GAIN SHOWN BY NEW DIRECTORY

In Spite of Removal of Biggest Industry City Shows Increase During Past Two Years.

The new city directory for the year 1917 has just been issued by John H. Ley and is being distributed to subscribers this week. It shows that the number of inhabitants over the age of 1 years in Thief River Falls to be 2281. It has been found by frequent demonstration that by using two and one-half as a multiple the actual population is secured, and this would give hte city at this time a population of 5,702 persons.

The book shows that in spite of the fact that the saw mill has gone out of business in Thief River Falls since the previous directry was issued, thereby causing loss of employment to a large number of men, the city has held its own in point of population, a gain of 64 being indicated. In 1915, when the former directory was gotten out by Mr. Ley, the same system of figuring as that now employed was used and indicated a population of 5,639.

Mr. Ley says that it is noticeable that the western side of the river has held its own and even gained a few in population, while the east side is not as populous as at the time the last book was published. As two or three boarding houses at which the mill workers lived were located on that side, it is evident that this is the reason for the drop.

The Johnsons are numerically the strongest in the city, there being 65 of that name. The Olsons and Olsens come next, there being 45 of them, these being closely followed by the Andersons with 43. The Larsons muster 22 names, but there are only six Smiths and one Jones.

There is every indication that Mr. Ley has been at much pains to get the record as near perfect as possible. All the names were checked over by him personally, both at the residence address and at the place of business or occupation. The book itself is neatly printed and well bound and the rate at which the first copies were disposed of indicates that it will enjoy a large sale.

A. C. OF ST. PAUL WANT HOCKEY GAME

The St. Paul Athletic club wants the Thief River Falls hockey team, Northwest Champions, to play a series of two games at the Hippodrome building on the state fair grounds January 2 and 3.

The information came over long distance wire today from G. Howard Smith, manager of last years' team, who is now in St. Paul visiting with relatives. St. Paul simply wants to play the champions and were given first choice owing to their creditable showing last winter.

If plans materialize the team will be mustered together at once to make the trip.

WATER IS GOOD, EXPERT REPORT

Samples From Second and Third City Test Wells Are Found Very Satisfactory.

ADVISE TREATMENT PLANT

Because of High Percentage of Iron it Will be Necessary to Install a Treating Plant—No Scale-Forming Element.

Superintendent Leonard Peterson of the water and light department last week received from the state board of health the report on the analysis of the samples sent from this city.

The report covers water taken from five different wells. These are the three drilled for testing purposes by the city, the recently completed well at the Lincoln high school, and the older well of the Thief River Falls Manufacturing company.

As the supply for the city will be taken but from two of these—those numbered one and two in the report—the comment on the others will be of no general interest. The examination was made complete in order to show just what is to be expected should the city wish to drill additional wells at a later date.

High Mineral Content.

H. A. Whittaker, the state chemist making the tests, finds that the samples from both the well at the power house and that on Duluth avenue, have relatively high mineral content but possess no boiler encrusting properties. In this connection Mr. Whittaker says:

"It should be mentioned that while the mineral contents are relatively high in comparison with soft surface waters, yet when compared with underground waters throughout Minnesota the content is moderate. The iron content is relatively high in all but sample 15369 (taken from the first Duluth avenue well), which is undesirable on account of the large amount of encrusting boiler-scaling material present.

Water of Good Quality.

"A practical summary of the results shows that samples 14909, 15345 and 15451, representing water from the present city well and test wells No. 1 and 2, is relatively hard, but free from objectionable boiler scaling properties. These samples show relatively high iron contents which will precipitate on standing and produce turbidity and color in the water, which will be objectional from an aesthetic and commercial point of view.

Advises Acceptance.

"Judging from these analyses, it would appear advisable for the city to accept water of the quality obtained from the present city well and test wells No. 2 and 3, as its mineral constituents are as desirable as can be reasonably expected in the immediate vicinity. The objectionable iron content can be removed by installing an iron removing plant, as previously recommended. If a soft water is desired a combined water softening and iron removal plant can be installed.

"Water of good sanitary quality can be obtained from such a supply provided the wells and treatment plant are properly located, constructed and managed."

CANDY SHOWER FOR TELEPHONE GIRLS

One Hundred Pounds of Choice Sweets Is Their Portion For the Holiday Season.

If the central girl's query of "Number?" has sounded more than usually sweet during the past few days you may lay it to the fact that appreciative patrons remembered the "bunch" on Christmas, their tokens generally taking the shape of candy. Boxes of sweets began arriving early on Christmas morning and when a general survey was taken of the situation it was found that more than 100 pounds of confectionery of the best obtainable kinds had been left at headquarters for the delectation of the operators.

It is pleasing to note that these young women were thus remembered. During 365 days in the year they put up with our testiness, get the blame for mistakes we ourselves make, answer back pleasantly when barked at, furnish information that we should already be in possession of or seek elsewhere, inform us as to the correct time, the location of fires, the outcome and cause of accidents, and about nine hundred other things. The motto under which most of us operate seems to be: "When in doubt, ask central." If she don't know she will drop everything else and find out.

Those who contributed in this manner toward making Christmas more enjoyable at headquarters were: First National bank, First State bank, Thief River Grocery company, Mac's Sweet Shop, W. W. Watson, Winton-Nichols Lumber company, the fire department, Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Froehlich, W. A. Devenny, Mr. and Mrs. Julien Provencher, Mrs. A. M. Arpin, the Woman's club, Halverson Brothers, E. P. Burstad and Claude Lathrop.

SQUATTERS LOSE MUD LAKE SUITS

Occupation of Land Previous to Opening Held by Commissioner to be Trespass.

DECISION VERY IMPORTANT

Outcome in Monson-Newton Case Establishes Status of All Contestants—Previous Settlement in No Manner Advantage.

The parties who were first to locate upon the lands in the Mud lake section after these were thrown open to settlement on April 12, are the bona fide settlers, according to an opinion of the commissioner of the general land office. This affirms the decision of the register and receiver of the land office at Crookston.

Squatters Have No Rights.

Theodore Quale of Thief River Falls, attorney for Alfred Newton, one of those who made filing after the official opening of the lands, is in receipt of a transcript of the decision whereby his client is declared the actual settler on the quarter section described as the south one half of the northeast quarter and lots two and three of section 13, township 156, range 42. After reviewing the evidence, the commissioner holds as follows:

Previous Residence Admitted.

"It is conceded that claimant Monson made settlement on the land in dispute long before the time set for the opening and that at the hour for opening he was on the land occupying a house he had long before erected there.

"Newton entered the land six minutes after nine o'clock a. m. on April 12, 1916, and began his settleemnt at that time.

"Monson and his family had occupied this tract of land since August, 1914. He was a trespasser ab initio, and he continued a trespasser to the day of hearing of this case.

Is Question of Law.

"There is no substantial evidence of fact involved herein. The issue is one of law only, whether the claimant, Monson, who went upon these lands years before they were officially opened to settlement, acquired rights superior to a claimant who began his settlement soon after the official opening of the land to settlement?

"Monson's rights were not superior of other claimants to public land, and if he could, in this way appropriate a tract of these Indian lands without permission or authority to do so, then other claimants could have done the same thing and departmental rules and regulations for the disposal of these lands would have been useless and unnecessary."

After reviewing the legal processes through which the case has passed since action was brought, the land commissioner finds that "the homestead application of Alfred Newton is allowed and that of Ludwig Monson rejected, subject to right of appeal."

Basis of Newton Claim.

The evidence showed that Newton had appeared on the land at a few minutes after nine o'clock on the day of the legal opening and had at once proceeded to locate three of the four corners of the quarter section. He had at that time hauled two tamarack logs onto the property for the purpose of building a house, but because of the fact that the ground was still frozen and also on account of the flood waters which at that time covered the land, he was forced to abandon the work. The testimony further showed that he had since that time visited the land to ascertain the conditions. These actions establish his prior claim in spite of the fact that Monson had been living on the land for years prior to their opening to settlement.

BIG INCREASE IN POSTAL BUSINESS

Office Manages to Keep Things Moving in Fine Order in Spite of Unexpected Rush.

The postal facilities of the entire country were taxed to their utmost during the Christmas season, and the office at Thief River Falls was no exception to the rule. There was an increase in both the outgoing and incoming mail of 40 per cent over a year ago. One of the most noticeable features connected with the work this year was the amount of parcel insurance business done. From December 18th to the 23rd there were insured a total of 1106 parcels as compared with 603 for the corresponding period a year ago. This is an increase of 67 per cent.

All the outgoing mail was dispatched without any delay, and in only one instance was the regular chedule broken in the delivery of incoming mail by the city carriers. This was caused by a late train on the Great Northern on the afternoon of Dec. 24.

Postoffice clerks and carriers disregarded working schedules absolutely and prolonged their hours of labor far beyond the time required of them. They were untiring in their efforts to have every package reach its destination on Christmas day. The horse and sleigh used by this department were kept on the go from early in the morning until it became too dark to see the addresses on the bundles. Postmaster John Morgan was on the job early and late supervising the sending out of the bundles and managing details in such manner that every move was made to count for all it was possibly worth.

From three o'clock in the morning of Christmas day until 12 o'clock at night the work never ceased for a moment, the entire crew, from Mr. Morgan down, labored ceaselessly to keep the decks cleared, and the fact that the increased volume was handled by practically the same crew as was employed last year proves that a high order of efficiency was maintained throughout.

Railroad Pays Assessment.

At the council meeting on Tuesday night a proposition was received from the Soo railway whereby the company offered to pay the city the sum of $400 for the sewer connections at the depots of the company. The matter has been the subject of considerable correspondenc, the point as to whether or not railroads are liable for improvements of this character not having been definitely established.

There are two connections with these depots now, and the council after considering the matter decided to accept the offer with the understanding that the money paid covered only such connections as are already made.

MUNICIPAL TREE A POPULAR FEATURE

The Municipal Christmas tree festival given at the Auditorium Monday afternoon by the Commercial and Woman's clubs will go down in history as the best and merriest Thief River Falls has ever known.

Never in the history of the city have such complete and careful plans been made and carried out successfully for the merriment of the children as on Monday afternoon. Everything went off without a hitch and the work of the committees of the Commercial and Woman's clubs, of which Mrs. T. L. Melgaard was general chairman, is highly gratifying. It is estimated that approximately 1,000 children were in attendance and all were given their full share of the goodies handed out. This number is lacking but 200 from the actual seating capacity of the Auditorium.

Santa On the Job.

The festivities began at three o'clock when the Minnesota State band, under the leadership of Joe Greenfield, rendered "Trinity March," a sacred number appropriate for the occasion. This was followed by an address by Santa Claus and Grandpa Santa. Old St. Nicholas held the attention of the youngsters with a magnet-like power and not one stirred in his seat during the speech. The numbers on the program were announced by Santa. Two numbers were given by the combined choirs of the United, Synod, Zion and Hauges churches. The Camp Fire girls also favored the audience with a song.

Knox Students Perform.

The fourth grade pupils of Knox school were present and gave a short Christmas play, which was rendered at their program in the school a few days previous.

The Woman's club feels deeply indebted to the band, the Camp Fire Girls, choirs and grade children for their kind assistance during the afternoon, which went to help make the festival a success. season.

SLIPPERY PRISONER IS STILL AT LARGE

Alec Welsh is showing a decided disinclination toward being returned to Thief River Falls. Armed with a warrant for the young man's arrest Sheriff LaBree found him at Detroit and was taking him back, when he gave the officer the slip in a rather unusual manner. The sheriff and his querry were on the train coming toward this city. They had arrived in the neighborhood of Brooks when Welsh asked Mr. LaBree for permission to visit the closet, which was given. That is the last seen of the fellow as far as the sheriff is concerned. Becoming suspicious because of his long absence an investigation was started which revealed the fact that Welsh had somehow gotten off the moving train without anyone seeing him. There was the usual number of passengers in the car at the time and how he could have made his escape without being seen is a mystery.

In Charge of Sale.

J. D. Strong of Minneapolis, who will have charge of the gigantic clearing sale to be put on by Loken Bros. next week, has been busy the last few days getting everything ready. Mr. Strong says that the Loken stock is one of the finest he has ever been called upon the clear up and he is astonished at the reductions he has been ordered to make.

Sale begins Tuesday, Jan. 2, at 10 o'clock.

C. W. ACKERMAN RESIGNS OFFICE

President of the City Council Severs All Business Connections and Will Move From City.

F. H. HERRICK IS ELECTED

Predecessor of Mr. Ackerman as Presiding Officer is Unanimously Chosen His Successor at the Meeting Wednesday.

C. W. Ackerman, president of the city council, tendered his resignation as a member of that body at the regular meeting held on Wednesday evening. F. H. Hrrick, former president, was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy.

Contemplated Some Time.

While the action of Mr. Ackerman did not come as a surprise to his fellow members, who had known for some time that he contemplated such a move, the resignation was accepted with expressions of regret and the retiring officer was accorded a rising vote of thanks by those who have been his colleagues on the board during the past year.

Was Valuable Man.

That the other council members had a high regard for the ability, fairness and judgment of Mr. Ackerman is evidenced by the fact that he was chosen president of the board, although this was his first term of service as a member. Events have proven that no mistake was made in this selection, Mr. Ackerman having filled the position to the complete satisfaction of everyone.

The people of the city generally will regret the retirement of Mr. Ackerman at this time. He has taken a very active interest in all of the matters in contemplation for the city in the near future, and the loss of his influence and advice will be felt particularly while these are being carried out.

Herrick Chosen Successor.

F. H. Herrick, secretary of the Thief River Grocery company, was unanimously elected to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Ackerman. Mr. Herrick was formerly a member of the council and its president previous to the time that Mr. Ackerman was elected to that position. At the last election business reasons made it inadvisable for Mr. Herrick to again accept the office, although he could unquestionably have been re-elected without opposition. He is a keen, capable business man who has resided here for many years and understands thoroughly the conditions confronting the city at the present time. The action of the council in selecting him as a member of the board will meet with general approval.

WELSH SINGERS AT AUDITORIUM JAN. 3

World-Famous Male Chorus Will Fill Open Date Here—Unusual Attraction Offered.

What is conceded everywhere to be one of the greatest male choruses in the world will be heard at the Auditorium in Thief River Falls on the evening of Wednesday, Jan. 3. Because of the fact that it is necessary for the troupe to lay over in this city in order to make the best train connections it has been possible to get them to appear in one of their famous choral concerts, under the auspices of the Methodist Brotherhood. This troup of artists has taken the country by storm and is endorsed by the press of every section in which they have been heard. Every New York city daily has spoken in glowing terms of this wonderful chorus, as have those of Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit, Washington and Buffalo.

"The Welsh singers came, sang and conquered. Such choral singing has never been heard before in Albert Lea. The audience washeldspellbound from the very opening notes of the rousing "Soldiers Chorus" to the last strain of their remarkably beautiful Welsh National Anthem. The memory of this concert will linger long in the minds of everyone present as one of the most pleasing musical events in the history of Albert Lea."

Daily Mining Journal, Houghton, Mich., says: "Casting aside all consideration of technique and the classics and everything else approaching the 'high-brow' in music, any lover of 'close harmony' who failed to hear the Royal Gwent Welsh Choir sing 'Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming,' at the Amphidrome last night, missed a June delight, and this was true of every other number on the program. 'The Men of Harleck' and the 'Hallelujah Chorus' was rendered with a tone and volume that would put to blush the usual 'chorus of 300 voices' of the familiar oratorio society."

There are fourteen members in this chorus, and every man is an artist. This is without question the greatest musical treat that will be offered our people for many a day.

Keep Looking Ahead

IN LOOKING BACK over the year that is now coming to a close the people of Thief River Falls and Northwestern Minnesota have every reason to feel satisfied. The successes and failures of the past twelve months are now history, however, and while interesting to look at, are nowhere near so important to us as are the things held in store by the future.

The prosperity of the city will depend very largely upon the development of the farming section surrounding it. Better farming is therefore the first essential, and to this end every energy is now being directed.

In an agricultural region such as Northern Minnesota the products of the soil are the raw materials which must be converted by factories into articles of commerce. To secure establishments of this kind should therefore be the aim of everyone.

Efforts in this direction have already been successful to such an extent that a flax-breaking mill for the manufacture of tow will be located here if there is an indication of sufficient flax being grown to warrant the move. This enterprise will have the effect of placing an excellent price upon the waste product of an already profitable farm crop and is directly in line with the encouragement of better farming. A profitable market for straw will mean that fertilization will be studied and that a paying flax crop will be secured from fields in a regular rotation the same as other crops. This enforced study and consequent stimulus to flax production will be the most substantial profit derived from the location of a tow mill at this point, although the wages paid in manufacture, handling and shipping will constitute considerable items.

A canning factory is also a possibility. The location of such a plant in Thief River Falls would mean that the farmers of the neighborhood would be encouraged to follow the department of agriculture most needing encouragement in this section—the diversification of crops. Vegetables and small fruits can be grown here of a superior quality and in quantities greater than any other place in this country. Heretofore, however, the farmer has not been encouraged to raise more of these products than he could himself consume, because the marketing conditions were unsatisfactory. The one exception to this is the case of potatoes. These are now grown in large quantities and of excellent quality and are proving a most profitable crop. With the location here of a canning factory to take care of all the vegetables and small fruits available a new and unfailing source of revenue would be offered our farmers.

Among the possibilities of the near future is another railroad to tap the wonderfully rich section to the north and east of Thief River Falls. This would mean the rapid settlement of some of the finest undeveloped lands in the United States. These would be tributary to Thief River Falls and this city would be the natural trading, manufacturing and outlet point for a vastly augmented territory.

These things are worth looking foreward to and striving for. They all will mean more and better farmers, which means greater prosperity all around.

The Commercial Club Election

THE COMMERCIAL CLUB is YOUR club, and you should take pride in its welfare and care enough about its future to give it a little of your care and study. The organization is doing a splendid work in calling the attention of people outside of this favored section to the possibilities awaiting them here, and in this you are the beneficiary along with your neighbor.

The annual election of offcers of the club takes place on January twenty-fifth and the nominations on the eleventh. The executive committee has decided to make this election as popular and democratic as possible. A president, two vice presidents, treasurer and five directors are to be chosen, the final candidates to be selected in an elimination contest. Those receiving the highest number of votes in the preliminary balloting will be the candidates at the regular election. In this manner there can be no charge that the selections were engineered by a few men.

Things are running along in pretty good shape and you may wish to have them continue as they are. On the other hand, you may deem it better for the club and consequently for the community that certain changes be made. In either case this is the time to speak up.

Everyone is desirous of getting the best men available as officers of the club. You may have someone in mind of whom no one else has thought. If so, you owe it to the organization to present his name. Do a little boosting for him. Take enough interest in the matter to ask your neighbor what he thinks about the situation. In this manner something sensible and valuable will be evolved.

Just who are chosen as officers of the club is not so important as that you shall have something to do with their selection.

A sensible suggestion at this time is worth more than all the kicking you can do later on.

The New Officials

TWO NEW MEN will enter upon their duties as servants of the people of Pennington county on the first Tuesday in January, and a similar number will leave the county's employ after long and faithful service.

Adolph Eklund, who will assume the duties to which he was elected as clerk of court, has been a resident of the county so long that practically every citizen knows him. He will make a good official in the important post he assumes, being in every way equipped for a position of that kind. That he takes his responsibilities seriously is evidenced by the fact that he has been putting in the past month at neighboring county seats getting a line on how the business of the office is being transacted there. He is affable, obliging and very thorough in all his undertakings and will make of his office a model of efficiency and completeness.

Harry Ives, who has held the office of clerk of court since the organization of the county, leaves it with the consciousness of good and faithful service. The vissitudes of politics decreed that he should be returned to private life, but he goes with the respect and well-wishes of every person in the county. Mr. Ives has not yet decided upon his future course, but all will hope that he will remain a valued citizen of Thief River Falls.

The retirement of Ed Aubol as county commissioner is a distinct loss. Having been the representative on the county board from his district since the time that Pennington was a part of Red Lake county, he was in many matters the most thoroughly posted man on that body. His knowledge of the conditions under which the earlier settlers labored made him their champion and, being one of them himself, knew first-hand what was most necessary in order that things might be bettered. Mr. Aubol stayed on the board until practically all the things for which he has labored were well under way, when he refusel longer to allow his name to be used as a candidate. That his advice and council will continue to be sought, however, is certain. No man can identify himself so thoroughly as has Ed Aubol with any kind of an enterprise and then drop it without his influence continuing to assert itself.

The people of the Fourth commissioner district are fortunate in having a man of such sterling worth as J. S. Roy to take up the work laid down by Mr. Aubol. The new commissioner has been a resident of the county for over twenty years and is one of its most progressive and substantial citizens. He not only possesses an intimate knowledge of the requirements of his own particular district, but is a business-farmer with an outlook broad enough to take in the entire county. Matters of great importance to the people are very likely to come up during the next four years, and to the meritorious among these Mr. Roy may be depended upon to lend every aid within his power.

Get Behind This Move

WHEN A BILL is introduced in the legislature next winter by Senator D. P. O'Neill of this city, having for its purpose the altering of the system by which our councilmen are chosen, it should have behind it the united demand of the people. It can be defeated only through the effort of parties having a mistaken notion that the present plan best serves the interests of the community.

It is very much to be doubted if another city the size of Thief River Falls in the state of Minnesota is operating under such an unwise provision as that of having the terms of all councilmen end at the same time. Under certain conditions this might result in removing from the council every experienced man, leaving unfinished work to be completed by those who know nothing of its progress and but little of its purpose. This would result in costly delay if no more serious consequences followed.

It is argued that the change is unnecessary, inasmuch as there never would be any danger of the people retiring all the old board at one time. Such upheavals, however, have taken place right in this city, and the result was such that the people are not anxious to repeat the experiment.

One of the recommendations of the late charter commission was that the system of election be changed so that councilmen be chosen alternately. This section fell by the wayside along with the balance of that code, but was one of the provisions of which the city stood most in need. It is the plan followed by communities of any size everywhere in this country and the request for permission to so alter the charter as to make it possible here should be backed up stoutly when the time comes for it to be considered by the legislature.

That Peace Suggestion.

THERE must be something peculiar about that note President Wilson sent to the warring nations of Europe. Certain parties in England seemed very much put out upon reading it the first time but have since come to the conclusion that the document may possibly contain some very good advice. Germany, on the other hand, in which country the note at first raised a storm of protest, is taking more kindly to the proposition advanced. Switzerland has already endorsed the stand taken by President Wilson and it is expected that Sweden will do so before the week is out.

Comment on the president's course in this country has been generally favorable. The general feeling seems to be that his action has opened a way for a discussion of peace, and it is certain that a great deal of discussion will precede any actual peace overtures. England was very much peeved at the outset over the way in which the president put all the warring nations in the same boat by asserting that all seemed to be striving for the same end. Sober second thought, however, has brought home to the pugnatious Britisher the fact that Mr. Wilson only reiterated exactly what the different governments have been telling their own people during the past two years. They cannot now very well take offense at this view of the matter without repudiating their own assertions.

There can be no question but that the writing of this note was inspired by a sincere desire on the part of President Wilson to see some move made looking to a cessation of hostilities. He doubtless understood fully just how the suggestion would be received at the different European capitals. Germany's action in requesting that neutrals be permitted to act as messengers in the enterchange of suggestions gave the president his opening, and he took advantage of it. He could no more be influenced by England's attitude in the matter than he could by that of Germany. There is no doubt but that in suggesting that peace negotiations be entered into at this time the president did just what a very large majority of the American people hoped he would do, and that is the main thing so far as he is concerned.

Every person in the city will regret that circumstances have made it necessary for President C. W. Ackerman of the city council to resign as a member of that body, and will feel a particular loss because of the fact that the family will no longer make this city their home. Mr. Ackerman had still one year to serve as a council member and it was hoped that matters would so shape themselves as to make it possible for him to continue. He has become closely identified with all important matters now under way as well as those contemplated for the near future. He was the first man in the present council to raise his voice in favor of an unfailing supply of pure water, and to his efforts it is largely due that this necessary improvement has advanced to its present stage. Mr. Ackerman was a capable councilman and a fearless and impartial presiding officer. His fellow members last evening expressed their deep regret at his leaving, and this will be echoed by the people of the city generally.

We knew all the time it was coming anyway. At least two of the changes provided for in the charter turned down by the people last summer are now subjects for special legislation because these same epople demand them. It will take longer to get them one by one, but we must have them.

7TH GRADE BOYS MAKE 53 SLEDS IN WEEK FOR CHRISTMAS

The 7th grade boys of the Washington and Knox schools are the champion sled makers, for last Friday afternoon the young fellows completed the task of making 53 sleds in a week so that they might have them for Christmas, either for their own use or that they might give them away as a present.

All the boys are under the tutelage of Prof. M. A. Schmitt, instructor at the manual training room of the Lincoln high school, and the result of their work is highly interesting. On Friday, Dec. 15, the job was begun and the fellows worked two hours over-time each evening so that the sleds would be completed before Christmas. Prof. Schmitt had a hard time to make the boys stop work when the six o'clock whistle blew, and it was only through the threat that they would be locked in over night that work ceased.

The finished sled is named "The Speeder." Before beginning work the boys combed the sheds and yards for scrap iron from which the runners were made. The side handles were made from discarded broom sticks, and in every instance the boys have taught to economize, utilize everything and let nothing go to waste..

The Knox boys played the "good fellow" stunt last week when two of their classmates, Norman Nelson and Lyall Coile, were taken ill, which prevented them from finishing their sleds. However, on Friday evening their red coasters were ready as the result of their classmates taking a hand in the building after they had completed their own.

Mr. Schmitt stated that the boys are taking keen interest in their work and that some mighty good carpenters are being developed in that department.

Drawing tables for the mechanical drawing rooms at the high school have also been turned out at the manual training department this year and will be ready for installation at the beginning of the second semester. This work was done by another class.

MOVE MILL IF STRAW IS HERE

Union Fibre Company Plant at Ada Ready to Locate Here if Raw Material Is Available.

SMALL AMOUNT IN SIGHT

Govenment's Request for Straw for Experimental Purposes Has Effect of Cleaning Out Surplus in the Neighborhood.

If there are several hundred tons of flax straw to be found in the neighborhood of Thief River Falls, the Union Fibre company will move the tow mill now located at Ada to this city in the spring. This is the information contained in a letter received a few days ago by Secretary Scott Laird of the Commercial club from A. S. Moore, secretary of the fiber company.

Is Pretty Well Cleared Out.

Mr. Laird in his reply stated that at the present time the supply of the kind of straw desired by tow mills is very low in this section. Ever since the government sent a man here with a view to securing a quantity of this material for experimental purposes, the mills at Grand Forks and Red Lake Falls have been bidding for all in sight, with the result that it has been pretty well cleaned up. The effect of this competition has been to raise the price of the product from $4.50 at the opening of the season to $6.50 per ton at the present time.

Mill Formerly Here.

A mill of this kind was located in Thief River Falls from the spring of 1907 to the fall of 1909, the plant being in charge of A. H. Fasel, at present city clerk. This mill in every way was similar to that now located at Ada, the machinery consisting of a tow breaker, shaker and boiler. According to Mr. Fasel, the price received at that time for the product of the mill was $8.50 per ton, once through the mill. The price paid the farmer for the straw varied from $2.00 to $2.50 per ton. During the first year of operation the mill received in the neighborhood of 800 tons of straw, this amount dropping to between 300 and 400 tons during the last two years.

Depends on Supply.

It is the opinion of Mr. Fasel that the success of such an enterprise will depend not so much upon the supply of raw material available the first year as upon the ability of the section to keep on growing flax. At the present prices flax is one of the very best paying crops even with the straw wasted, and with this bringing between six and seven dollars per ton there is no question but that a vastly increased amount will be planted. The trouble heretofore has been that flax has been used in this section as a first year crop, after which time the land has been used for other grains, hay or potatoes. If the experiments in fertilization now being carried on by the government bureau of plant industry prove successful it will be possible to raise flax in paying quantities through a five-year rotation. By this means the production can be kept up indefinitely and raw material for tow mills will be a staple instead of a commodity that is continually shifting to localities where new lands are being opened.

Supreme Court Grants New Trial in Case of Harold Provencher, Who Acted as Agent.

PRECEDENT ESTABLISHED

The supreme court on Friday handed down a decision, Justices Holt and Hallam dissenting, granting a new trial in the case of the State of Minnesota against Harold Provencher.

This case was one of a dozen or more tried at the last term of the district caurt in which the defendants were charged with illegal liquor selling. G. W. Bell, a detective employed by the authorities for the purpose of securing evidence against blindpiggers, was the complaining witness, asserting that Provencher had sold him a bottle of whiskey. This was admitted by the defendant, who claimed, however, to have been acting as the agent of the detective himself, the latter having furnished the money with which to purchase the whiskey. A jury in district court found the young man guilty.

Question for Jury.

In reversing the decision the higher court holds that the district court erred in holding that defendant was guilty even though he secured the whiskey at the solicitation of another. This, says the opinion, should have been left to the jury to decide. In passing upon this question a majority of the bench says:

"After Repeated Solicitation."

"The evidence was such as amply to justify a finding that the defendant sold the intoxicating liquor to Bell. It was sufficient to sustain the finding that the defendant did not sell to him, but that at his solicitation, and as his agent, and acting in good faith and with money given him for the purpose, he procured the liquor for him. The defendant does not claim that the evidence is sufficient to sustain a finding that he in fact made the sale. We do not understand that the state contends—at least it cannot do so successfully—that the evidence was not such as to justify a finding that the defendant at the solicitation of Bell and with money furnished by him and as his agent and for his use made the purchase. There is testimony, not so improbable but that it made a question for the jury, that it was only after repeated solicitations on the part of the detective that the defendant undertook to go out and get liquor for him if he could. The contention of the state is that conceding all this to to be true the defendant is still criminally liable within the provisions of the local option statute. This was the the charge of the court. By it the court removed from the consideration of the jury the defendant's claim of good faith agency. He was deprived of the right to have the jury pass upon it. But for this the verdict would be sustained. Whatever are our personal views of the truth of the defendant's defense, the validity of it involved a question of fact which a jury is the tribunal to determine.

"There must be a new trial."

First Time Tested.

It is believed that this is the first time in the history of the state that the status of a party acting as agent in the procuring of liquor for another has been determined. The opinion states specifically that the party so acting must be doing so in good faith and not for the purpose of hiding participation in an illegal traffic. Where a question as to intent arises it is a matter for the jury to decide.

Stanton & Rowberg of Thief River Falls, were the attorneys for Provencher.

President Pennington Gets Present.

President Edmund Pennington, of the Soo Line, was among the Minneapolitans, who were successful in getting what they wanted for Christmas as the result of telling the Minneapolis Journal their wants. The following taken from the Journal says: "When Santa Claus visited Edmund Pennington's Christmas tree, the railroad president crowed with joy. The little train of cars he had asked for was there all right. Mrs. Pennington had brought him the desired rolling stock and coiled it carefully at the foot of the big tree.

On Sunday at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, at the home of the bride's parents, occurred the marriage of Miss Mamie Finberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. Finberg, to Irving Quist. Rev. Albin A. Larson read the service. Melvin Finberg, brother of the bride, and Miss Clarice, sister of the bride, acted as witnesses, while only members of the family were present at the ceremony. Following the wedding the couple left for their home in this city at 815 Main avenue north, where the groom had everything provided ready to gotohousekeeping. Wants Present Law Retained.

Rhoda, Minn., Dec. 22, 1916.

Editor Times:

We have just recently noticed that some of our local newspapers are getting busy for a "line-up" to start a move to try and do away with our present non-partisan law, under the pretense that the non-partisan law as it now stands is a detriment to constructive legislation, etc. Just think of it. The idea that a man can't vote "intelligently" as a representative or a senator or a congressman unless he is "hide-bound" to one or the other of the old political parties. Sounds ridiculous. What is there to hinder a man from carrying out the wishes of his constituents when each and every member of the body they represent stands free to exercise his franchise in accordance with the wishes of their electors in the making of laws? Nothing whatsoever. In this way, and in no other way, will we ever be able to get just and equitable laws passed. What we want is more 'freedom' for our law-making bodies. Let our representatives become real servants of the people—let them get from under the old yoke of partyism and we will soon have laws for the people and by the people.

There is no argument in the notion that the "reins of power" must be held in the hands of some of the old machine guns in order to get the desired needs for the different districts. Not much. We have come to the parting of the ways. What we need is more light and less bossism. The old saying is that "every dog has its day." So with our good old party gangsters. They have had their day. The recent election returns sounded their death note. Yet out of the old ruins a new order of things will arise. Minnesota is coming back to her own. A new light shall guide the good old ship of state. A new era is about to dawn—new ideas will take the place of the old ones. The will and the wishes of the many (and not the few) are about to be fulfilled. In the distance we can see a government for the the people and by the people. Wonders have already been accomplished but the best is yet to come. Through the workings of the non-partisan law we can reach the goal of our ambition. The handwriting upon the wall is getting plainer every day.

Yours for the non-repeal of the non-partisan law,

W. A. SWANSON.

Ed. Wilcox, timber cruiser and pioneer resident of Thief River Falls, does not worry about the seven inch fall of snow, while the rest of the citizens plow wearily along up to their knees in the "beautiful." Yesterday morning Mr. Wilcox demonstrated with ease that a person can escape the deep snow, when he took his old Indian snow shoes down from the shelf and walked from his residence on North Main avenue to the post office.
